Decks Cleared for Start Of Viet Ceasefire Talks

Full Agreement On Procedure

PARIS (AP)—The four representatives at the new Vietnam peace talks reached agreement today on all procedural matters, and real negotiations will begin early next week, the United States delegation reported.

After a five-hour 15-minute meeting with representatives of the South Vietnamese government, North Vietnam and the Viet Cong guerrillas' South Vietnam National Liberation Front, U.S. Ambassador Cyrus R. Vance told reporers:

"I am happy to report that we have reached full agreement on all procedural questions for the first plenary session which will take place early next week."

The U.S. ambassador gave no immediate details on the procedural format for the peace negotiations. But he said: "I am happy that we are getting down to the serious business of making peace in Vietnam."

The swift disposal of procedural questions means that there will be no more haggling over matters not directly concerned with the achievement of a Vietnam peace.

STARTED FAST

The meeting, which began at 10:30 a.m. in the International Conference Centre, got off to a flying start when North Vietnam at once proposed that the first meeting on matters of substance should begin early next week.

This was just what the Americans had said they wanted.

North Vietnamese spokesman Nguyen Thanh Le said the National Liberation Front had proposed to hold the first plenary session Tuesday.

But, Le said, Vance had declared he must report to Washington. He said Vance promised to get in touch with the other side early next week.

Le said the North Vietnamese would consider that the talks should be referred to as "The Paris Conference on Vietnam." Asked whether other delegations agreed, he said: "This has no importance."

The U.S. and the South Vietnamese government had proposed calling the talks the "Paris meetings."

In the conference hall, Col. Ha Van Lau, deputy chief of the Hanoi delegation, when it came his turn to speak, said: "I propose that the procedural points already agreed upon for this first session be used for all sessions to come."

This meant that procedural matters could be swept aside, representing dramatic progress for the first session of the meeting which had been stalled two months in quarrelling over table shapes, speaking orders and other matters of procedure.

As the meeting began, Vance told the North Vietnamese and front delegations it was the American desire, shared by the Saigon government, to "arrange an early end to the fighting and bloodshed that Vietnam has suffered."

Lau listed four recommendations:

"1. The number of persons from each delegation to participate in the plenary sessions will not exceed 15.

"2. All press, radio and television to be admitted for 15 minutes before the start of the first plenary session.

"3. The plenary session of the conference for substantive discussions will be held early next week in the international conference centre.

"4. In view of the great number of persons, the French government shall be requested to put at our disposal the big hall."

LARGER ROOM READY

A bigger hall is available at the conference centre at the former Hotel Majestic.

But Lau's statement did not discount the prospect of hard bargaining. Lau made clear when he appended to his proposals the statement, "we reject all ideas according to which this conference would be a two-party or a two-sided conference."

Both North Vietnam and the NFL insists that these are four-sided talks, implying independent and equal status for the Front. The Americans and South Vietnamese insist the talks represent two sides in a two-sided war. They say the NLF is a tool of Hanoi.

It was obvious the North Vietnamese had moved faster than the Americans expected. Calling a substantive session next week could entail problems, since the new chief negotiator representing the Nixon administration, Henry Cabot Lodge, may not be able to arrive that early.

After the coffee break the delegates returned to their round conference table, about 15 feet in diameter with two rectangular secretarial tables on opposite sides.

There were no markings, nameplates or flags in the conference room.

The Americans were first on the scene, followed by the North Vietnamese, the NLF and the South Vietnamese.

Vance said he would quickly present "a draft of rules on procedure" for the sessions and added: "I hope these can be adopted rapidly."

THIEU

U.S. to Cut Troops In Vietnam

SAIGON (AP) — President Nguyen Van Thieu announced today some United States combat troops will be withdrawn from South Vietnam this year.

He has directed his military chief of staff to draft a timetable with the U.S. command.

Thieu did not say how many of the 532,500 U.S. troops in the country would be withdrawn, and added "detailed plans will first have to be developed by the military staffs of the two countries before specific timing can be developed."

But sources said the initial withdrawal might affect 20,000 troops and 100,000 might be phased out by the end of the year.

An aide to Gen. Cao Van Vien, chief of South Vietnam's armed forces, said Vien conferred with the U.S. commander in South Vietnam, Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, last week. A spokesman for Abrams said further discussions are scheduled between the two.

Abrams is understood to have reluctantly accepted the fact that some American troops will have to be withdrawn soon, but he is opposed to any reduction until mid-July.

ARMY GOOD ENOUGH?

Abrams believes the South Vietnamese army will not be good enough to fill the gaps until then. He also wants to keep the Viet Cong "on the run," sources said, and would prefer to await developments at the Paris peace talks before paring down U.S. strength.

Thieu's announcement followed a two-hour meeting Friday between Thieu, U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker and Abrams.

Some high-ranking American officials who are critical of current military tactics have reported to Washington that a 30-percent U.S. troops reduction is possible without letting up the pressure on the Viet Cong. But they say troops left in Vietnam would have to be utilized more effectively than at present.

OFFICIAL FIGURES

Latest official figures put the strength of the South Vietnamese armed forces at 800,000 regulars and militiamen.

Thieu said American troops could now be withdrawn "thanks to the growth of the ARVN (Army of the Republic of Vietnam) both in quantity as well as quality." He added that a gradual American withdrawal "will in no way alter the military and security situation in Vietnam."

On the battlefield there were no reports of major sustained fighting.

Thousands Jam Washington For Counter-Inauguration

By PAUL W. VALENTINE

WASHINGTON (WP) — For the first time in America's history, a presidential inauguration — one of the nation's most sacrosanct institutions — is about to be confronted by a large-scale, nationally organized and politically irreverent "counter" presence.

Leaders of the protest contend the three-day program (which begins today with up to 10,000 persons participating) shows how the nation is bitterly divided over the war in Vietnam and the urban crisis at home.

It will be the first major public manifestation of the new left anti-war movement since the Chicago convention last summer and comes after much internal bickering over how it should be played.

POLITICAL DRAMA

A majority decision was reached to make it a political, rather than a physical, drama.

Many of the players will be different. The National Students for a Democratic Society voted to boycott the event. Other hard left radicals have individually decided to sit this one out.

But the National Mobilization Committee to end the war in Vietnam, the loose coalition of pacifist and anti-war groups organizing the counter-inauguration, has attracted several older and more staid organizations into the program.

Though the stress is on moderation and peaceableness, mobilization leaders, who traditionally resist organizational rigidity and discipline, say they cannot be responsible for everyone coming to the counter-inauguration. A few "crazies" may slip through, they said.

BREW TROUBLE

Some local SDS chapters have talked of coming to Washington to brew trouble. Mobilization officials suspect, however, that winter weather and mid-year college exams, which will keep their own numbers down, may have the same effect on the "crazies."

On Sunday at 1 p.m. (EST) demonstrators will rally at their green-and-white striped circus tent at 15th Street and Independence Avenue Southwest, to stage their counter-inaugural parade to the capitol.

PARADE MAKEUP

The parade will be led by an anticipated 50 to 100 military servicemen, some of whom are ignoring restrictions against leaving their installations this weekend. A small black contingent, including possibly the mule train from last summer's poor people's campaign, may be in the entourage.

MOD MUSIC

The counter-inaugural ball —complete with mod music, light shows and guerrilla theatre — will be held in the enormous 300-by-100 foot tent just south of the Washington Monument. In keeping with the reverse values of the counter-inauguration, the best seats will cost $2, the worst $35.

On Monday, the day of the Nixon-Agnew inaugural, demonstrators plan to take up four positions along the parade route. The mobilization purchased 100 tickets, costing $1,000, for bleacher seats at 15th St. and Pennsylvania Ave., and at 11th St. and Pennsylvania Ave.

THREAT AGAINST KENNEDY'S LIFE

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — Police established a patrol around the home of Senator Edward M. (Teddy) Kennedy (Dem.—Mass.) after being informed of a threat on his life, authorities reported today.

A spokesman for the Fairfax County police said "there's a patrol car cruising the general area" when asked whether special precautions were being taken to guard the senator, sole survivor of the four Kennedy brothers. Two were assassinated and Joseph, Jr. was killed in the Second World War.

The police said they were informed Friday by the senators' office of a threat on his life.

Mid-East Talks By Big-4 Urged

By Associated Press

France has called for a Big Four conference aimed at settling the Middle East crisis. But the United States is reported backing a peacemaking plan which would include provisions for direct talks between the Arab states and Israel.

APPOINTMENT of Peter C. Newman as editor in chief of the Toronto Star was announced Friday by Beland Honderich, president of the daily newspaper. Mr. Newman, 39, joined The Star in 1964. He is the author of three books, the most recent Distemper of Our Times, a chronicle of Canadian politics when Lester Pearson was prime minister. Mr. Newman's column will still appear occasionally in The Times.

The Washington Evening Star, in a story following the French announcement Friday, quotes qualified sources as saying State Secretary Dean Rusk outlined a form of two-track negotiations in a note handed to Soviet Charge d'Affaires Yuri N. Tcherniakov.

The Star says Rusk's note proposed talks between the United States and the Soviet Union, and separate talks between Israel and the Arab states under a United Nations "umbrella."

The talks between the two big powers, the newspaper reported, would be to help UN special envoy Gunnar V. Jarring mark out "the perimeters" for detailed Arab-Israeli negotiations. Jarring would mediate the talks between the Arabs and Israelis.

The French proposal, issued at the United Nations and in Paris, suggested that France, the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union meet at the United Nations to discuss ways to end the Middle East dispute.

BELONG TO COUNCIL

The countries are among the five permanent members of the 15-country UN Security Council. The fifth, Nationalist China, is not recognized by the Soviet Union.

The French statement avoided any implication that the Big Four would attempt to impose a settlement, but indicated the aim of the meeting would be to implement the Security Council's November, 1967, Middle East resolution.

The resolution called for Arab recognition of Israel and Israel's withdrawal from Arab territory occupied in the June, 1967, war.

Foreign Minister Abba Eban of Israel said Friday the Soviet Union's latest plan for peace in the Middle East displayed "a low level of thought, politics and expression."

The plan is reported to call for both sides to declare in writing unconditional acceptance of the UN peace formula.

Eban said the proposal was "very ambivalent" in the issue of the Suez Canal and the Tiran Straits.

STUDENTS TRY TO TOSS RECTOR

MADRID (Reuters) — Barcelona University was closed indefinitely today after rebel Spanish students tried to toss the rector out of his office window.

About 60 students invaded the office of the rector, Prof. Manuel Albadalejo, Friday night after a tumultuous mass meeting to protest the arrest of several of their leaders.

The students ransacked the office, draped it with protest banners and a red flag then attacked the rector. He was rescued before being thrown through the window.

Six students were arrested. The latest outburst followed an attempt to set fire to underground lavatories near the political science department.

4th Cosmonaut In Soft Landing

MOSCOW (AP)—Cosmonaut Boris Volynov landed safely today, successfully completing a four-man mission in which the Soviet Union achieved the world's first crew transfer between orbiting spaceships.

Volynov made a soft landing in the Soviet Union aboard his Soyuz 5 spaceship, the official Soviet news agency Tass reported.

"He feels good," Tass said.

His landing came one day after three other cosmonauts made a soft landing in the Soviet Union aboard Soyuz 4, the other spacecraft in the historic mission.

Two of the three—Alexei Yeliseyev and Yevgeny Khrunov—made space walks Thursday from Volynov's Soyuz 5 to join Vladimir Shatalov aboard Soyuz 4 after the spaceships linked up in orbit.

Tass said Volynov landed in an area about 125 miles southwest of the Soviet city of Kustanay at 11 a.m. Moscow time (3 a.m. EST). This would put him in an area a few hundred miles northwest of the space centre at Baikonir, where Soyuz 5 was launched last Wednesday with Volynov, Khrunov and Yeliseyev aboard.

The safe landing of Volynov, 34, "successfully completed" the multi-planned mission which began Tuesday with the launching of Shatalov aboard Soyuz 4, Tass said.

USE SAME TECHNIQUE

Tass said a braking rocket on Volynov's space ship was fired at a pre-determined time and the Soyuz craft descended into the atmosphere. Its descent was further slowed by a parachute system, Tass added, and the spaceship floated down to a soft landing in a pre-determined area.

Apparently using the same landing technique as Soyuz 4 Friday, the Soyuz 5 today separated into two sections during the landing, Tass said. Volynov was aboard the crew capsule, while the working quarters descended separately.

The flight of Soyuz 5 lasted 72 hours 46 minutes. Counting the launching of Soyuz 4 Tuesday, the entire mission lasted 96 hours 21 minutes.

The Soyuz mission has been widely acclaimed as a step toward assembly of permanent space stations or laboratories to which scientists and cosmonauts can be ferried back and forth from earth.

Foreign commentators and observers have also noted the military value of permanent manned earth satellites and their possible use as a base for further flights in space.

In addition to being the world's first crew transfer, the Soviet Union in this mission also achieved the first docking of two manned orbiting spacecraft. The United States pioneered docking techniques years ago with its Gemini craft, but they linked up only with unmanned ships.

Volynov's safe recovery was the third successful use of the rocket and parachute landing sytem in a manned Soyuz mission, following Soyuz 4 Friday and the return of Georgy Beregovoy aboard Soyuz 3 last Oct. 30.

The first manned Soyuz test ended in tragedy when Vladimir Komarov was killed in the crash of Soyuz 1 in April, 1967. The official explanation for the crash was a twisted parachute.

Volynov's landing today came after he completed 48 orbits of earth.

RUSHED to hospital by ambulance when taken ill in his downtown office Friday, Mayor Tom Campbell of Vancouver is believed to be suffering from a bleeding stomach ulcer according to a preliminary diagnosis.

Doctors Disagree In Will Evidence

Medical witnesses in B.C. Supreme Court Friday said there was no evidence to prove that Victoria millionaire Allan Douglas Ford suffered from delusion.

Dr. Joseph C. Thomas, a specialist in neurology and psychiatry, said Mr. Ford may have suffered from progressive senility, but there was not enough evidence to prove he was a victim of cerebral arteriosclerosis causing loss of memory.

Dr. Thomas was referring to allegations by John Douglas Ford of Melbourne, Australia, that his father was of unsound mind and suffering from delusions when he made a second will in 1958. (He died in 1967 at the age of 94).

The will left $50,000 to Mr. Ford Jr. and most of the remainder of the $1,152,792 estate to Victoria charities.

Mr. Ford has contested the 1958 will, asking that an earlier will, made in 1933, be recognized. Under the 1933 will, Mr. Ford would receive all of the estate with the exception of bequests to charity totalling $350,000.

The Royal Trust Company, as executors of the estate, contends that the 1958 will is valid, and called witnesses in rebuttal to allegations that Mr. Ford Sr. was suffering from delusions.

Dr. Charles Simpson, neurologist, said he did not agree with earlier evidence given by Dr. Bonar Buffam that Mr. Ford suffered a series of strokes between 1954 and 1959 which caused him to be "forgetful and confused."

Recent findings, Dr. Simpson said, showed that two strokes suffered by Mr. Ford might have been "temporary episodes which left no residual damage."

Dr. Simpson said there was insufficient evidence for a diagnosis that Mr. Ford was suffering either from cerebral arteriosclerosis or cerebral thrombosis.

During cross-examination of Dr. Simpson, Donald G. Cameron, counsel for Mr. Ford Jr., mentioned a book on neurology by Dr. Walter Alvarez, a syndicated newspaper columnist.

Dr. Simpson said the volume was "out-of-date."

Dr. Robert M. Peet, psychiatrist and neurologist, recalled meeting Dr. Alvarez at the Mayo Clinic in New York. He said he was a specialist in stomach disorders and not a neurologist.

NEXT WEEK

At the conslusion of Friday's hearing, Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton, who is presiding, said he will consult with counsel next week concerning continuation of the trial.

D. M. Gordon, QC, senior counsel for the Royal Trust Company, is sick with flu.

If he is unable to appear next week, Mr. Justice Wootton may call for written argument from counsel.

Fringe Benefits Get School Board Study

Negotiations for fringe benefits not covered in a year-end contract will begin soon between the Greater Victoria school board and representatives of 1,260 teachers.

A three-man arbitration board awarded teachers a 5.8 per cent salary increase for 1969, but ruled several fringe areas outside its terms of reference.

Salary increases across the province this year are about six per cent, one-half of one per cent lower than last year's increases, the B.C. School Trustees Association said Friday.

Victoria teachers received slightly less than they would have from an offer which they turned down early in December.

The school board offered a 5.8 per cent raise, full credit for teaching experience outside B.C. and half-salary education leave for up to six teachers per year.

It was an offer "without prejudice"—which would not form a precedent in subsequent bargaining if rejected.

According to one calculation the total cost to the school board would have been 7.1 per cent.

The offer was turned down on the advice of several members of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association executive. The following arbitration award gave teachers no education leave and only one-half credit for experience outside B.C.

Star Drivers Introducing New Car Code

The Star Drivers' Association—a world-wide Christian motoring organization—will organize a Victoria branch.

The association was formed in England in 1963 by a group of businessmen who wanted to reduce the death toll on the highways. To this end they established a code of Christian behavior for all road users.

The Victoria branch is being formed by the Associated Driving Schools of British Columbia, with the approval of Greater Victoria Council of Churches.

"People should know that a driver's licence is a privilege, not a right," said Ralph Cossey, secretary of the Associated Driving Schools.

"Everyone should join this crusade. The slaughter on our highways is almost legal homicide."

Mr. Cossey said Premier Bennett will be invited to become an honorary member and all Victoria churches will be asked to support the association.

Members of the Star Drivers' Association pledge themselves to a code of driving and are given a special scheme of insurance by Lloyds of London. This includes a discount of 15 per cent on the premium and a No Claim bonus of up to 60 per cent.

Applications for membership may be sent to the Associated Driving Schools of British Columbia, Box 36, General Post Office, Victoria.

Injured Man Wins Claim For Damages

Damages totalling $9,891 were awarded by Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton in B.C. Supreme Court Friday to James Robert Kobierski, 15 Quincy, the victim of a car accident.

Defendant in the action, which was heard last Tuesday, was David Allan Crossman, the driver of a car involved in a fatal accident on the West Saanich Road June 7, 1966.

Killed when the car crashed into a utility pole was John Albert Morgan, 17, son of Walter Morgan, 10364 All Bay Road, Sidney.

Mr. Kobierski, the plaintiff in the action, was a passenger in the back seat of the car. He alleged that Crossman was driving at an excessive speed when the crash occurred.

Mr. Justice Wootton said it was clear that Mr. Kobierski suffered cerebral concussion and a dislocation of two cervical vertebrae and endured much pain.

There was a possibility he would have to undergo further surgery in the cervical area, and a danger that his lower limbs would be affected in later life.

Mr. Justice Wootton pointed out that Mr. Kobierski was 17 and "well and strong" at the time of the accident.

New Garbage Service Reports No Bonanza

Two garbage dumps and one garbage collector report no sudden rush of business in the Langford, Colwood and Metchosin areas.

The area's former garbage collector, A. W. Patenaude, discontinued service (except to Sooke) last Wednesday with pickups running up to a month late.

Gregg's Floor and Window Cleaners announced Friday it has put one truck on the road and is fixing up another to start permanent collections.

"We got lots of response but there was not an over-all bang-go," Gregg's manager Grahame Quackenbush said this morning.

Some people thought they just had to wait for the garbage truck to come down the road.

HAS NO CONTRACT

But Mr. Quackenbush explained today that because the area is unorganized and his company has no contract to pick up garbage, it is primarily up to individuals to phone the company if they want service.

The two garbage dumps on Millstream Road in the Highland District, north of Langford, are continuing to burn garbage. Neither reported any large increase in business.

R. F. Rant, owner of Highland Sanitary Centre, said Oak Bay municipality has stopped using the dump but Esquimalt and Saanich municipalities, the navy and Smithrite Disposal Company are still coming.

Both dumps are expected to close down rather than comply with regulations of the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health banning burning effective Jan. 1.

ONE DUMP LEFT

This will leave only the Hartland Road dump, north of Prospect Lake, which is following the compact-and-bury regulations.

The health board has said the regulations will be enforced but so far has not taken steps to do this.

In Saanich municipality, meanwhile, garbage collections continue behind schedule.

Weekly (instead of fortnightly) service was to have started Jan. 1 under a contract between the municipality and the private collector, L. S. McNutt, but snow and flu prevented this.

After three weeks, some residents report they have had only one or two collections.

Released Prisoner Succumbs

WASHINGTON (AP) — James W. Brigham Jr., one of three United States soldiers freed by the Viet Cong at a battlefied meeting Jan. 1, died in Walter Reed Army Hospital Friday night.

Spec. 4 Brigham, of Ocala, Fla., had been put on the "seriously ill" list at the hospital Wednesday.

While a prisoner of the Communists, the 21-year-old soldier was reported to have been given head surgery.

After being flown to this country following his release by the Viet Cong, Brigham was found to be suffering from a brain abscess.

Additional surgery was given him Jan. 9 and he became unconscious. His mother, Mrs. Mary Brigham, had been with him at the hospital.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Friday's sunshine was short-lived as cloud again spread into most of the province except for northern B.C. and the Kootenays where conditions remained clear and cold. The disturbance which developed Friday morning in the Gulf of Alaska will continue down the coast and into Washington tonight. This has carried snow to most of the coast region overnight which will spread into the southern interior today. Behind this system cloud and some snowflurries will persist along with some clearing late Sunday.

Nixon Has Cautious Approach

By WALTER R. MEARS

NEW YORK (AP)—For Richard M. Nixon, 12 weeks of methodical, calm preparation come to an end and four years of power begin at noon Monday.

The day of transition, from the triumph of election to the responsibilities of inauguration, have been typical of Nixon's latter-day style: Orderly, always cautious, frequently silent.

There have been few missteps; generally the tone at Nixon headquarters, in the ornate, expensive Hotel Pierre, has been one of quiet, sometimes bland, competence.

Seldom has there been even a hint of drama.

Nixon associate report the period between presidencies has been marked by full co-operation with the outgoing political adversary.

And when citizen Nixon raised his champagne glass in a final, pre-inaugural toast to the president of the United States, it was with words of praise for Lyndon B. Johnson as a man who has worked as hard at his job as any who ever held the White House.

POINTS OF FRICTION

There have been points of friction: For example, Nixon's early report that the administration would clear with him any long-term foreign policy commitments prior to inauguration day.

Johnson quickly declared that he, and no one else, would be in charge of U.S. policy until he left office. And Nixon immediately relayed an assurance that he wasn't trying to be co-president.

In another instance, Johnson appears to have used his budget-making authority to press Nixon into an endorsement of renewal of the 10-per-cent income surtax. Nixon reluctantly announced support of its continuation, apparently after the administration made clear that the alternative was a budget with spending reductions that the new White House team would find troublesome.

As president-elect, Nixon avoided anything that would seem an attempt to propel himself past Johnson and into the role of national spokesman prior to his inauguration.

He decided at the outset, for example, that there would be no general news conference until after Jan. 20. Nixon felt Johnson would regard that as an attempt to seize in advance the stage of presidential publicity. He remarked privately that Johnson was a bit sensitive on such matters.

Furthermore, Nixon was determined to avoid advance commitments which might promise more, at home or abroad, than he could deliver once in office. He sought to make sure that the new presidency, if short on drama, would pledge only the possible.

MAKES NO PLEDGES

As a result there were no pledges at all, except in the most general terms. And Nixon set down a rule for himself and his appointees: Speak no policy until you take charge.

From the evidence compiled at the Hotel Pierre, Nixon's will be a less personalized presidency than those of Johnson and the late John F. Kennedy.

Nixon has put his emphasis on staff men and staff work.

He assembled a team of what he called generalists; in effect, utilitymen equipped to fill a variety of assignments.

It soon became evident that in the Nixon lineup, one man was foremost among generalists: H. R. (Bob) Haldeman, former Los Angeles advertising man and veteran political ally.

Haldeman's title is assistant to the president, but he has emerged as something of a chief of staff, the job he held during the presidential campaign.

He is, for example, the staff man Nixon contacts about the assignments and reports of other staff men. He was on hand for virtually every key session on the personnel of the new administration.

BARRAGE of tear gas shells is laid down today by Japanese police in an attempt to oust some 300 striking students still holed up in the Yasuda Hall which contains library of the University of Tokyo.

STUDENTS REPEL POLICE RAID

TOKYO (UPI)—Several hundred fanatic students repelled a massive helicopter and ground assault by thousands of riot police for 10 hours today on the bloodied campus of Tokyo University.

At nightfall the police, under government orders to recapture the nation's leading university and rout out the rebels, wearily withdrew but vowed a new attack Sunday.

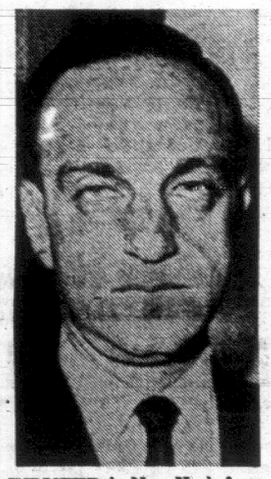
The students, who were holed up in the main administration building, with its nine-storey bell-tower and huge auditorium, fought off police rushes with acid, giant slingshots, firebombs, rocks and staves.

But the struggle was costly. Police managed to drive the rebels from two buildings they had seized, and arrested at least 311, several of them women. Many youths were led away battered and bleeding.

Police said tonight that 79 persons were injured in the day-long riot. They included 63 policemen—13 of whom were burned by sulphuric acid hurled at them in pitch-dark hallways—12 students, two newsmen and two bystanders.

The battle began at dawn, when 8,500 police charged onto the campus, closed by leftwing extremists last July. The police carried metal shields and teargas launchers.

The students, who consider the Japanese Communist Party too moderate, were armed and waiting. Many wore plastic helmets in anticipation of rock barrages that quickly came.



INDICTED in New York for a second time, Roy M. Cohn, former aide to the late Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy, faces new charges stemming from the city's condemnation of a bus line. Cohn, an attorney and financier, was previously charged of fraudulent financial dealings related to the same bus line. (AP Wirephoto.)

Moncton Group Ends Sit-In After Request by Officers

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — Student demonstrators who occupied a building at the University of Moncton since last Saturday left the building at the request of police today.

About 70 students joined hands and walked from the science and administration building in groups of three and four singing "Auld Lang Syne" in French shortly after receiving assurances from police that they would not be charged.

City police and RCMP arrived at the campus this morning at the request of university president M. Allard Savoie and gave the students until 9:15 a.m. to vacate the building.

When the deadline passed, police officials entered the building and were told by student leaders that they would remain and would have to be removed bodily.

Deputy Police Chief Clarence Richard told the students that if they did not leave they would all be charged and this would mean they would have criminal records and could face a maximum penalty of five years in prison.

Following a meeting of student leaders, the demonstrators decided to vacate the building.

The main building on campus was seized by students to get action on more government financial aid for the university. The university's professors association, while not supporting the takeover of the building, agreed with student demands.

Classes have been suspended since last Monday.

President Rebuffed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The regional executive board of the International Woodworkers of America Friday rebuffed its own president by announcing support for the British Columbia Federation of Labor's boycott of the provincial mediation commission.

Support of the federation was announced in a statement released by the board Friday afternoon. The statement also said:

"The board further announced that it disassociates itself from the unauthorized statement of regional president Jack Moore made in this connection."

The federation's policy of boycotting any hearings of the new mediation commission was adopted at its annual convention in Vancouver last November. At that time 87 IWA delegates supported the federation stand.

Last week, Mr. Moore proposed that unions be allowed to appear before the commission but that their membership should decide in a secret ballot wether to accept the commission recommendations.

Court Hears Guilty Pleas

Howard Evan Ettenger, 406 Quebec, was remanded until next Friday for a pre-sentence report after pleading guilty in central court today to shoplifting.

He admitted taking a wallet valued at $2.49 from a downtown store.

Charles Douglas Reader, 3608 Happy Valley Road, pleaded guilty to committing an indecent act, and was remanded until next Friday for a probation officer's and psychiatric reports.

Panthers Killed At Study Session

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two officials of the militant Black Panthers were shot to death Friday as a meeting about a proposed Afro-American studies program was breaking up at the campus of the University of California at Los Angeles.

About three hours later, police arrested 17 persons they said were fellow Panthers or friends of the victims apparently planning revenge. Police said none were charged with the killings.

Most of those arrested were booked on suspicion of illegally possessing weapons after officers seized 14 guns, a home-made bomb and hundreds of rounds of ammunition. The arsenal was found, police said, around one victim's home in the Watts area, about 20 miles south of UCLA.

Police said they were investigating an apparent rivalry between the Panthers and another group which they did not identify.

Police said they questioned 12 persons who heard the shots and witnessed the confusion that followed. After the shooting, four persons were seen running from the building where the meeting was held but it could not be determined whether they were the killers or frightened spectators, the police said.

One person jumped to the ground through a closed first-floor window.

The dead were identified as John Jerome Huggins, 23, an area captain of the Panthers, and Al Carter, 26, deputy minister of defence. Both were UCLA students.

About 150 Negro students had attended the meeting during which qualifications were discussed for a new director for an Afro-American studies centre.

Police Lieut. Robert Madlock said Huggins was shot once in the back and Carter, in the chest.

Madlock described the 12 persons questioned as co-operative but said none reported seeing the shootings.

EX-PREMIER ATTACKS RUMOR

ROME (AP) — Former premier Aldo Moro unleashed a scorching attack today on Premier Mariano Rumor and Deputy Flaviano Piccoli, Rumor's candidate as secretary-general of their Christian Democrat party.

The denunciation plunged the Roman Catholic Church-backed party — Italy's largest — deeper into crisis. The development could have repercussions on the future of Italy's centre-left coalition led by the Christian Democrats.

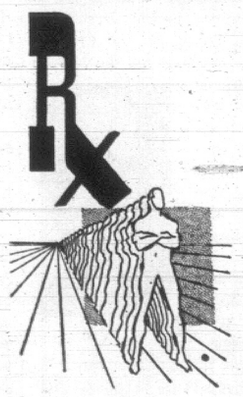
We've Told You,
You Are a Miracle!
You're Really a Multi-Miracle
—Some 60,000 Billion of Them



AN ADULT human being is composed of about that many cells. Some 60,000 BILLION! Pause and think of that for a moment.

And each human cell is to all effect — an actual miracle. A miracle of micro-miniaturization — a miracle of complex qualities and parts. A miracle of some or all of such things as genes and chromosomes, mytochondria, ribosomes, ER, et cetera.

When you consider with what "cunning" a human heart or brain, or kidney, or eye — is designed, and how each of these, and all our glands and organs are differentiated radically — and that all grew out of an original single cell in which was resident the detailed plan for the precise human being that cell ancestored—well, all other things on earth and in space seem a little less wonderful.

The detailed plan for a human being within one original cell (which is an invisible speck to the human eye) is in a chain of specifications a yard long, and contains some 6 billion steps. Is this single cell incredible? Of course it is. Man's body is incredible—with its 60,000 billion cells.

The study of cells and their structures have taught scientists and doctors a great deal of what we know about illnesses, diseases, and the drugs that can relieve or cure them.

When we compound prescriptions here, we are sensitive to their importance to you. Trust us with your prescriptions. We will, in every way continue to try to deserve your confidence.

Still Waiting

THE SWITCH OF EMPHASIS from health department to B.C. Pollution Control Board within the provincial cabinet has left the whole question of pollution control in a confused state. The government should waste no time in publicizing its intentions with regard to control standards, for not only is this a matter of high public priority, it is also a matter on which large-scale municipal sewerage programs now await some indication of applicable regulations.

Saanich, for instance, is prepared to go ahead with new sewerage plans which will open up sizable areas to subdivision and building, but little can be done until the significance of Mr. Loffmark's declining influence and Mr. Williston's reaffirmed authority becomes clear.

As health minister, Mr. Loffmark was about to publicize standards of permissible pollution levels which would govern municipal and industrial practice, and he quoted legislative authority to back his contention that no project which involved added pollution of the sea could proceed without a permit from his office.

The Pollution Control Board has standards of its own, but Mr. Loffmark's promised to be somewhat more stringent, and this prospect was welcomed by many sections of the public as a recognition of the serious extent of pollution in our environment today. Air, water and land are increasingly being contaminated by substances which in many cases are harmful to human, animal and plant life. Clearly a firm stand must be made, and Mr. Loffmark appeared ready to make one. Now, apparently, he has suffered a political reverse.

While clarification is awaited, it is noteworthy that Central Saanich appears determined to proceed with the sewage treatment plant it announced some months ago. A large-scale sewerage and treatment system is also being recommended in Greater Vancouver. The $80-million plan, spread over six years, would involve ten municipalities within the Greater Vancouver Sewerage and Drainage District and five others adjacent to it.

The Pollution Control Board is on record with a ban on untreated sewage in lower mainland waters to become effective at the beginning of 1975. But application of similar restrictions in the Greater Victoria area is still not clear, nor the level of standards which might apply. The whole situation is unsatisfactory. Too many important projects are being held in abeyance while the government settles internal conflicts. The public has a right to know to what extent the government intends to protect the environment not only for the present but as part of a cohesive, long-range plan.

A Normal Development

THE PROPOSAL THAT CANADA should exchange a representative of ambassadorial rank with the Vatican is a logical one and only governmental fears of excessive protest from anti-Catholic sources within this country prevented its implementation years ago. Almost every country of note retains an ambassador in the Vatican, not only because it is a normal procedure thus to recognize a sovereign entity, but also because the Vatican, through its many associations in all parts of the world, is an excellent source of information on international affairs.

The Vatican for many years has maintained a representative in Ottawa under the title of apostolic delegate. Exchange of representatives on the ambassadorial level would in effect mean little more than the promotion of this official to the title of pro nuncio. Canadians who fear an undue influence of the Vatican on Ottawa policies by reason of an ambassador's presence must rate our sovereignty at a precariously low point and our national viability at a very shaky stage of development.

This is an age of ecumenicalism in which religious differences are being played down as an important factor in world affairs. There is no good reason why a normal diplomatic exchange should not be carried out — and a similar one with equally non-Protestant Peking when the situation permits.

The Rising Costs of Rescue

OAK BAY MARINA MANAGER Bob Wright is familiar with the tradition of the sea which requires a mariner or a boatman to go to the assistance of a craft in distress. This is a practical concept if only because the rescuer may someday require help himself. But Mr. Wright has been called upon time and again to provide rescue services. The problem confronting him now is more than his personal concern. It is a matter of protection for hundreds of people, many inexperienced, who are turning to the water for recreation. And it is an issue that will impose itself on others in his position.

Mr. Wright has a professional interest in boating safety and in rendering aid. He is justified, however, as a marina manager, in saying that there are limits to what he should be expected to do without recompense. Hence his announcement that shortly, when he acquires a boat specially adapted to rescue work, his services will be available on a fee basis.

Last year the House of Commons was told that the mushrooming growth of pleasure boating on this coast necessitated allocation of more funds for air-sea rescue. This constitutes recognition of the problem at the official level. But valuable as air-sea rescue is, it can seldom give immediate, on-the-spot help similar to that provided by competent boatmen in a particular locality.

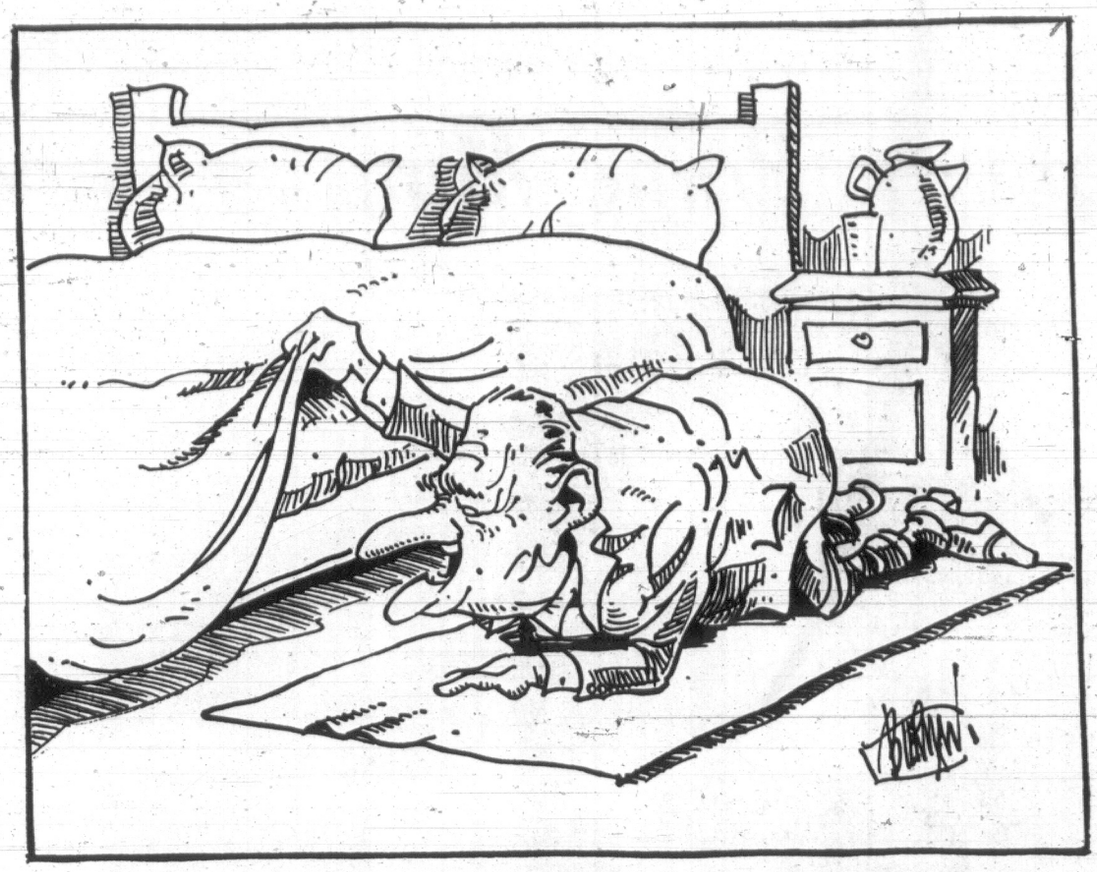
Hence the usefulness of people like Mr. Wright. If he and others like him are to continue to be available in emergencies on more than a casual basis then some form of compensation should be worked out for them. Perhaps a solution may be found by instituting a minimum service charge payable, if the rescued person is unable, by the municipality whose police seek the assistance of a boatman, in the manner of a garage computing a bill for towing and other work.

What Do You Know?

IN THIS DAY WHEN NORTH American education is overwhelmed by programs called "innovative," "enriching" and "compensatory," among other adjectives, it comes as something of a surprise to find the United States on the eve of an assessment to determine how much children are actually learning.

Yet this is the purpose of a nation-wide project to be initiated this spring. In the first three-year cycle of the investigation, say the authorities, efforts will be concentrated on measuring and testing children in 10 subject areas.

Well, what do you know?



"... Face it ... Dick ... Spiro ... you were elected fair and square ... now you MUST follow through ..."

FROM CALGARY — By JAMES H. GRAY

Prairie Farming Is Not the Easy Way Out

THE penchant of prairie governments for operating in regional vacuums has come to the fore again with the announcement that Saskatchewan is going to try to "farmerize" the Indians on two reserves northwest of Prince Albert. It is going to set up "economically sound farm units" for the Indians and organize a joint council to brain-trust everything to see that the Indians take full advantage of all available government assistance. The province will supply all the farm machinery necessary and ARDA will kick in $50 an acre for land clearing, breaking and root picking.

Gray

This surely is the most grandiose scheme yet devised to put the reserve Indians to work. It is being launched in ignorance, seemingly, of the unhappy results in Alberta of attempts to "farmerize" the Indians. Perhaps the financial comprehensiveness of the Saskatchewan scheme will help it succeed where Alberta attempts failed.

Earlier Experiment

One of the largest and most imaginative of these schemes was undertaken 20 years ago on the Blood Indian Reserve west of Lethbridge. A group of agricultural scientists at the Lethbridge Experimental Farm joined local business men in a deal to lease 10,000 acres of Blood land for a wheat growing project.

The idea was to teach the young Indians to farm so that when the lease expired they could take over and operate the huge wheat farm. The white men provided the equipment and know-how and the intention was for the Indians to do the work for regular farm wages.

On the surface it looked like a near perfect scheme. The promoters would make money from the bumper crops from the virgin land. The Indians would earn wages and learn to farm as they earned. There was reason for optimism, moreover, because the Indians were already doing well raising hay and some were keeping some livestock.

But haying came naturally to the gregarious Indians. They could work together at it, and togetherness is a hallmark of the western Indians. Haying, moreover, was something they could do at their own pace.

Turned Off

Most of the operations of a wheat farm are loner jobs. Aside from long-distance running, there is nothing as lonely as driving a farm tractor, swather, weed sprayer or combine. The Bloods turned themselves off this project to such an extent that the lease holders had to hire white men in Lethbridge to do most of the work. That is how, in the main, things are still managed on this operation.

A prime objective of the Saskatchewan project is to get the Indians into livestock. Here too the Alberta experience has been less than excitingly successful. A strong effort has been made to get the Stoney tribe west of Calgary to sell off their herds of useless horses and get into cattle. Headway is distressingly slow.

It is axiomatic in prairie cattle production that a cow-calf operation must raise its own feed. The Stoneys broke some of their land and planted it to tame hay. But the weeds were allowed to take over and a very short crop was cut. And when it was baled the bales were allowed to lie around in the fields for weeks.

Livestock, of course, requires a great deal of looking after during prairie winters. Taking care of livestock has been something which the reserve Indians have never shown much talent for or interest in. Not even a highly subsidized government-Indian cattle scheme can succeed without personal attention to the animals.

Two Strikes on It

All this does not mean that the Saskatchewan scheme is doomed to failure or not worth trying. It does mean that it has two strikes on it before it starts. For one thing, organizing into "economically sound farm units" has been difficult for third generation farmers, never mind inexperienced Indians. Indeed, no one has yet defined what such a unit is. One farmer can get rich on a spread that will bankrupt his neighbor.

And if farming was something anybody could learn in a few easy lessons there would be no need for the armies of researchers and extension workers who now are on government payrolls. That these agencies exist testifies to the fact that success in farming is as difficult to achieve as in any other occupation.

Despite all this and more, there seems to be a consensus in the west that if Indians could be turned into farmers the reserves would be a success and the Indian problem would disappear. Nobody suggests however that a similar solution could be achieved by turning Indians into doctors, dentists, engineers or computer operators, some of which would be a lot easier to learn.

FROM MAYAGUEZ, PUERTO RICO — By WILLIAM R. FRYE

Nixon Challenge—To Revive Foreign Aid

THE greatest challenge, and the greatest opportunity, facing President-elect Richard M. Nixon, in the eyes of many foreign observers, is not the Middle East or Vietnam or Soviet-American relations. It is the need to recover lost momentum in the area of foreign aid. The extent to which development assistance (as they call it) dominates the mental horizons of millions of people is a phenomenon little appreciated in the richer parts of the world. To poor countries, there is no preoccupation that remotely approaches it in importance and urgency.

Frye

I have just had this fact brought home to me, once again, here at an inter-American "Water for Peace" conference at the Mayaguez Hilton hotel, a pleasant country-club-sized resort on the attractive but little-visited west coast of Puerto Rico.

Of the 35 governmental and private experts from 22 countries and seven international organizations here to study ways of using water more effectively in economic development, eight approached me in the first 24 hours to ask anxiously and earnestly what Nixon would do about foreign aid.

Revamping Urged

They are well aware that in recent weeks two major American study groups have released comprehensive reports, after long inquiry, urging a revamping and revitalization of the foreign-aid program.

But, they ask, will Nixon's heart be in it? Does he understand its importance? If so, can he get it through Congress? Have the American people irrevocably soured on foreign aid?

There are no ready answers. Nixon has not shown his hand; he may not have given the subject much thought. It probably has low priority with him.

The President-elect was exposed, during a UN visit last month, to the highly persuasive and superbly informed commander-in-chief of the UN's war on poverty, Paul G. Hoffman. Nixon came away sounding impressed.

Hoffman is still the grand old man of economic development. Despite all rebuffs for the UN's first "Decade of Development" (1961-1971), he refuses to take a defeatist view.

It took a generation for the idea of conservation to catch on with the American people, he recalls. When first broached by Gifford Pinchot in 1912, it was scorned as nonsense. Two hundred years may be necessary before everyone pitches in to help with development, he says.

Things are moving somewhat faster than that. Ten years ago, when Hoffman first joined the UN's humanitarian "general staff," there was exactly $26.5 million a year to spend on helping two thirds of the world — 2 billion people — lift themselves by their bootstraps.

Now the UN Development Program has a yearly budget of $180 million. This is still peanuts, but it is a lot more than it was.

It is not enough to win the war. Population growth in many of the poorer countries is eating up so much of the increase in gross national product (GNP) that the average net per capita improvement is something like 1.5 per cent — roughly $1.50 a year, the average per capita income in two thirds of the world being $100 a year or less.

But that is not the full story. In 25 of the 44 countries getting the most UN aid, the unadjusted growth rate has been boosted to 5 percent or more, and in two (South Korea and Malawi) it is over 10 per cent. When adjusted to population, economic growth in the 25 countries averaged 3 per cent per capita.

This is not sensational; it is nowhere near good enough. But it represents some progress, and proves that poverty can be licked.

If the birth rate could be kept under reasonable control, the results could be good. The per capita American growth rate is about 5 percent.

Public dissatisfaction with foreign aid, especially in leading donor countries, is a drag on development and a serious challenge to the second Development Decade (1971-1981).

The United States no longer is the world's principal donor country. In proportion to GNP, it ranks seventh.

The American contribution has slipped to 0.7 per cent of the GNP (1967 figures) as against 1.24 per cent for France and 1.01 percent for the Netherlands. Germany, Britain, Belgium and Australia also devote more of their GNP to development aid than the United States does, though in several cases "aid" is broadly defined. The figure for the Soviet Union is roughly 0.1 per cent.

Hoffman Figures

Hoffman figures that in 1967, the gross transfer of funds from rich to poor countries from all sources was between $11 and $12 billion. This included bankable loans and sound private investments from which a profit could reasonably be expected.

When commercial transactions of this kind are excluded, and repayment of principal and interest — the "contra-flow"—is subtracted, the net total of real "aid," given without expectation of something tangible in return, came to about $4 billion, Hoffman estimates.

This compares with $160 billion in defence expenditures, a ratio of 40 to 1.

Roughly 85 per cent of the cost of development has been paid, and must be paid, Hoffman says, by the people of the developing countries themselves The remaining 15 per cent, while relatively small, is indispensable "if we are to compress within 30-40 years the process of development which took the western world 200 years."

Growing recognition that this goal must be reached, he says, is "one of the most important developments in the history of mankind." If so, he is having a great deal to do with making history.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

If you have been able to walk around some of the trails at Francis Park during the cold snap you may have seen many different patterns of ice formations.

Under the heavy overhead canopy of the climax forest the frost has hardly penetrated at all. Here the forest duff seems to have created a small amount of heat so that even some of the cap mushrooms are not touched by the frost.

What few mosses are growing here are bright and green and are not crisp to the touch, though there are many small twigs and branches that have broken off the tops of the trees.

In this part of the forest there is almost no snow on the ground.

Along the trails where it is open there is a different pattern. Here the frost has formed a thin crust of ice on the top of the snow. Also, on the leaves and twigs there is a film of ice that glitters and shines.

The small pockets of water have frozen a milky white, while under the ice are lance-like formations.

Where the rock-outcrops are, again we find different formations. There are tiny icicles hanging and from the cracks you find ice pinnacles. The mosses and ferns are bedraggled and crisp.

Out in the open, where the snow has melted, the ice has made a crust. Here again it differs. Some places are milky, others lance-like and in some places the ice has lifted the ground.

On the little ponds ridges have formed where the snow has drifted, melted and frozen again.

Flying Solo

AFTER ten months in office, Australia's prime minister emerges as a man who keeps everyone guessing, even his colleagues in cabinet. John Gorton has little respect for cabinet tradition. Soon after assuming office he said in a TV interview, "The Prime Minister is not to be chairman of a committee. He should put to cabinet what he believes should be done, and if he believes it strongly enough, then it must be done."

Since then he has often found compromise in cabinet essential; but more often it is his view that has prevailed. Thus there has been increasing concentration of authority in the prime minister and his entourage. As one experienced observer has put it, "You're either with the PM or you're right out of the picture."

Handled Negotiations

Mr. Gorton clearly believes he has responsibility for the administrative acts of all his ministers. He has played a major role in the evolution of foreign policy, hitherto very much the preserve of Minister for External Affairs Paul Hasluck. He handled personally the important negotiations with the British government and the Bank of England that ensured Australia at least some security from the effects of any further devaluation of sterling. He, and not the minister responsible, negotiated with suppliers of oil and gasoline marketing arrangements for Australian crude oil. He promulgated the rather rough and ready measures that frustrated attemps by overseas financiers to take over a big Australian insurance company.

Most ministers were not told of his decision not to hazard a general election before Christmas. They learned of it at a brief meeting of government members hurriedly summoned to launch the surprise. Even ministers of cabinet rank were told of Mr. Gorton's decision to increase parliamentary salaries only a matter of hours before the necessary bill was introduced

The prime minister has not spared himself in getting first-hand knowledge of Australia. He has flown many tens of thousands of miles over it, mixing freely with welcoming crowds and making exhaustive inspections of big developmental projects. He has won hosts of admirers by his penchant for informality, his friendliness, his warm sympathy for the man on the land and his genuine interest in all he has seen.

Top Echelon Soured

During his long regime Sir Robert Menzies studiously cultivated good relations with the top echelon of the civil service, recognizing in it the backbone of government. Mr. Gorton soured his relations with the service by unceremoniously transferring the head of the prime minister's department to a new cabinet secretariat and replacing him with Cyrus Hewitt, then chairman of the universities commission

Never have a prime minister's relations with the six state premiers, five of them now belonging to Mr. Gorton's Liberal party, been worse. Sir Henry Bolte of Victoria in a stinging attack on his authoritarian handling of federal-state financial relations declared recently that the federal government's prestige had diminished under Mr. Gorton. He should treat the states as partners, added Sir Henry, not as mendicants going meekly to Canberra for inadequate hand-outs.

Our Enigmatic Prime Minister: Another Side Shows

By PETER C. NEWMAN

OTTAWA — When a man becomes the political leader of a democratic nation the intense public scrutiny he must endure magnifies both his strengths and weaknesses of character so that eventually an image is created which becomes his historical stereotype.

Newman

For Pierre Elliott Trudeau the 14 days he's just spent on his first journey abroad as prime minister of Canada speeded up this process and he stands momentarily revealed as self-willed, cautious, cold, self-protective, mysterious and autocratic.

Last year at this time, just as he was being catapulted into the Liberal leadership race, his behavior was almost exactly the opposite—he was, or seemed to be, relaxed, radical, warm, carefree, open and modest. (Question: "How much do you want to be prime minister, Mr. Trudeau?" Answer: "Oh, not very much.")

At the same time his strength of character, which was revealed then, is still very much in evidence as is his brilliance of intellect, his quickness of wit and his resonance with the future.

In the way he handled himself at the Commonwealth conference session in the Westminster Theatre student teach-in, during his brief visit to Rome, and in his tirade against the press in London on Wednesday, Trudeau demonstrated that he regards the job of being prime minister as something quite separate from his inner sense of self.

It's almost as though he gets up each morning and casts himself in the role of prime minister, putting on the various masks appropriate to the occasion.

Now he is the young tweed-jacketed colonial prime minister fresh from a weekend at Chequers, discreetly charming the British press; now the dashing post-adolescent bachelor swinging into Annabel's with some pretty girl, any pretty girl, at his elbow.

The unorthodox is interesting

Now he's the professorial politician slouching on stage in baggy grey pants telling the young how hard it is to be a rational man and true in the temples of power; now the disdainful disciplinarian who's going to sic the police on the vulgar press; and then the luminous statesman in morning coat, consecrated to world peace after a hushed audience with His Holiness, the Pope.

His attitude to his job is thus fragmented and almost entirely cerebral and these images, all of them, are tricks of a brilliant performer's craft.

He uses power technocratically and seems to believe that he can learn to be the best prime minister that brains alone can buy. This absence of gut feeling or passion in his approach to leadership has been apparent since his election but in London, for the first time, it let him down.

Reputation Diminished

It may, for example, be sound theory for a new prime minister to say little and learn much at his first Commonwealth conference. But surely a man who has been widely hailed as an exciting new kind of politician should feel that he has to contribute more during his debut as an international figure than his mere presence and his external affairs department's platitudes.

In 10 days in London Trudeau's reputation was diminished, not only in the British press (which he handily described as "lousy" although among the papers that criticized him were The Times, The Guardian and The Daily Telegraph, which rank among the best in the world) but in the delegates' lounges as well.

By the conference's end he was being described, as one Pakistani put it, as "the firecracker that never went off." The world stage is too crowded and events move too quickly for Trudeau's off-hand "Don't-call-us, we'll-call-you" attitude toward the Commonwealth to be interpreted as anything but bored disdain.

This tactic of figuring out what the consequence of his actions ought to be and then being incapable of adjusting to what they actually are is what triggered Trudeau's feud with the press.

It's inconceivable that so perceptive a man can't realize that his unorthodox mode of personal behavior makes him interesting to the public (and therefore the press), that at least part of the reason for his selection as Liberal leader and his victory at the polls last June 25 was the curiosity he aroused as a romantic figure devoted to women, cars and clothes.

Now he wants to pretend that these things are entirely peripheral, and that he never deliberately made them elements of his public life.

But what about the campaign buttons trilling "It's spring"? What about the Trudeau bunnies or whatever they were called (and their den mother with the transmitter in her bra)?

What about Trudeau himself? Was he forced to display his torso in bathing trunks and obligingly do backflips into an Oakville swimming pool? Did he have to do a quick bugaloo by the roadside near Montreal while they were repairing his campaign bus?

Was all that kissing inflicted on him? Or, what's more pertinent to the current disagreement: did he really have to spend his first lunch in London, only two hours before his initial meeting with Harold Wilson, with a blonde adventuress who'd been boasting for months that she intended to marry him?

If he really feels suddenly so inverted and shy, then why does he continue to display himself in the kind of situations he pretends to despise? If he displays himself, why is he so shocked when the press reacts and reports his activities?

"Dating" in Canada and in most Western societies is a phenomenon usually confined to the age group from 15 to 25 so when there appears a 49-year-old prime minister who "dates" (and talks constantly about his "young ladies") it's news.

Any politician who uses personal exhibitionism for effect (as Trudeau certainly does—why else, in heaven's name, did he slide down the bannister in full evening dress at Lancaster House?) must be prepared to risk the consequences. Publicity is not a controllable commodity that can be turned off at the whim of its creator.

One of the difficulties in his press feud—and he has some reason to be furious with its excesses—is the well-known fact that he has long harbored a very nearly uncontrollable disdain for most journalists.

His staff treats reporters like snarling dogs to be propitiated with large bones, or if that doesn't work, as it didn't in London, large kicks.

'Virtually Invulnerable'

"You chaps must learn," one of his press secretaries remarked one night at Claridge's Hotel, "that Pierre's public popularity is such that he's virtually invulnerable."

That may be true, and perhaps his invulnerability will survive into the next election campaign and beyond. It's doubtful if in Trudeau's carefully calculated lexicon of political values, the limited success of his first journey abroad distrubs him very much.

He's well aware that his mandate has at least four more years to run, that domestic problems, particularly Ottawa-Quebec relations, must be his first priority, and that there will be other occasions for international initiatives.

But what his journey demonstrated is that he has yet to learn two lessons about power: that the private man must always be secondary to the public man though the electors judge both, and that the public man must have some feelings, not just thoughts, about his job.

As the Swedish writer Jan Myrdal commented recently: "The tension you can feel between clear and translucent intellectuality and primal emotion is fruitful tension. It drives you forward."

'Money With Your Morals' Better Idea Than Crewcuts?

By NICHOLAS VON HOFFMAN

Rich people not only get better food, clothing and shelter than the rest of us—they also get better stuff to read. Compare what the Rev. Billy Graham has to say about student rebellion in a recent Washington Star (10 cents) with Fortune Magazine ($1.50), which has given over its entire January issue to that and allied topics.

A reader whose son has gone off to college and joined the rebellion wrote Mr. Nixon's favorite revivalist for advice.

"Something new is developing on our campuses. A revolution is taking place. It is a known fact that about 5 per cent of the students on our university campuses are anarchists with no interest at all in education. They are there to stir up trouble and to capture the uncommitted student for their cause," answered the Baptist divine who has made something of a reputation for himself as an overly cautious speaker who never lets the generalities outrun the data.

"... They should settle down to the business of improving their intellectual capacities and preparing for the future intelligently. Some want to 'burn down' but they have nothing to replace it with. As for your son, it may be too late to 'get him back,' but if his financial resources were curtailed it might induce him to change his attitude toward study."

Fortune, which chose to research the facts before publishing, comes up with some arresting findings. It commissioned Daniel Yankelovich, Inc., to do a survey in depth of college-educated people ages 18 to 24.

The study finds that three-fifths of these young people are "practical" sorts of whom even the most campy moralists would approve, but the other 40 per cent break sharply in their beliefs with their peers and older society.

The magazine says, "It is hard to find a label for the two-fifths (2,300,000 young people) ... since they are defined, not by any particular beliefs or practices, but mainly by their lack of concern about making money."

The magazine calls this 40 per cent the "forerunners," those who seem to be forming the values and setting the styles of the future. However, 40 per cent is such a large minority that you could almost say the future is now.

If Fortune is correct about these being the forerunners, what they think is worth paying attention to:

- 69 per cent of the forerunners are doves.
- 50 per cent agree with those who've called America a sick society.
- 67 per cent believe draft resistance is justified.
- 66 per cent think that civil disobedience is justified.
- 87 per cent would like to see an increase in the war on poverty.

Fifty-six per cent of the forerunners declared they admired Sen. Edward Kennedy. Twenty per cent felt that way about Che Guevara and 19 per cent said they admired Richard Nixon. Lyndon Johnson edged out Herbert Marcuse 11 to 9, and if you don't know who Marcuse is, you're over 30, and you should ask one of your children.

Fortune, the lush and shiny expositer of producing and consuming capitalism, is concerned about what it has found.

Something Spooky

"There is something a bit spooky, from a business point of view, about some implications that can be found in youth's widespread rejection of middle-class styles—'cheap is in.' Like so much else among the young, that rejection may prove to be transient, but if it persists, and becomes a dominant orientation," the magazine asks, "will these children of affluence grow up to be consumers on quite the economy-moving scale of their parents?" A thought chilling enough to knock 10 points off the Dow Jones average.

To its credit, Fortune keeps its head even when contemplating the possibilities of a non-consuming generation.

Fortune also proposed some important concessions to young people, concessions that many people in the New Left will call ploys for luring unwary youth back into the consumer economy.

Stop Policing Sex

Be that as it may, Fortune suggests older America is going to have to give up policing the sex life of its young and let 'em do what comes naturally. There's no question that dorm and housing rules are background exacerbation of a lot of campus friction.

Inexplicably, the magazine doesn't hint at a need to liberalize the marijuana laws. It seriously underestimates the degree of conflict and resentment engendered by pot suppression, ignoring the screams and pleadings of even conservative youth organizations like the National Student Association.

But at the same time it speaks calmly and somewhat approvingly of according students significant power in the day-to-day operations of the American college and university. You have the feeling these concessions are thought of as the price that must be paid to maintain higher education's current client relationship to big business and big government.

"The fascination that the New Left plainly holds for thousands of college students who should know better is an ominous sign," the editorial declares, but then, instead of calling for repression, the magazine recognizes a certain moral legitimacy in what is bothering young people.

MARCUSE

'Warlike Effort'

It approvingly quotes the suggestion of Irwin Miller, chairman of Cummins Engine, for a truly huge, businesslike, "organized systems approach," a "warlike effort" to conquer domestic problems.

This, says the magazine, would be "a joint business-government effort" and "the kind of venture that would appeal to the moral idealism of those who now believe idealism to be lacking in business."

Fortune's money-with-your-morals approach may get some shots taken at it for being a cynical cut-me-in, but it shows more sensitivity and more flexibility and promise of success than threatening to take kids' allowances away or throwing them into jail and giving them crewcuts.

GORTON'S OPTIONS OPEN FOR AUSTRALIAN POLICY

Manchester Guardian Weekly

"Lucky John," as they call Australia's prime minister, Mr. John Gorton, has been less lucky. Inevitably, perhaps, his first appearance in London as prime minister has been overshadowed by the glamorous presence of Canada's Pierre Trudeau.

Mr. Gorton has now been in power almost exactly one year. He was elected leader of the Liberals after Mr. Harold Holt was drowned in the wild surf of Victoria. It was a hotly contested election, with the junior party in the government coalition, the Country Party, calling many of the shots.

GORTON

And at the end of it Australians found themselves with a prime minister who was an ex-senator, with little parliamentary or cabinet experience, a reputation as a hawk in foreign policy (to judge from what little he said on the subject), and the crumpled face of a wounded fighter pilot—a contemporary of Ian Smith's.

A year later, Mr. Gorton's policies are still much of a mystery. Australia's defence review has been before the cabinet for months and there is no clear picture of what her future stance will be.

But one thing is becoming clear. If Mr. Harold Holt was an uncritical supporter of the United States, and Sir Robert Menzies was of Britain, Mr. Gorton is a pro-Australian Australian.

●

At the height of the Tet offensive in Vietnam, he announced that Australia would not increase her troop commitment there. He is worried about foreign ownership of Australian business and economic resources, and has tried to curb its growth.

He has refused to let Australia back either side in the smouldering dispute between Malaysia and the Philippines over Sabah.

This mood of military retrenchment coincides with the intended British withdrawal from Southeast Asia, and the American shift towards disengagement from Vietnam. Perhaps it is influenced by them.

If the lesson of the British experience is that military commitments can become too costly for a country's economic health, the Americans have learned that the domestic political price of a military intervention on the mainland of Asia can also be too high.

Both lessons may not have been lost on Mr. Gorton. He denied in London that he had any plans for a five-nation defence pact in Southeast Asia.

He has already begun to cast doubts on the "forward defence strategy" evolved by his predecessors. Instead, he seems to favor a policy of "Fortress Australia."

So long as the future of Southeast Asia is uncertain, this may be a wise time for keeping the country aloof and with her future options open.

They Call the Firemen And It Seems to Work

By ART STOTT

The more some of us read about the flames of rebellion and their president-consuming properties in various North American universities, the more we are impressed by what has become almost a procedure in two of our own. At UBC and Uvic, when smouldering unrest threatens to break into conflagration — and presidents depart — the authorities call in the firemen, Deans Walter Gage and Bob Wallace.

Stott

The pair may not put the fire out entirely, but they seem to damp it down sufficiently to avert destruction of the institutions they serve.

I could be biased. I count both men my friends. I'm not alone. They have a capacity for friendship and friendliness which inspires confidence and attracts wide support among younger people and their own contemporaries. That capacity is enhanced by an ability to see more than one side of an issue, to avoid being dogmatic and, at the same time, to escape the weakness of indecision.

These characteristics have apparently appealed, so far, to the students and created for the firemen a reservoir of trust. I wonder, occasionally, how long each can stand the pressures, the hours, the expenditure of energy and the frictions to which they're subjected. Up to now, they've been able to cope.

It becomes tiresome, these days, to read the cliches applied to various figures who are appointed to university leadership. You grow weary of hearing that this one is student-oriented, that one the instrument of big business, another an inherent dictator and so on.

Deans and Acting-Presidents Gage and Wallace don't fit into these rigid stereotypes. From their introduction into university work, both have been deeply involved in students as individuals. Both also happen to be with the institutions to which they owe, or at least give, personal devotion dating back a generation. Both have bone-deep pride in their universities, which nurtured them as students and, in turn, have been nurtured by them. Neither is an empire builder, nor a man seized with high-vaulting ambition which o'erleaps itself. By sentiment — and perhaps some sentimentality — they are tied to UBC and the University of Victoria respectively.

Up to now, they have demonstrated that loyalty begets loyalty. And in a more prosaic way, they have illustrated the value of local knowledge in meeting problems. They don't work miracles. They don't have to and miracles have not been expected from them unless keeping a university running is one of the modern miracles.

These qualities will not inevitably eliminate all possibility of attack against them by what are called activists among the student body. It must be exceedingly difficult, though, to press such attacks against men with their various records — a point illustrated locally when the student body rose to repudiate sharply a vote of censure sought by the activists recently.

Those of us who thought we were the young radicals of Victoria College in the last of the 20s — we talked about Karl Marx without knowing much about him or his theories — remember when young Walter Gage joined the staff to pull the course in mathematics together. His efforts to that end were a complete success. But they were only part of the job he did. Walter was effervescently enthusiastic about college spirit. He brought out a book of college songs, joined young people on Friday nights at Terry's, took in the games, rugby, basketball and occasionally field hockey.

When he left to resume his love affair with the University of British Columbia, Craigdarroch had gained from the imprint he placed upon it. Try to pick flaws in Walter Gage among students of that era and you have a fight on your hands.

Bob Wallace was moving up and through Victoria College before Walter's time. By coincidence both majored in mathematics. And when Bob returned to teach, he had no difficulty in winning both respect and popularity among his students. A man who can turn from higher maths to explain how to make up a box score or a batting average has an advantage over others.

★ ★ ★

As the problems mount elsewhere and spill over to certain phases of life at both UBC and Uvic it might be valuable to have the two acting presidents combine for the compilation of a handbook on how to keep universities running. Such a publication might not carry enough weight for a Ph.D. dissertation, but it could be instructive to a number of men who already hold their tickets.

REHEARSING with a tape recorder recently purchased for the Victoria Conservatory of Music by its women's committee is a quartet of Victoria artists who will be featured in a Musical Art Society concert Sunday at 2:30 p.m. at McPherson Playhouse. The group who will perform a variety of ensemble works, consists of, left to right, Jack Kessler, head of the Conservatory's string department; Robin Wood, principal; Erika Kurth, soprano, and Austin Scott, Victoria Symphony flautist.

His Classical Guitar Only Means of Support

By BERYL PROUDMAN

The demand for qualified guitar teachers far exceeds the supply so Marty Rosenberg who travels with a classical guitar as his only visible means of support need have no fear of lacking employment as long as he is willing to teach.

At 19, Marty has studied for six years with well-known Toronto teachers, Eli Kassner and Tony Braden, has passed his Grade VIII Royal Conservatory of Music examinations and studied theory extensively.

●

Determined to continue to play and study to improve his firmly-based qualifications, Mr. Rosenberg already has much to offer to advanced students who have been without the benefit of a qualified teacher for many frustrating years of self-teaching.

When asked to outline the method by which he teaches, the young guitarist explained that most teachers find themselves developing their own variation of a basic method originated by one of the great masters.

"Someone like Segovia," he explained, "passes his system on to his students who then pass it on to others. Each time the system is transmitted it loses a little of its original form and picks up modifications characteristic of the person passing it on.

Like so many students, Mr. Rosenberg, as a young boy, played around with a guitar, picking out tunes and discovering chords without knowing how to hold the instrument or the do's and don'ts of basic technique.

MARTY ROSENBURG
. . . much to offer

●

Eager to see as much of Europe as he can, Marty Rosenberg is willing to stay in one place only as long as students need him.

"For one student I would stay six months," he says, "but for several I would have to stay for at least a year to give them the benefit of regular lessons."

While he believes that some folk and popular guitar music can be learned in groups, he also thinks that serious classical guitar students need individual tuition, for each has his own problems and moves at his own pace.

Though he realizes that many students could learn almost as much by studying the right books conscientiously, Marty knows that—human nature being what it is—few achieve the best results by teaching themselves.

"They need the discipline of an outside opinion and to measure up to someone who will not let them skip over the difficult parts."

As an experienced "unlearner," he advises anyone who acquires a guitar to take at least a short course of lessons to set them on the right road to future proficiency.

While progress may seem slow when care is taken with details of technique and the correct hand positions, Mr. Rosenberg knows and affirms that without such a grounding a player must soon reach an impasse, a plateau from which he cannot advance without going back and correcting his faulty technique.

Moderately priced Japanese instruments sometimes sound better than guitars which cost four times as much. Only careful selection and a knowledge of what to look for will find the right instrument at the right price.

●

Still unable to conquer nervous tension completely, Marty Rosenberg enjoys playing in a group rather than as a solo performer.

The number of people, particularly young people, who turned out to hear Oscar Ghiglia play his classical guitar last week suggests that there is plenty of interest in the guitar in Victoria, more than enough to keep Marty Rosenberg here for a considerable time.

The Art of Children is Unique

By TED LINDBERG

One of the most indisputable and universal realms of art in the world is that of the drawing, painting and sculpture of children. It is impervious to critical analysis, a natural phenomenon which exists from the time a child has attained certain mental and motor responses, and remains abundant until forms of educational acculturation are implemented.

Lindberg

At this point, a relatively free form of expression is subordinated to what is thought to be the more practical needs of society, and if one day painstakingly reacquire the very innocence and assuredness of purpose he once possessed innately.

●

Even then, there is an essential readaptation to space, a necessary reorientation of the ego to the world, which takes place in adolescence and which makes whatever art the artist may have done as a child of quite different order, character and intention from his work as an adult.

Thus, the art of children is unique, remaining within its own borders, as anthropologically and psychologically stimulating as it is aesthetic. Those who live outside its reach indeed suffer a definite fear of deprivation, and we would all do well to now and again seize the opportunity to see it when an extensive showing is at hand.

Through Feb. 2, the Provincial Museum is exhibiting the fruits of nine years' labor by artist-teacher Robert Aller of Port Alberni, who has taken it upon himself to make available, for Indian children in particular, the stimuli and materials for graphic expression.

The activity has been maintained as primarily recreational, with a de-emphasis on instruction, so that the expression remains as uninhibited and non-commercial as possible. Aller has remained primarily interested in reaching Canadian Indian children in distant areas of British Columbia, Manitoba and Ontario.

●

Some parts of the program were sponsored by the department of Indian Affairs, others by several Indian communities, and a good many parts were volunteered by Mr. Aller himself.

The children involved ranged in age from 2 to 17, with the largest number, among early teen-age participants, working in mixed media, in two and three dimensions.

There was apparently no attempt made to suggest Indian subject matter or designs, though it naturally appears from time to time, especially in the work of the older children.

What is most important is that, however lacking in urban niceties, economic security or language skills, the kids are perfectly adequate when it comes to the visual arts.

●

If anything, and according to Pied Piper Aller, they come to art with a naturalness which is astonishing. In many cases, all he had to do was set up a work area, engage in a bit of dabbling himself, and the diminutive onlookers, gathering rapidly in number, were clamoring for paints, brushes and paper "to do their own thing". From then on, it was with great difficulty that he could manage a day off.

The rest is a long and rewarding history, and much of it reflected in the children's work and a photographic display accompanying the art.

Everywhere is demonstrated the sheer tactile and visual exuberance in the application of paint and formation of image, the very thing acquired so latently by the early modern painters who once thronged to the ethnological museums, suddenly affected by the art of Asia and Africa, marvelling in its freedom and evocative power.

●

With the exhibit at hand, the subject matter is as well refreshingly free of planes, guns, rockets and violence, more concerned with natural surroundings, people, universal symbols like sunbursts and pleasing abstract patterns.

There is really nothing particularly Indian in the quality of these paintings. One is struck mainly with the thought that these are very normal children who have been providetd with a temporary respite from the rigors of their particular lives, who will learn all too soon that they are Indians, and less likely ever to hope for the luxury of art in their lives and careers.

Make an attempt to see this show in the remaining days of this month: enjoy these things for themselves, without comparison or thought of meanings. This is the spirit in which they were created, and ought to be the spirit in which they are observed.

●

I am delighted to correct a statement which I made last week, when alluding to the apparent demise of Pandora's Box Gallery. The gallery still has its financial problems, but was closed, primarily because of the cold temperatures.

After some physical alterations, and a new tack in policy, a three-pronged endeavor: (1) high quality contemporary for those interested in such things; (2) decorator-traditional for better home-makers and gardeners; and (3) a small but highly selective offering of top Canadian masters, Group of Seven sketches and the likes, for well-heeled collectors.

●

The gallery will re-open Feb. 27 with a one-man show of sculpture by Tony Urquhart, to occur simultaneously with the National Gallery's Heart of London exhibition at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, also featuring Urquhart with many others.

Things are looking up, as the new year gets under way: next week starting Jan. 22, the Vancouver Art Gallery, for the second time in its history, will devote its entire capacity to New York 13, western Canada's biggest look at celebrities like Jasper Johns, Donald Judd, Elsworth Kelly, Roy Lichtenstein, Robert Morris, Barnett Newman, Kenneth Noland, Claes Oldenburg, Robert Rauschenberg, James Rosenquist, George Segal, Frank Stella and Andy Warhol.

Start raising your ferry fares, folks, it's still cheaper than a trip to New York.

NOW . . . Jazz Honors 'Bunk'

By RUSSELL FREETHY

Last weekend I dropped down to The Old Forge to hear one of the jazz sessions that are being held in the Ore Room every Sunday night. It was a pleasant way to spend a few hours of the evening, very pleasant indeed.

Freethy

Sunday night, the session will be held in honor of "Bunk" McEwen. He has been around Victoria for a long time and has done a great deal to keep jazz alive in the city.

FINE PIANIST

A fine pianist, Bunk will be sitting in on two or three of the sets with members of the house quintet. I imagine that he will be in his usual fun-loving form and I am looking forward to seeing him again.

Doors open at 8—music at half past.

Maybe it is just as well that Victoria has few name acts visit its dance halls and arenas. It would appear that many cities are not allowing various groups to perform in civic facilities.

Saskatoon has closed its Centennial Auditorium to all groups "of the rock and roll variety" because of continuing vandalism. Of course, this couldn't happen in Victoria, could it???

ACID ACTS OUT

In Phoenix, the directors of the civic coliseum, who in early December declared The Doors "persona non grata," have announced that all "acid" or "underground" acts will be banned and all future performances will be taped, with the exception of circuses and ice shows.

This statement came after the officials laid charges of "lewd and obscene performance" against The Fraternity of Man. All this means is that the group risks being prosecuted if it again enters Arizona.

Next they will be banning the performance of Swan Lake.

Although their music is still as hard-driving as ever, The Doors may lose some of their box-office appeal with Morrison's image change.

He fancies himself a poet and isn't satisfied with singing any more. He would rather recite his works (especially excerpts from Celebration of the Lizard), and the audiences just won't buy it. They have appropriately named him The Ego King.

Morrison is one of the better singer poets of the past decade and people should pay more attention to the words of his songs.

But, when an audience pays to see and hear The Doors perform, they should not be subjected to an indifferent Morrison, who stands on stage and mockingly recites his fantasies.

I don't have very much to say about George Harrison's Wonderwall Music long play on the Beatles' Apple label. I think that's enough.

Speaking loosely of the Beatles, Northern Songs Ltd., in which they have controlling interest, has purchased one of the oldest publishing firms in England.

19TH ENTURY

Lawrence Wright Music has a catalogue of music that dates back to the early 19th century. This move, besides being sound business, allows the Beatles almost free access to a treasure chest of old ideas that they can use for their next album.

Noel Redding, who used to play lead guitar before joining Hendrix as bassist, has waxed an album on his own.

Featured with Redding in this spontaneous session are Mike Ratledge and Robert Wyatt of The Soft Machine, and members of another British group called The Move. According to the grapevine, Stevie Winwood and Chris Wood are also featured on this album.

GOODBYE ALBUM

Polydor has released the Goodbye album of The Cream. It should be in the stores in a week or two.

Wheels of Fire is now available as a single LP, as well as in the two record set.

It was in May of last year that CKLG-FM (99.3) became the first FM station in Canada to program underground material.

Terry David Mulligan was instrumental in getting The Moffatt Broadcasting Corporation to make the change to progressive music, and LG-FM has since maintained a very high standard of programming.

Take a listen to 99.3, and you will find it difficult to listen to the commercial AM stations with all their blab and chatter, and their restricted format.

When will the ordinary citizens of Greater Victoria learn that this city needs a complete centre for the arts, more than it needs a convention complex that will have little value other than being a big, empty eyesore on the side of the Empress?

Come on' speak up for a change—PROTEST, DEMONSTRATE, DO ANYTHING!!!

Africa Topic Of PTA Talk

Lyn Hagglund, third-year education student at the University of Victoria, will give an illustrated talk on Cross Roads Africa at a Willows PTA meeting Tuesday.

The meeting in the school auditorium will start at 8 p.m. and interested persons are welcome.

Miss Hagglund worked last summer at a work camp in Lesotha, formerly Basutoland, in a program dedicated to development of emerging African nations.

Farce Entitled For Pete's Sake

A three-night run, starting next Thursday, is being offered by St. Luke's Players as comedy relief to the dreary month of January.

The play is a three-act farce entitled For Pete's Sake. Its author is Leslie Sands.

A cast well experienced in this type of play is under the direction of Dorothea House.

The players are Betty Jeanpierre, Alec Hutchins, Harry Lukey, Jo Pepper, Dave Shearer, Jack McIlveen, Barbara Bawlf and Helen McWhinney.

Curtain time is 8.15 p.m.

The Writer Who Didn't Live To Polish the Backbiting Truth

MY FATHER'S SON by Frank O'Connor. Macmillan of Canada. $7.50.

Reviewed by Ann Saddlemyer

This pot-pourri of unfinished reminiscences, malicious backbiting, hazy generalizations and hasty judgments contains the fragments of an autobiography of the Irish novelist, short story writer, poet and critic Michael O'Donovan, who wrote under the name of Frank O'Connor.

An earlier volume of autobiography, An Only Child, described his childhood in Cork and his early years to the time of his imprisonment as a revolutionary at the age of 20. O'Connor died in 1966, and now Professor Maurice Sheehy of University College, Dublin, has gathered together the early drafts of further memories and assembled them under four general headings to provide further insight into the raw material of O'Connor's life.

There appears to have been little effort to smooth over the inconsistencies of judgment, eliminate the repetitions, or correct even obvious errors of facts and dates. The result is an unreliable but all the more fascinating account of the mind and imagination of a writer whose adult experiences extend across the years of change in Dublin's artistic and literary circles.

UNTIMELY PROVINCE

It is tempting to contemplate how many indiscretions would have been deleted, how many character sketches further enlivened, how many more enemies deflated, had the experienced writer lived to polish his own work. And how much less would have been revealed about the man himself. As the book now stands it might easily be retitled Son and Fathers.

For the unifying thread throughout is the only child's rejection of his natural father, the shy giant with a penchant for pensions and an untimely thirst, and his subsequent search for an ideal father-figure which attracted him to the scholar Daniel Corkery, the 1916 patriot-doctor Richard Hayes, the angelic anarchist AE, and, finally, the Grand Old poet-dramatist W. B. Yeats himself.

The book ends with the deaths of his real father and the Irish poet, but before then we have been given intriguing glimpses of life both in rural Ireland and the fighting literary world of Dublin.

ALIEN PROVINCE

Part One, Rising in the World, describes O'Connor's early experiences as a librarian for the Carnegie Trust, first as a trainee in Sligo, where the young Corkman was a bewildered observer in an alien province, later as an equally foreign but more sophisticated assistant in Wicklow, finally as a disillusioned librarian in his home town of Cork.

Through the eyes of this young provincial we see the greater provincialism of Ireland—a Redemptorist with his hellfire sermons battling with a scolding mother for control of a middle-aged "boy"; the Gogolesque squabbles of the sub-committee of 110 members who decided the fate of the libraries of the Cork County Council; the rivalry between Cork's priest-controlled Shakespearean Society (with its bowdlerized productions) and O'Connor's own dramatic society (which held its meetings in the women's prison and provided foreign naturalist masterpieces to bewildered audiences).

INTIMATE DETAILS

Parts Two and Three turn our attention to Dublin and O'Connor's gradual involvement in the conflicting worlds and ideals of AE, to whose newspaper he contributed reviews and articles, and Yeats, for whose Abbey Theatre he eventually became a board member.

Here, and in the final section, entitled simply The Death of Yeats, the character sketches become less objective, the self-posturing more vulnerable. We are entertained with intimate details of the early marriage of one of Ireland's most renowned artists (although never does O'Connor balance the tale with equal revelations of his own domestic affairs). Well-known—and still living—Dublin figures are categorized and cast aside, dead enemies revived for further swipings.

Abbey Theatre intrigues are retold with loving though frequently erroneous detail, and the inevitable jockeying for a place in the cold sun of the dying Yeats is sketched with exaggerated precision. In many ways this book is for the initiate who can weave his way round the potholes of anecdotal Dublin. But for the more general reader it remains a significant though fragmentary revelation of one man's search through his many fathers for himself.

No Uncle Louie or Pierre He Was Still the King

THE MACKENZIE KING RECORD, VOLUME II by J. W. Pickersgill, University of Toronto Press, Index. Illustrated. 495 pp. $12.50.

Reviewed by R. H. Roy

The long-awaited second volume of the Mackenzie King record is now available to the public. The published extracts from Prime Minister King's private diary contain some interesting and at times fascinating observations on Canadian politics and public figures, but by far the most revealing personality which emerges from these pages is Mackenzie King himself.

This volume starts in 1944. King is 70 years old and beginning to feel his age. At the same time he keeps up a fairly exhausting pace, fiddles over details, fusses over his prerogatives and shows his anxiety for applause. He had been the leader of the Liberal Party for 25 years, and should anyone wonder how he was able to maintain this position as well as the prime ministership, a reading of his diary will explain a great deal.

In September 1944, Mackenzie King attended the second Quebec Conference where Churchill and Roosevelt met to discuss their mutual problems and plan the strategy which would hasten the defeat of Germany. In some ways the later problems of the Canadian prime minister originated here.

MILD WARNING

When talking to Churchill and others, King got the impression, reinforced by his own wishes, that the war would be over by the end of the year and consequently conscription in Canada would be unnecessary. During this period he was also thinking about elections, and if he could go to the people on the basis of victory without conscription he felt the Liberals would be bound to win.

On Sept. 15, Ralston, the minister of defence, warned him mildly that the fighting was not yet over, and hinted that it might be hard to complete Canada's wartime commitments without more reinforcements. King shrugged off this advice as being pessimistic. It was not until a month later, after Ralston had spent several weeks overseas, that the conscription crisis really came to the fore.

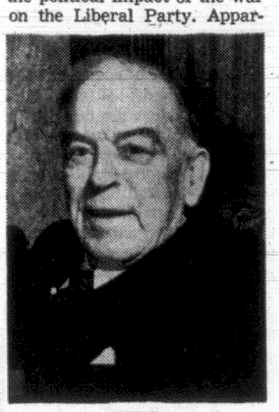
The demand for conscription by Ralston and others caught the prime minister unaware. As he wrote then: "It is tragic that this situation should arise at this time, when the Party's fortunes are steadily rising and the country in a mood to see the war through in a noble way."

WRITHED AND WRIGGLED

For the next several weeks, Mackenzie King, with the shadow of Laurier and 1917 looming ahead of him, writhed and wriggled to avoid having to commit himself to so unsavoury a decision.

The greater part of the volume deals with the conscription issue, and one or two aspects of this political crisis become quite clear from the prime minister's diary. It seems obvious that he had little knowledge of military realities. (There is no mention in his diary, for example, of any of the major battles fought by Canadians in Italy or The Netherlands.

To King the only reality was the political impact of the war on the Liberal Party. Apparently he had no idea of the difficulties being encountered by the battalions at the front forced to fight with companies far below strength.



KING
. . . lonely power

The implications of the added burdens they had to bear were lost on him, possibly because Lt.-Gen. Stuart and other military advisers did not tell him, but probably because he seemed unable or unwilling to believe that the situation could not be rectified by a rearrangement within the Canadian Army overseas itself.

HINTED AT CHAOS

To avoid conscription, King suggested that the size of the units should be lessened and that the Canadian Army be reduced. He also felt that additional NRMA soldiers might be persuaded to "go active" if they were offered better pay. He protested that his advisers had assured him continually that conscription would not be necessary, and he hinted that there would be chaos in Canada if it were imposed.

A week after Ralston's return, General MacNaughton declared publicly that "there was no excuse for the use of compulsion in Canada." The prime minister who by the end of the month felt that the whole issue was a "plot on the part of the defence department to destroy me. . . .", began to see in MacNaughton a potential successor to Ralston and a saviour of the Liberal Party.

The rest is history — but fascinating stuff. Ralston and his followers believed that when King said "Conscription if necessary, but not necessarily conscription," he meant necessary to provide reinforcements. The prime minister, on the other hand, interpreted the phrase as necessary to win the war — which was obviously being won! It was this phrase, so ambiguous and so typical of Mackenzie King, which was crucial to much of the crisis on October, 1944.

RESENTED ROYALTY

Although the conscription crisis is the main theme of much of King's diary, there is much more to interest the reader. The prime minister's rather truculent attitude towards the monarchy seems to be partly a result of the fact that he felt more publicity should be given to his own office. It appears that this is the reason why, even in 1944, he was thinking of MacNaughton, Massey and Vanier as potential governors-general.

Primarily, King's diary is a political document, and although most of it covers the wartime years, the prime minister makes little mention of the armed forces or their accomplishments except for conscription. There is a great deal of comment on his speeches, the reaction of audiences to them, the chances of various Liberals running for election, and the measuring and weighing of the political strength of aspirants for the cabinet.

King, in these pages, seems to have been a lonely man with a social conscience deep in his political soul. He was an excellent leader but never an inspiring one. He had neither the excitement of a Trudeau nor the uncle figure of a St. Laurent.

The greatest goal he could offer was national unity, yet even in Quebec he preferred to speak in English. Despite all his drawbacks, however, King offered the Liberal Party political success — and what more could one ask from the party leader?

Grand Old Empire Collapses in Pout

THE TOY CRUSADERS, by Richard Jones. Macmillan of Canada. 320 pp. $6.25.

Richard Jones' first novel, The Age of Wonder, was notable for the sardonic and bitter way in which all the characters thought and acted. Its over-all tone was, to say the least, hypereccentric.

In his second novel, Mr. Jones has turned this bitchiness to advantage, and the result is entirely successful. He creates a group of British civil servants who demolish each other by their trivial squabbles.

The book is rather slow going at first, but it gradually builds up a matchless portrait of Empire in collapse.

This is not the usual story of the British Raj under threat from the new forces of independence. The Britons who run the Middle East Documentary Centre, a cultural and academic concern in the Levant, destroy themselves by their own petty weaknesses.

It's a sombre picture of the way ambition and bureaucracy can defeat personal idealism, but one can't help feeling that it is also very true.—A.W.J.

Birth of the 'New American'

A TIME OF WAR—A TIME OF PEACE, Senator George McGovern, Vintage, paperback, $1.95.

Reviewed by E. R. Zietlow

When I was an undergraduate at Dakota Wesleyan University in South Dakota back in the early 50s, George McGovern was a fresh Ph.D. from Northwestern, teaching history and political science. I think it was the last year I was there that he took over stewardship of the South Dakota Democratic Party—an unlikely task in a largely Republican state. It is a measure of the man that he was soon elected to the House of Representatives, then became Food for Peace director under John Kennedy, and in 1962 was elected Senator from South Dakota.

In 1968, Senator McGovern became an international figure when he made a late bid for the Democratic nomination for president. He hardly expected the nomination, but presented a positive alternative for delegates unsure of both Humphrey and McCarthy. After the convention, McGovern returned to South Dakota (a state won by Nixon) and successfully campaigned for a second senate term. He is now one of the select group of men in Washington whose opinions, in the ordinary course of events, are considered newsworthy.

RISE FROM OBSCURITY

Senator McGovern's new book, A Time of War—a Time of Peace, whose title is taken from Ecclesiastes, represents the McGovern record during his first term in the senate. The book is significant as an introduction to a man who has risen from obscurity to a position of increasing importance. Happily, the record of this politician is rare in its excellence.

McGovern's wisdom is consistent and unambiguous. From the beginning he has taken stands that were right both from the standpoint of conscience and of history.

On the arms race: "From our own heritage the philosophy of Jefferson and Lincoln speak with a voice that is more effectively heard in Asia, Africa, and Latin America than any number of nuclear explosions or moon shots."

On Vietnam: "I have never regretted my service as a bomber pilot in World War Two when we stopped the madmen Hitler, Mussolini, and Tojo. But I do not believe that Vietnam is that kind of testing ground of freedom and free-world security. It is a confusing civil conflict, with no real certainty as to the issues at stake. I do not want my son or other boys to die in that kind of doubtful struggle."

RECOGNIZE CHINA

On China: "An imaginative policy aimed at drawing China into the family of nations should bear more fruit than a policy designed to isolate, antagonize, and hamper her development."

But for me, finally, the last chapter is the most inspiring; the kind of thing I would like to see exported to neighboring peoples who watch the news —American, or, worse, their own—and believe that the daily life of two hundred million people consists of nothing but riots—police or otherwise—and crime.

In this time of crisis, McGovern is convinced that "a new American is struggling to be born," and "that new American will have, first among his characteristics, the understanding that his capacity for grace—his love and concern for his fellows—is more significant and necessary than an unbridled individualism or an intellect devoid of compassion." Such sentiments do not make very good headlines, but they represent the conviction of a leading Democratic spokesman, re-elected handsomely in the face of a Republican victory.

The Shopkeeper's Big Wave

MY LIVELY LADY by Sir Alec Rose. Clarke Irwin, $7.

Reviewed by Grant McOrmond

It was Joseph Conrad who wrote of the strange hold which the sea has over some men, of the compulsion that drives men to struggle against the odds posed by wind, waves and distances:

"For that too is the wrestling of men with the might of their Creator, in a great isolation from the world, without the amenities and consolations of life, a lonely struggle under a sense of overmatched littleness, for no reward that could be adequate, but for the mere winning of a longitude."

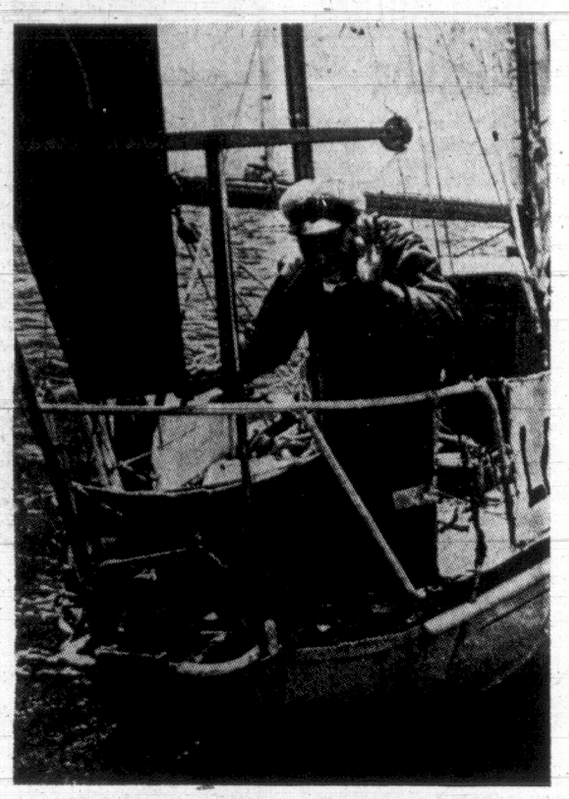
Sir Alec Rose was a man who felt this pull of the sea. In his cruising yacht, Lively Lady, he twice crossed the Atlantic Ocean, and then proceeded to circumnavigate the world, each time without the aid of a crew.

In 1964, Alec Rose entered the second single-handed trans-Atlantic race in his second-hand cutter Lively Lady. The vessel was a sturdy one, having been built in Calcutta of heavy teak by a Mr. Cambridge, an amateur yachting enthusiast.

The heavy construction permitted the yacht to take the tremendous buffeting of the open sea, but it certainly prevented her from being classed as a racer. In spite of the vessel's slowness, and in large measure due to Alec Rose's superb seamanship and the fact that he had the Lively Lady rigged as a yawl, he was able to come in fourth in the trans-Atlantic race of 1964.

Books

Edited by Joan Coldwell



Sir Alec Rose In "Lively Lady"

But for Rose, the ambition of his life was to sail alone around the world, and by 1966 he felt he was ready.

The preparation involved much careful planning and personal sacrifice, for Alec Rose was not a wealthy man. At one time he had been a farm hand working near Edmonton, Alta. Then he had taken up market gardening back in England. At the time he became interested in sailing he was the proprietor of a small shop selling fresh fruit and vegetables.

Unable to Race Chichester

He had no sponsors for his voyage. It was undertaken to satisfy a personal ambition and his assistance came from gifts, advice and help offered by friends and well-wishers.

Originally, he had intended to sail from Portsmouth on Aug. 7, 1966, but a series of accidents forced him to postpone his departure a year. Thus he was unable to make a race of it with Francis Chichester, who set out from Plymouth Aug. 27.

Inevitably, comparisons between Chichester's feat and Rose's voyage are invited, and in a series of appendices the facts and figures concerning the two accomplishments are pinpointed. Implicit throughout the narrative are comparisons that are equally interesting, if not as precise statistically.

For instance, Chichester's Gypsy Moth IV was a racing yacht, specially designed for the voyage of circumnavigation. Chichester had plenty of financial backing and the advice and help of the best professional designers and sailors. Rose's vessel was twenty years old, designed for safety and cruising rather than for speed (by an amateur) and had to be modified and adapted by Rose himself to make the voyage possible.

Gipsy Moth was 54 feet long; Lively Lady was 36. The sketches of the boats found in the books of the two sailors also show the finished perfection of the interior of Gypsy Moth compared to the less efficient arrangement evident in Lively Lady. Chichester made his voyage with only one port of call at Sydney, Australia.

Rose made a planned stop at Melbourne, and was forced to put in at Bluff, New Zealand, for repairs as a result of bad weather. Chichester's voyage lasted August 1966 to May 1967; Rose set sail June 16, 1967, and returned to his home port July 4, 1968.

The Independent Dreamer

Rose, then, was neither the fastest nor the first man to circumnavigate the globe alone in a sailing ship. He had been preceded, in addition to Chichester, Slocum in Spray in 1895, Pidgeon in Islander in 1921, and Gerbault in Firecrest in 1923. Yet while he established no records, his account of the voyage in My Lively Lady is a fascinating one, even for readers who are not particularly interested in sailing.

He attempts to explain the reason for his ambition in terms of his own character. He sees himself as a man at once independent and self-reliant; he is something of an idealist, something of a dreamer. At the same time he loves the challenge presented by the elements, the test of his stamina, strength and judgment.

As he describes the day-to-day activity aboard Lively Lady, one realized that the explanation of his success in the face of tremendous storms and treacherous seas is to be found in his daring willingness to maintain all canvas possible until the lost possible moment, and in his uncanny sense of when the last possible moment has arrived for a change to be made.

My Lively Lady is a fascinating book. Even readers who may at times be confused in the sailor's technical jargon will find the narrative interesting, often gripping. But there is an even rarer quality evident in My Lively Lady. It evolves from the style of the narrative and is founded on the complete artless simplicity with which Sir Alec Rose tells of his dreams and his adventures.

His is the story of a humble man who manages to make his ultimate dream come true. It is the story of a shopkeeper who sailed the seas to fame.

The effect of his adventure is eloquently summed up by his wife in the chapter she contributed to My Lively Lady: "The happiest day of our lives was when Alec arrived, and the most memorable day was when the Queen knighted him. So you see the whole thing as been a fairy story with a happy ending."

Victoria City and District Branch

ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING

The Annual General Meeting of the above-mentioned Branch of The Canadian Red Cross Society will be held in the J. Keith Wilson Memorial Addition to Red Cross House, 1046 Fort Street, Victoria, B.C., on Wednesday, January 29th, 1969, at 8:00 p.m.

BUSINESS :

1. Reading of the minutes of the last General Meeting.
2. Business arising out of minutes of the last meeting.
3. Presentation of Reports for the year 1968.
4. Election of Officers for the year 1969.
5. New business.

All members of the Branch in good standing at the end of the year 1968 (i.e., those who contributed at least one dollar to the funds of the Society during the previous year) are entitled to attend the Annual Meeting and are earnestly requested to be present.

Nominations for the appointment of Officers and Members of the Branch Executive Committee may be made by any member in good standing and must be submitted in writing, duly proposed and seconded and with the consent of the nominee, to the Secretary not less than twenty-four hours before the time set for the meeting.

Stratford Lent Roman Armour For Bastion

Roman armour from Stratford, Ont., will be worn by the high-ranking officers appearing in Bastion's forthcoming production of Caesar and Cleopatra, opening Jan. 24, at McPherson Playhouse.

On loan to Bastion from the Stratford Festival Theatre are leather breastplates and backs, plumed helmets, and fine hand-made leather sandals.

In a switch from the usual procedure, at least one member of the cast is taking steps to fit the armor instead of having the armor fit him.

ON A DIET

Rufio (Bill Hosie) is on a diet in order to fit in comfort into his two sets of armour (one for everyday wear, and one lavish set for special occasions).

Others wearing Stratford armour include Caesar (John Martin), a Centurion (Robert Baird), and Lucius Septimius (Iàn McIntyre).

Overall costume design for Caesar and Cleopatra is by John Heath, who is also in the show in the role of Theodotus, the librarian.

Director is noted West Coast professional actor-director-adjudicator Sam Payne, with associate director Stuart Baker also playing a feature role — Britannus, Caesar's wise and loyal British slave.

LARGE CAST

Playing opposite John Martin is Markyta Mares as Cleopatra, and the large cast also includes Ethel Lloyd Jones, Dick Wood, Wyck Porteous (the young King Ptolemy), Owen Foran (his wily advisor Pothinus), Barry Flatman, Tom Cox, Virginia Sinclair, Suzanne Salmond, Bob Conconi, Kerry Rogers, Tony Dennis, Cam More, Paul Croy, Pamela Stamford, David Hollebone, Stan Hollebone, Bib Garfat, and Erica Peavey.

January 24, 25, 27, 28 and 30 are student performances (8 p.m. curtain). This will be the second in Bastion's Youth Theatre Series, which already has over 1,000 student season ticket holders. Single admission for students is $1.00.

Jan. 31 and Feb. 1 are public performances (8:30 curtain).

HAUGHTY CLEO orders death of a subject in G. B. Shaw's Caesar and Cleopatra, second play in Bastion Theatre's youth series. Cleo is Markyta Mares. At left is Ftatateeta, Ethel Lloyd Jones, the murderous servant. Sam Payne directs performances January 24, 25, 27, 28 and 30 for students (8 p.m. curtain) and January 31-February 1 performances for public (8:30 p.m. curtain) at McPherson Playhouse. Large cast is headed by John Martin, Owen Foran, Stuart Kent, Wyck Porteous and Ian McIntyre. (Ian McKain Photo)

Let's Use Care in Giving

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Anyone who has been reading this column for any length of time would surely conclude that I am in favor of cultural grants-in-aid from public funds.

Johnson

And so I am. With certain important reservations.

An occasional misstep in disbursing grant funds can be made from Canada Council down despite qualified advice, and must be accepted as part of the error quotient in all human affairs.

But everything possible should be done by grant-making bodies to avoid such error. Foundations such as the Koerner go to great lengths to assure themselves that they are warranted in assisting groups and individuals.

They provide themselves with the most expert opinions available.

●

They meticulously research all circumstances behind the briefs and they seldom goof as spectacularly as did the Canada Council with its Vancouver Fool and piano-smashing exhibitionist.

But the less professional grant-making groups and organizations which busy themselves with fund-raising for arts projects too often are misled by allowing themselves to be guided by biased or uninformed opinion.

They are inclined to jump to conclusions based on limited observation and without providing themselves with an objective survey of all factors.

Would anyone suggest that public money should be pumped into a business that was manufacturing a shoddy or mediocre product? No.

Yet civic groups far too often hand out their precious green stuff to paper holes in a leaky cultural craft in the belief that it is worth keeping afloat until some saving miracle occurs.

In 98 per cent of the cases no miracle will occur and the craft should be beached to allow seaway for something better.

●

These comments should not cloud the world-wide-acknowledged fact that all major fine arts organizations sucy as symphonies, ballet companies, art galleries, operas and theatres, but be state subsidized in order to progress and to remain available to the many, rather than become the perquisite of the well-heeled minority.

When, according to every test applied, an organization has consistently served its has equalled or exceeded what community in a manner that might in the circumstances be reasonably expected, striving always to sustain an uncompromising standard, then there is an organization that merits the fullest possible subsidization.

On the other hand, it is throwing good money after bad to attempt to bolster generally poor performance in the belief that an injection of additional funds will automatically raise the standard.

Questions, in such cases, must be asked. And while I am not one who believes that strings should be attached to gifts, I do believe that some watch and ward should be kept if a substantial sum of money is given under such circumstances.

●

A theatre group, for example, cannot explain away erratic standards, bad judgment, and all shoddy work on the basis of poverty alone.

Far be it from me to imply that a theatre or any arts group is not hampered in a major sense by lack of funds.

But artistic skill, discernment and wise selection can, and has demonstrably, maintained an acceptable, even exciting, standard on the slimmest of financial pedestals.

I can recall many instances—ingenuity and imagination creating Chelsea figurines out of scraps from the workroom floor; vivid, imaginative direction that coupled with competent acting made a Saint Joan, sans costumes and scenery, a memorable experience, and dozens of effective renaissance costumes produced out of the simple materials afforded by a miniscule budget.

The public, often castigated (and by me too) for its indifference to challenge and opportunity or its acceptance of the utterly mediocre, is not, over-all, an entirely faulty barometer.

If it—and especially that section of it which should be predeliction be the chief mainstay—consistently turns its back on a product it can be taken as a signal that at least close investigation should be made before grant funds are funnelled toward the producing agency.

●

The question that should always be asked at times like this is all-important: Is the individual charged with artistic direction of whatever the activity happens to be, the right person for the job?

Because if he is not no amount of money is going to effect a change in quality and therefore in value to the community, so long as that person remains in charge.

And neither his say-so, nor the evaluation of any possibly biased person should be the criterion.

Canada has not had a leisured society of any measurable volume until fairly recently, but it is growing now at a tremendous rate and in the near future will be vast.

That, and the restless seeking of young people for a profounder dimension to living, lays greater stress than ever before in our history on the importance of the fine arts and crafts to our civilization.

State and civic subsidization of these things is vital and necessary but care must always be taken that such subsidization does not perpetuate and bolster mediocrity or worse.

Conductor at Rehearsal Behind-the-Scenes Disc

By BERYL PROUDMAN

Karajan in Rehearsal: DGG 643201; The Birth of a Performance, Bruno Walter, ABL 3101, DSL 224.

Of limited interest to any but those who believe that the choral fourth movement of Beethoven's 9th Symphony was a tasteless error on the composer's part is a record which on one side eavesdrops on Karajan's rehearsal of a few sections of the movement, and on the other plays a post-rehearsal performance.

From this recording we learn that when dealing with a German orchestra (the Berlin Philharmonic) Herbert von Karajan, reasonably enough, speaks German. He speaks fast and with excited emphasis.

METICULOUS

We learn too that he is meticulously careful about details of interpretation when preparing to record, but then, any conductor who has reached his eminence would have to be.

He is quiet, calm and assured in his leadership even when questioned by the musicians and he is not above a mild occasional joke.

The fact that some of his speech is inaudible even to German listeners suggests that this was a bona fide, unprepared, uncontrived rehearsal.

"Behind the scenes" recordings of this sort are really only successful when the conductor is so wise or of such legendary genius that everyone strains to hear the gems which drop from his lips in rehearsal.

For myself, I prefer a far older but more expansive recording of Mozart's Symphony No. 36 (Linz), in which the Columbia Symphony Orchestra is directed by Bruno Walter.

IN ENGLISH

This rehearsal is in English which is helpful to non-German-speaking listeners and Walter has far more to say and his character is far more clearly defined than that of Karajan on the other recording.

That the rehearsal is spread over three sides of the two-record issue means that longer snatches of music are recorded, and Mozart survives this sort of treatment with far less damage than does Beethoven.

Bruno Walter, in rehearsing this symphony, associated himself with the players in an invidable bond of "we," and emphasizes this by referring to them as "Gentlemen," "my friends" and sometimes, in the excitement of the moment as "My Dears"; and constantly exhorts them to "come" and to "sing."

Usually when he stops them, he makes a general observation then leans down to an individual player near him and confidentially explains away a difficulty which can be cleared up between the two of them without the embarrassment of a public announcement.

Though he must have conducted this symphony umpteen times before, he still approaches it afresh and occasionally suggests, "Let us try something."

Ever open to suggestion, he begs them to tell him their ideas and discusses rather than dictates upon sectional problems.

Whereas Karajan several times calls out, "No, that is wrong" or words to that effect, Walter is more likely to sigh "I do not like it," or "it does not yet make me happy" and thus, by his personal involvement, he coaxes the utmost out of his musicians.

I'M BIASED

I'm sure I must be biased by the language difficulty presented by the DGG recording, and I know that I am overlooking the extreme age of the Philips' disc which lacks the startling clarity of the newer issue, but one last difference determines my preference for the Bruno Walter rehearsal.

Each conductor sings to demonstrate the effect he is striving to achieve and Walter has a far sweeter, truer singing voice than the brisker Karajan.

AT THE MOVIES

With NORMAN CRIBBENS

THE SPLIT
Adult Entertainment
Odeon Theatre

Violence and sex are so popular these days you wonder how any film gets by without them. Some do, but they seem to be in a minority.

The Split, based on a novel by Richard Stark, has its quota of killings and sluggings and some hot sex besides, but also offers plenty in the way of character interest and story development.

Much of the interest centres around Jim Brown, former football star with the Cleveland Browns, who went to Hollywood two years ago, and Diahann Carroll, a singer turned actress, who has won recognition on TV.

In this case, Jim Brown plays a crook who wants to make one final score before settling down to the respectable life. With the aid of Julie Harris and a gang of top criminals, he plans to rob the Los Angeles Coliseum during a sell-out football game.

The raid goes off without a hitch and the raiders are the richer by some $500,000. It is arranged that the money will be left overnight with Brown's ex-wife (Diahann Carroll), who is still in love with him. She agrees to look after the money until after the split among the gang.

★ ★ ★

Subsequently she is killed in a struggle with her landlord (James Whitmore), who makes off with the loot. Gene Hackman, a detective assigned to the case, connects the murder with the robbery, kills Whitmore and keeps the money.

You can take it from there, with the assurance there are more killings to come.

While I don't care too much for this kind of drama, it must be admitted the theme has been imaginatively handled by Gordon Flemyng—an upcoming film director at 34.

Los Angeles and its environs are effectively glamorized in Metrocolor. There is a taut script by Robert Sabaroff and some weirdly effective music by Quincy Jones.

NEW YORK — "Cities Have No Limits," first of the NBC "White Paper" series, "The Ordeal of the American City," has been made available by the sponsor, the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, to educational television stations without charge. Each station may show it twice in a 60-day period.

VANCOUVER ACTRESS PICKED BY STRATFORD

Canadian actress Angela Wood, daughter of the late Professor Frederick Wood, whose career and name are tied up with the small theatre on the University of British Columbia campus, has been chosen for a feature role by the Stratford National Theatre of Canada.

Miss Wood, Vancouver born and a graduate of London's Royal Academy of Dramatic Art, is to play Queen Gertrude in Hamlet, scheduled to tour Chicago, Ann Arbor and Montreal March 4 to April 13.

Symphony Assisting In Ballet

The National Ballet chamber orchestra which accompanies the Ballet Concert group in its cross-country tour, will be expanded by addition of several key members of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra when it performs here Sunday and Monday.

Elfreda Gleam, violin, George Naylor, viola, Jim Hunter, cello, Jan Menting, flute and Ian Franklin, oboe, are the musicians involved.

Director of the orchestra is George Crum.

'This Is Tom Jones'

The forthcoming ABC weekly variety series with British singing star Tom Jones will be known as "This Is Tom Jones" instead of the originally announced "The Tom Jones Show." Premiere date is Feb. 7, 7:30-8:30 p.m. Sundays.

British Vocal, Piano Adjudicators Head Panel for Music Festival Here

A basic panel of eight adjudicators has been engaged for the 1969 Greater Victoria Music Festival.

Heading the group are the two from Britain who come to the city in the course of adjudicating a cross-Canada chain of music festivals. They are Ronald Smith for the piano and John Churchill, vocal.

A pianist heard frequently on BBC recital hours, as well as via French, Dutch and Swiss networks, Mr. Smith studied under scholarship at the Royal Academy and on the Continent.

He specialized in French music under Marguerite Long in Paris and undertook an intensive course with the Russian master, Pierre Kostanoff.

SOLO RECITALS

In 1951 he won the International Contest for Pianists at Geneva and since then has performed in solo recitals and with prominent orchestras all over Europe.

John Churchill was born in London and has spent most of his musical career there. Trained at the Royal College of Music, following six years of war service, he became one of the youngest professors ever appointed to the teaching staff of the College.

An organist as well as a vocalist, Mr. Churchill became organist of the famous church, St. Martin-in-the-fields in the heart of London, where he was responsible for the organization and training of several choirs.

He also organized a regular series of lunchtime concerts, and monthly broadcast services for the BBC in addition to his regular duties.

Conductor of the Westminster Choral Society and the Croydon Philharmonic Choir in addition to his own Cantata Choir. Mr. Churchill also founded a well known chamber orchestra entitled the Academy of St. Martin-in-the Fields which has achieved a notable reputation for records and broadcasts.

TO OTTAWA

In 1967 John Churchill came to Ottawa as first Professor of Music at Carleton University. He is enjoying his work in Canada and has great plans for the future of his department.

He is an intense enthusiast for the festival movement, having been one of the busiest of British adjudicators and having made four previous visits to Canada in this capacity.

Among other adjudicators coming to the Victoria Music Festival, some are paying return visits and two are coming for the first time.

The group consists of Dr. Theodore O. H. Carl of Pacific Lutheran College, Tacoma, speech arts; Edward Schuss, Chilliwack, accordion; Robert Vagner, University of Oregon, bands; Miss Erma Weir, Oregon State University, dance; Barton Frank, Washington State University, instrumental, and Cyril Mossop, Calgary, school choral.

Last date for entries in the Victoria Festival is next Saturday, Jan. 25. The syllabus and entry forms may be obtained at all music stores.

Entries must be mailed or delivered to the festival office, 820 Fort Street.

Sunday Concerts Postponed

Music and ballet concerts set for Sunday have been postponed one week due to weather.

Jan. 26 at the Royal Theatre it's the National Ballet of Canada's chamber ensemble group presenting a program of five new ballets, three of which are classic or abstract, the other two being comic-character in style.

The National Ballet chamber orchestra directed by George Crum accompanies the group.

Music used includes excerpts from Josef and Johann Strauss, Gabriel Faure, String Quartet in E. minor, Concerto for flute, bassoon and strings by Telemann, a piano and woodwind quintet by Poulenc and a string quartet by Pepin.

CURTAIN AT 3

The ballet concert which begins at 3 p.m., is part of Victoria Symphony Society's season and will be repeated Monday, Jan. 27, at 8:30 p.m.

At the McPherson Playhouse at 2:30 p.m., Erika Kurth, soprano, with Jack Kessler, violin, Austin Scott, flute and Robin Wood, piano, will perform ensemble music of various kinds.

Musical Art Society is presenting the artists who are among the finest resident in this city. Music by Bach, Beethoven, Handel, Haydn and Mozart will be heard.

Museum-Planetarium Has New Flair, Style

VANCOUVER (CP) — The city's long-awaited Centennial Museum and Planetarium, which opened recently, exhibits a flair and style that is a far cry from its former dingy, cramped quarters in the Skid Road area.

Set on the former Kitsilano RCAF base at English Bay, the dazzling white museum is surmounted by the flying-saucer-like planetarium, built with $1,100,000 donated by lumberman H. R. MacMillan.

Rising up 20 feet in front of the structure and sprayed by jets of water is a $40,000 crab sculpture of stainless steel. It's the symbol of the zodiac for July, recalling Canada's Centennial in 1967.

The museum and planetarium cost $3,500,000. Public subscription paid for the sculpture.

Exhibitions, which can be touched and listened to as well as seen, are the result of careful planning and selection of the old museum's many artefacts.

Its first wing begins with the geological formation of British Columbia, including a four-foot cube of earth dating different soil layers and deposits.

Haida ceremonial masks and argillite carved by Charles Edenshaw half a century ago in the Queen Charlotte Islands are displayed with Indian garments and a reconstruction of a longhouse.

The second wing spans the period of European immigration and settlement in the province. A room is filled with logging tools and old farm implements. Two-foot-thick slabs of Douglas fir reach to the ceiling.

"We want to create an impression of the ruggedness, strength and vitality that were involved at that time," says museum director Harry Pickstone, 46, a planner and architect.

The most complete and engaging exhibit is the Victorian era displays. A rough board walk, skirted by gas-lamp standards, funnels people past what Mr. Pickstone calls "the junk wall."

The wall is a treasure-trove of Victoriana. Telegraphic equipment, old wall phones, a switchboard, coffee grinder and typewriters and a painting of nudes from a saloon are mounted on the wall, papered with newspapers and advertisements of the day.

Behind the wall is a 1900-era parlor, complete with upright piano, carpets and a plastic aspidistra. To show how the other half lived, a farm kitchen and woodshed were reconstructed.

Membership in the museum, which costs $6, has jumped to 1,000 from 300 last year.

Mr. Pickstone, Lancashire-born and an RAF pilot during the Second World War, says he applied for the $18,000-a-year job of director because he thought it a challenge (he has no former museum experience) to which he could apply his original skills of melding artistic and practical concerns.

Divided Pictures A Modern Technique

NEW YORK — The shape of films to come seems to be multi-faceted, split and splintered, surrounding and all-encompassing—and a device to emphasize the visual.

It is form over content, perhaps, but an exuberant celebration of film as film by young directors who are breaking away from the normal mould of one image filling the screen. Motion pictures now show perhaps five or six events going on at one time, by splitting the screen into different panels, often of different shapes. The aim is total involvement of the audience.

The split screen is not new, of course. The master of most movie techniques, D. W. Griffith used variations on the split theme in such early films as Birth of a Nation and Intolerance. The world's fair in 1965 and Montreal's Expo 67, however, brought out the mod excitement.

ONTARIO FILM TOPS

Probably the most influential of all the multi-image pictures was A Place to Stand, a kaleidoscopic presentation of life in Ontario. It was produced for the Ontario department of economics and development, with Christopher Chapman the imaginative creator, directing, filming and editing the 20-minute film. It was a hit at Expo and won an American Academy Award as best short subject.

Dividing the screen into panels of various shapes and sizes and making them move about, Chapman was able to "force" the audience to be more selective about what it sees and more "involved" in the film.

Now, Hollywood has picked up the technique for major productions, for pictorial excitement, compression of information and dramatic effect.

In a recent special section in Action, the magazine of the Directors Guild of America, three top Hollywood directors discussed the use of the multi-image in their films. All three—Richard Fleischer, who did The Boston Strangler, Toronto's Norman Jewison, who directed The Thomas Crown Affair, and Ralph Nelson, of Charly—noted the influence of A Place to Stand.

FESTIVAL ENTRY DATE EXTENDED TO FEB. 1

In view of the weather and flu conditions in the city and surrounding area, Greater Victoria Music Festival Association has announced extension of its last date for entry in the 1969 festival.

Deadline will now be Saturday, Feb. 1, not Jan. 25 as previously announced.

However, entries will be accepted Jan. 25 or any day during the next two weeks, by mail or in person, at the festival office, 820 Fort Street (Western Music Co. Ltd.)

$300 a Week In Burlesque

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Travelling as a burlesque performer to clubs across Canada is a good way to make money, says Mary Uschak of Toronto.

Miss Uschak, billed as "Miss Misty Dawn, burlesque star of burlesque halls and clubs across Canada," says she makes up to $300 a week plus tips on the road.

"In Toronto we get just $150 a week and that's for 12 to 14 hours a day, so you can see why we want to travel," she said here in an interview.

Last February Miss Uschak left her job with the national revenue department because, without Canadian citizenship, she was not entitled to permanent employment. She entered an amateur contest at the suggestion of a girl friend.

The contest at Toronto's Victory Theatre, Canada's only burlesque theatre, was "quite a horrifying experience."

"It looked so easy from the theatre. I made my costume and came up with a routine with the help of my girl friend, but when the moment came I had to be shoved out on the stage."

She placed fourth and won a contract to perform at the Victory.

DOWN TO BYLAWS

Miss Uschak, a bright, talkative, humorous girl who left Germany during the war and has lived most of her life in the United States, said she has developed her own routine.

Her act has three numbers of 10 minutes each performed to the music of a local band.

"The first is just dancing, then I remove my gown and by the third number I'm down to as much as the bylaws of the province permit."

She turned down a contract for a topless tour of the West Indies "because I just don't have the bust for topless shows."

Miss Uschak says there is keen competition among burlesque performers and she is kept busy designing new costumes and acts.

Her colleagues in the burlesque business are "mainly women who are separated, divorced or who have experienced bad marriages."

She said they often have children to support and are usually good businesswomen. The brighter ones were clever enough to know it's a short career and wise enough to invest their money in stocks, bonds and real estate.

Miss Uschak and her boy friend, who have been saving for a year, now have enough capital to buy a 100-acre farm outside Toronto.

They plan to settle there, raise a family and breed horses and cattle.

Would she miss the world of burlesque?

"No, indeed; but I would return for a week or so if ever I needed the money."

20 Students In Recital

Ten city music studios were represented by 20 students at a recent recital sponsored by the B.C. Registered Music Teachers' Association's Victoria Branch.

Singers on the program were Robin Powell and Linda Scanlan.

Pianists were Rita Attrot, Erin Captain, Monica Reed, Karen Phillips, Dawn Sutherland, Lee Anne Johnson, Linda de Haan, Rosemary Rayfuse, Susan Wesson, Susan Thompson, Kathleen Dale, Ronnie McGovern, Darlene O'Scienny, Christopher Thom, Julie Bateman, Anne Henderson, Linda Dale and Linda Marshall.

Drama Classes Draw Interest

A considerable increase in creative drama activity in Victoria in only a few months was noted by Professor Richard Courtney during his address to the recent annual general meeting of the Canadian Child and Youth Drama Association.

The meeting took place at the Adult Education Institute.

Hundreds of children have been attending the creative drama classes organized by Oak Bay Recreation Department and the St. Thomas More Centre and conducted by Peter McWhir.

SUCCESSES

Creative drama and dance approaches are being used by Mrs. Judith Koltai and others, with great success in centres for disturbed children.

There have been separate full-day workshops for teachers in kindergartens, directed by Mr. McWhir, in elementary schools by Mr. Courtney and in secondary schools by Keith Johnstone.

As a result a considerable number of teachers are now experimenting with this approach in their classrooms and outside them.

University of Victoria's program in developmental drama now has about 50 students attending creative drama and children's threatre courses, many of which are available in the evenings and will be included in the summer sessions.

Future activities forecast by the association, consist in part of a number of workshops in the spring in various parts of the Island as far north as Campbell River and a full day on "Play and Education" for the Association of Childhood Education at the Adult Institute, March 15.

Preceding the showing of a film on improvisation the following officers of the association were elected: Richard Courtney, chairman Peter McWhir, vice chairman; H. A. Farr, secretary, and A. C. McNeel-Caird, treasurer.

MARKET REVIEW

Sharp Toronto Recovery Advances to Near Records

By GERALD CLARKSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Prices recovered and reached near-record levels on Canadian stock markets this week, although the rally ran out of steam in late trading Friday.

The Toronto industrial index rose 2.77 to 189.14. Its all-time high was 191.16 just before the sharp plunge early last week. The composite index on the Montreal and Canadian exchanges gained 3.51 to 186.59, alost just below its record.

The leading industrial groups were chemicals, oil refiners, pulp and paper stocks, beverages and trust and loan stocks.

Speculative issues in the junior industrial and real estate group edged up, although they still were below their peak late last year.

The Toronto index of seven real estate stocks advanced about 3 per cent, and J. H. Crang and Co.'s index of 79 junior industrials rose 1½ per cent.

Mining shares are putting up a strong performance following the recent price increases for several important metals. These include nickel, copper, aluminum, lead and zinc.

The Toronto base metal index has been at an all-time high for the last four days. Among the biggest gains, Pine Point rose 4⅜ to 47¼, Denison 3¼ to 73½, Hudson Bay Mining 2 to 78 and Sherritt Gordon $1.02 to 10⅛.

Life insurance stocks posted a sharp advance towards the end of the week, continuing their recovery from a slump after the last federal budget.

The budget introduced proposals to subject the companies to income tax for the first time. However, analysts said they expected the shares to revive.

Gold shares continued to trade at almost record prices, although the Toronto gold index was losing ground towards the end of the week. The record period for gold shares was during the international monetary crisis last March.

On index at Toronto, base metals rose 2.03 to 117.30 and western oils 2.31 to 241.97. Golds fell 1.82 to 246.87. Volume was 25,407,000 shares compared with 27,873,000 last week. Gains outnumbered losses 460 to 360.

On the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, volume was 10,278,000 shares compared with 10,932,000 last week. Gains outnumbered losses 196 to 163.

Mears, Whyte Add Partner Gower

Oak Bay Realty this week changed its name to Mears, Whyte and Gower with addition of a third partner, A. F. Gower, who has been with the firm about eight years.

Don Whyte said the move was intended to give the firm wider coverage of the Greater Victoria market.

Mears and Whyte—Oak Bay Realty Ltd., last fall withdrew from an association with Yorkshire Financial Corp., into which the firm entered on a merger basis in March 1967.

More Cheer Shows On Wall Street

By PHILIP GREER
The Washington Post

NEW YORK — Economic news burned a little cheerier this week, helping the stock market to pull out of its slide and post a good gain.

Reports of a $16.8 billion jump in gross national product in the last quarter of 1968, along with news that personal income climbed to another all-time high in November, helped turn the tide in favor of the bullish element.

The Dow Jones industrial average posted a gain of 10.01 points for the week, finishing at 935.11. Early in the week, the Dow once again slipped close to the 920 level that technical analysts consider an important support point.

Standard and Poor's 500-stock composite climbed 1.10 points to 102.03 and the New York Stock Exchange index was ahead .62 point to 57.76.

Trading volume slid to 58.38 million shares from 67.11 million turned over a week earlier, when the market was diving. The initial upturn in prices did not generate any frantic buying, but volume picked up as the rally showed some holding ability.

For the first time since the end of November, more stocks rose during the week than fell. There were 943 winners and 638 losers, 35 new 1968-69 highs and 60 new lows.

To most analysts, the rally was still a technical rebound after the steady selling through December. They say that the Dow Industrials would have to work above 950 before the selloff could be considered over.

Some brokers attributed the upturn to the imminence of the new Republican administration. President Johnson's State of the Union address Tuesday, along with his budget message and his economic report, they said, provided something of a clean break with the Democratic years and encouraged traders to begin looking ahead.

Owing to a delay in delivery, due to weather conditions, the Vancouver Stock Exchange weekly range was not available today.

Union Wage Increases Dip

OTTAWA (CP) — The average hourly base wage rate of some 1,000,000 Canadian workers covered by major collective agreements increased by 15.4 cents or 6.9 per cent between Sept. 30, 1967, and Sept. 30, 1968, a labor department study showed Friday.

The increase compares with 15.7 cents or 7.2 per cent in the previous 12 months.

This analysis covered 554 contracts and relates to negotiating units with 500 or more workers in Canadian industries other than construction.

Another study over the same period shows average pay increases of 6.6 per cent in the office worker category, 8.7 per cent for electricians and mechanics, and 9.8 per cent for general laborers. The over-all increase for these categories was 7.6 per cent.

The general laborer rate was $2.38, $2.26 and $2.77 in Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver, respectively.

In the 10 major cities, the largest percentage increases were in Saint John for both office occupations and trades at 14.3 and 16.7 per cent, respectively, and in Regina for general laborer with a 16.8-per-cent increase.

For the trades, the highest and lowest rates were $3.61 an hour in Vancouver and $2.75 in Halifax. Vancouver paid the highest rate for a laborer at $2.77 and St. John's the lowest at $1.72.

Nova Scotia Takes Over Deuterium

HALIFAX (CP) — Nova Scotia has taken over full control of the Deuterium of Canada Ltd. heavy water plant at Glace Bay and more money and time will be needed to get the long-delayed operation into production, Deuterium president R. B. Cameron announced Friday.

Mr. Cameron said that Jerome Spevack of New York, inventor of the process proposed to be used in the Glace Bay plant, had resigned as a member of the board of directors.

Members of the board of Industrial Estates Ltd. who had also served as Deuterium directors had resigned from Deuterium with the exception of F. H. Sobey.

Mr. Sobey is president of IEL, the province's industrial-promotion agency which originally assisted Deuterium in its Glace Bay venture and which in 1966 took over majority control of the company.

The government will announce new appointments to the Deuterium board shortly.

The plant, which will produce heavy water for use as a coolant in nuclear reactors, is about 30 months behind schedule.

'Taxpayers' Revolt' May Brew in U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Middle-income Americans may stage a "taxpayers' revolt" unless the government quickly reforms the tax system to take some of the inequities out of it, outgoing treasury secretary Joseph Barr said Friday.

"People are concerned and indeed angered about the high-income recipients who pay little or no federal income taxes," Barr told the joint economic committee in a last visit to Capitol Hill as head of the treasury.

"I will hazard a guess that there's going to be a taxpayers' revolt in this country if we don't do something about it."

Barr said tens of millions of Americans in the $7,000 to $20,000 a year income bracket are on the verge of rebellion not because their taxes are too high but "because certain provisions of the tax laws unfairly lighten the burdens of others who can afford to pay."

As examples he cited 155 cases in 1967 where no income tax whatsoever was paid on tax returns listing an adjusted gross income of more than $200,000. The income was more than $1,000,000 on 21 of the returns, he said.

Tax reform was listed first among four items of "unfinished business" Barr recommended be given first priority by the Nixon administration and the new congress.

U.S. Charges IBM with Monopolizing

By JOHN P. MACKENZIE
The Washington Post

NEW YORK — The Johnson administration Friday dropped its second anti-trust bombshell in a week, this time charging International Business Machines Corp. (IBM) with monopolizing the multi-billion-dollar computer industry.

Attorney-General Ramsey Clark, who had labored under criticism that the consensus-minded administration was soft on big business, asked a federal court in New York to outlaw key IBM marketing policies and, if necessary, break up the electronic giant.

IBM, which had negotiated with justice department lawyers for three years in their investigation of the computer industry, was ready with a prompt denial of the government charges.

The IBM statement said the "unwarranted" suit was filed despite ample evidence of "the open and strongly competitive nature of the computer business," with its 60 systems manufacturers and 4,000 companies engaged in computer-related enterprises.

Two competitors, Control Data Corp. and Data Processing Financial and General Corp., recently filed private anti-trust suits against IBM, seeking court action similar to the government's requests but also seeking heavy damages.

Revenues in 1967 from the sale or lease of general purpose digital computers exceeded $3 billion, the government said. IBM's share of the market was about $2.3 billion, or 74 per cent, while the nearest competitor earned $156 million or 5 per cent of the total, the suit said.

Echoing a complaint by Control Data, the government said IBM shut out smaller manufacturers in potentially competitive markets by announcing future production of new models when IBM "knew that it was unlikely to be able to complete production within the announced time," thus causing customers to wait unnecessarily for IBM.

The government also claimed IBM dominated the important educational market for digital computers by granting "exceptional discriminatory allowances" favoring universities and schools.

SAVE INCOME TAX WITH ROYAL TRUST ABC FUNDS

IF YOU
• are on pension but have other income
• have changed jobs and had a refund of pension contributions
• have received a large amount of severance pay
• have received a lump-sum long service payment

You can invest such payments in Royal Trust ABC Managed Funds and have it registered as a Retirement Savings Plan. The Income Tax is then deferred until you elect to have the payout commence or at age 71. Meanwhile, your money grows.
Suppose you have a pension of $10,000, you're 60 and you've taken a second job at $10,000 to keep you busy. You could put your whole pension into a Plan with Royal Trust and save as much as $3,800 of Income Tax a year.
You switched jobs in '68? They gave you severance pay of $20,000? If your other '68 income was $10,000, you could save as much as $8,600 by investing your severance pay in a Royal Trust Plan.
Remember — you should do something about it soon if you want to get the tax benefit for 1968. Closing date is 28th February, 1969.

Housing Starts Zero In On Annual Needs Goal

OTTAWA (CP) — A record 196,878 dwelling units were started in 1968, "outstripping actual annual needs," said Central Mortgage and Housing Corp.

The 1968 starts were 32,800 units or 20 per cent above 1967 and far surpassed the previous record of 166,565 starts established in 1965.

A CMHC news release described the 1968 total which includes single houses, apartment units, row housing and projects for the poor, elderly, handicapped, underprivileged and for students, as "a tremendous boost."

CMHC president H. W. Hignett described the figures as remarkable considering current interest rates.

"It represents the first step in reaching the target set by the Economic Council of Canada of an annual house production of 200,000 units by 1970," Mr. Hignett said. "For the first time we can say this target is within reach."

Apartment units accounted for more than half the 1968 total with 103,383 being started. This was 39.2 per cent more than in 1967.

CMHC didn't give a total for single houses alone but said starts of single houses and duplexes together numbered 85,453 units, an increase of 3.6 per cent over 1967.

Row housing units numbered 8,042, up 8.8 per cent.

CMHC said December dwelling starts reached a record level as well for the month.

Construction of 15,095 units began during December in urban centres compared with 8,761 in December, 1967.

Outlooks Clash From Fabled East

Comments of two local investment men who came home recently from trips to the fabled East indicate the usual diversity on what to expect in the markets this year.

They returned within a few days of each other, having sampled opinion in Toronto and New York investment circles. But while one reports the feeling that recession is inevitable and the bears are out of the woods, the other said they're not and felt trading would simply become more selective, with greater numbers of Americans looking to Canadian equities for their performance qualities.

There was a definite bearish feeling among research men consulted by the one dealer, who said that in order for inflation to be further checked, Richard Nixon must tighten the lid on money.

To do it at the most politically acceptable time he would have to act immediately, it was felt.

Of course the federal reserve banks had already raised their discount rate, with the result that the cost of credit went up to borrowers in general. Interest rates would have to be hiked even further to discourage the American spending spree, the gloom merchants were saying.

The other man had a different story. He said the question raised in New York was "Why did the (Federal) Reserve put the discount rate up when there was no government pressure to do so?"

The answer, as his informants believed, is that the discount rate increase was imposed by Republican-minded bankers to reflect on the Johnson administration in its closing days.

By so doing they could expect some improvement in the domestic scene, for which Nixon could take the credit in the weeks to come.

"They were saying, 'Why should Nixon be saddled with this thing (making money tighter) when he had nothing to do with it?' "

Whether or not the interpretation is true, it provides an answer acceptable to some observers, and an interesting comment for market followers.

●

Dow Jones' Monday view of the markets was borne out as the week went by.

The Dow suggested the then heavy pall hanging over trading could be broken up with favorable news out of Paris, where Vietnam peace talks were stymied. When agreement to open talks did come, the market rebounded.

Further encouragement would be given with an announcement by South Vietnam that troops will be reduced. Such word could come before Nixon's inauguration Monday, DJ reported.

●

Meanwhile, the New York exchanges remain in "real trouble," despite the reduction of trading hours. It seems that catching up with the paper tide is an impossible goal, as brokers replace one backlog with another.

One of the Victoria dealers said he was told by a chief trader in New York that most employees in the financial streets are hourly-paid and "don't give a damn" whether they ever ctach up.

There is talk, he said, of limiting daily trading to an arbitrary volume—say 10 million shares—"and ring the gong when the figure is reached."

That, he brooded, could lead to all sorts of additional problems for the market place.

"It is an awesome mess and nobody's got the answers in the immediate future," he said.

But continued American interest in the Canadian market is seen, mostly because of the way Toronto has performed.

This could be a sustaining influence on Canadian market action, especially with the possibility that Nixon will extend the equalization tax beyond its normal expiry in the summer.

As for stock markets generally, a single watchword appears to be applicable to all—selectivity.

Like many a new issue these days, the initial offering of 200,000 common shares of DataTech Ltd. has been fully subscribed at $5.50 a share and secondary over-the-counter market opening next week is expected to ask $10 up.

Director Walter Large, whose brother Earl is president, said he was told in Toronto by the distributing investment dealer Gairdner and Co. there had been a good response to the offering as the firm had experienced on a new issue.

Just moved into new premises in Saanich, the data processing company seeks to expand its services with proceeds of the issue, and just how successful it will be may be judged about the end of May when the first six-month financial statement is expected.

U.S. Postal Service Shake-Up Proposed

WASHINGTON (WP) — Sweeping changes in the U.S. postal service, designed to "solve our postal problems within the next five years" were proposed this week by Postmaster General W. Marvin Watson.

He recommended:

- That the giant postal system be turned over to a government corporation, in order to minimize political and congressional control of its operations.
- That the cost of first-class mail be raised from six to seven cents an ounce, but that air mail rates be eliminated.
- Construction of a network of highly mechanized "mail factories," to cost about $1 billion, in order to speed mail processing and reduce costs.

Watson described his package of proposals as "the only solution possible, for the postal service has become lost in a paper jungle, gradually being overwhelmed by both the mail and the archaic methods of handling it."

Watson urged that "for the first time politics be taken completely out of the post office."

Watson said the rise in first-class mail rates is necessary to wipe out the postal deficit, estimated this year at $271.3 million.

BIG U.S. FUND FOREIGN-OWNED

NEW YORK (AP) — Rapidly becoming one of the larger real estate owners in the United States is a two-year-old mutual fund whose shares are sold only to foreigners.

Money from the enterprise, called the United States Investment Fund, already has been used to buy more than $100 million of income properties, including buildings here and in Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Los Angeles and St. Louis.

Week after week the real estate pages of newspapers list additional purchases.

Operators of the fund estimate its total of U.S. real estate holdings will approach $160 million for 1968 and predict that 1969 purchases will average $30 million a month.

European money, fearful of devaluation, inflation and political upheaval, is partly responsible for the influx.

The fund is managed by Great American Securities and Research Corp., from offices in the Bahamas, where investors are free of real estate and capital gains taxes, but it operates in 50 countries.

The origin of the fund is almost as interesting as its growth. Keith Barish, a 25-year-old Miami financial whiz, founded the fund with the aid of several former members of the Kennedy administration.

BARISH TOP DOG

Barish now is president of the management company, called Gramco for short, and Rafael Navarro, a pre-Castro Cuban ambassador to the United Nations, presides over the sales company now spreading throughout the world.

Pierre Salinger, former Kennedy press secretary and one of the original investors in the operations, has severed some other business ties to open new territories from an office in Paris, where he will live for at least a year.

The fund, which has 7,000 shareholders, attributes much of its appeal to what it considers an almost foolproof hedge against inflation. American real estate, Barish says, offers a higher return than banks and less risk than stocks.

The most important consideration in the purchase of a home is location. Don't miss viewing this well-built home, situated on a quiet cul-de-sac in an attractive setting of tall oak trees and green lawns, offering considerable privacy for patio and outdoor barbecue. The interior is spotless and the spacious living room with open fireplace, dining room, entrance and through halls all have quality wall-to-wall carpeting over hardwood flooring as an added bonus and providing an excellent backdrop for fine furniture. The kitchen is functional, with a step-saving, adjoining utility room. One twin-sized and one smaller bedroom are on the main floor. A finished stairwell leads down to an attractive den (or library) with open fireplace. A small darkroom and a third bedroom, with separate entrance to the garden, complete the accommodation. An automatic oil, hot-air system provides comfortable heating. An ideal home for a professional man, retired couple or executive with a small family. (If you have a home to sell first, we will be pleased to advise you in this regard without obligation.)

THE TOWER OF BABEL may be resurrected again in the form of a two-mile-high needle-shaped tower city by the year 2000, says a British consulting engineer. This artist's impression shows such a structure, which could stretch 900 levels into the clouds and contain perhaps 300,000, who would in groups of 20 levels form villages of 6,000 to 7,000 persons with their own stores, community activities and municipal administration. Mein Kampf In Jewish Library

TORONTO (CP) — Shakespeare and Jules Verne in Hebrew and Mark Twain in Yiddish are only some of the 17,000 books at the Jewish Public Library, where the director believes available books should not be limited to Jewish authors.

Dr. Israel Frankel even keeps hardcover and paperback editions of Mein Kampf by Adolf Hitler. There also is a section devoted to Zionism, the Nazi holocaust and a sizable section on anti-Semitism.

"When we opened, Jews raised their eyebrows when they saw books on Christianity on our shelves. I said that Judaism doesn't believe in keeping people in the dark. Jews must see both sides of a question and decide for themselves."

Among the library's 7,500 card-holders are Roman Catholic priests, Anglican bishops, Protestant ministers and Christian students. Cards cost 10 cents a year and the library works on a $35,000 annual budget.

"If a non-Jew writes a book with Jewish content, we're interested," Dr. Frankel says. "But if a Jew writes a book on a no-Jewish theme, we're not."

Psychiatric Nurses Get New Setback

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Psychiatric Nurses Association's bid to get collective bargaining with the provincial government through appointment of a mediator has failed.

Dwight Wenham, secretary of the association, said Friday he has been told by the B.C. Mediation Commission that, under the Mediation Act, disputes with civil servants can only be referred to the commission by the provincial cabinet.

The 1,100-member association applied for a mediator after the government did not reply to requests for direct talks on improved wages and working conditions.

Mr. Wenham declined comment on the latest development until his executive meets next Wednesday.

Educational Theories Of Mao Get Big Test

PEKING (AFP) — Chairman Mao Tse-tung's educational theories are being put into operation in China, which plans to fill universities with workers and peasants after sending masses of students to factories and fields.

Peking newspapers gave a whole front-page Thursday to the first results of this experiment in Shanghai, where 11 workers were sent to a hospital Nov. 6 to be taught medicine and surgery.

The worker-students studied at patients' bedsides instead of delving into books. The report of an investigation shows optimism about the results.

TWO MONTHS

For example, those learning surgery could take out an appendix after two months, it was stated. Those who are learning general medicine treated the usual illnesses and specialists gave urgent treatment for fractures.

The new Chinese educational system seems to be inspired by the following principles:

1. The number of years of primary and secondary study is reduced to nine from 12.

2. Examinations are eliminated.

3. The accent in programs is put on what is definite and useful, on the principle that a study of fertilizers can be just as formative for the intellect as history or geography.

4. Part of the day is devoted to productive work.

5. Thanks to self-financing and shorter studies, secondary education should become accessible to a much greater number of pupils and children —perhaps one-third of those who come from primary schools, instead of one-tenth.

6. On leaving the secondary schools, everyone is directed towards production. It is from those who have shown what they can do in factory or field that the students of the future will be chosen.

Equipment Funds Used For Salaries

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Some hospitals have been using public funds meant for new equipment to increase staff salaries, Health Minister Ralph Loffmark said Wednesday.

Mr. Loffmark said in an interview that some money for high salaries was coming from the 30-cents-a-patient-a-day equipment replacement allowance which is granted hospitals.

"They will have to start giving priority to other things," he warned.

The health minister recently advised all hospital boards in B.C. that salaries of more than $12,000 a year must not be increased.

Meanwhile, Prince George Regional Hospital was told to abandon its $10,000,000 long-range building proposal because of the tight money situation.

Mr. Loffmark told trustees they should start over again on a new set of plans which would not cost more than $3,000,000.

The plans which he told trustees to abandon evolved during the past 2½ years at a cost of $150,000. They would have led to a 750-bed hospital.

"While the original plan and concept were deemed to be excellent, the unfortunate position is that capital funds to proceed with the 10,000,000 cost are simply not available," he said in a prepared statement.

Welfare to Get 'New Thinking'

OTTAWA (CP)—Federal and provincial governments moved toward co-operative reassessment of all their social welfare programs Friday by establishing two special studies and preparing for a third.

Federal Health Minister John Munro said at the end of a two-day conference of welfare ministers that they "laid the basis for new thinking on the efficiency and worth of social welfare plans."

One study will concentrate on costs of social assistance, including better financial and statistical reporting, analysis of caseloads and reasons for cost increases.

The second will try to find out what is needed to help social assistance recipients participate in the programs created to help them out of the traps of poverty, ignorance, disease and disability.

But the ministers withheld final agreement to a third proposed study—one that would look at ways of directing help to those who really need it, so that the major effort would be to rehabilitate those capable of complete or partial self-support.

Mr. Munro said proposals were made that would broaden the terms of reference of this study so the ministers decided to work on that for a while before setting up the study.

MEET SOME OPPOSITION

But one stumbling block may have been the expressed opposition of some provinces, Quebec among them, to switching programs like family allowances from universal payments to a more selective basis.

Mr. Munro had said before the conference he hoped the ministers would agree to examine such devices as income, needs and means tests as was being done by the federal government in its current review of social security programs.

But Jean-Paul Cloutier, Quebec social welfare minister, flatly rejected, on the first day, any idea of dropping the principle of universality in family allowances in favor of income or other such tests.

Mr. Munro said there hadn't been a full discussion of "selectivity." Some provinces opposed it. Others wanted more time to think about it.

The immediate aim of selectivity is to channel income support to those low-income families which really need the money, cutting out those who don't.

Mr. Munro has said this is a step along the road to a guaranteed annual income. But he also has stressed that the federal government has taken no position itself on the matter, pending receipt of the views of the provinces.

Considerable discussion centred on the five-year-old Canada Assistance Plan, a program under which provinces may opt to group welfare programs under one cost-sharing formula. Among the programs covered are unemployment assistance, blind and disabled allowances and old age assistance.

QUEBEC WILL WITHDRAW

While all provinces have signed agreements bringing one or more programs under this arrangement, Mr. Cloutier served notice that Quebec will withdraw at the earliest chance, probably next year.

The step would be in keeping with Quebec's demand that Ottawa vacate the family allowance field so that it could integrate all social aid supplied to Quebec residents.

Mr. Munro and Indians Affairs Minister Jean Chretien urged the provinces to extend their welfare services to Indians, offering between 85 and 95 per cent of the costs under th Canada Assistance Plan. Ontario already has done this.

But the Western provinces, those mainly concerned, insisted first on having guarantees that the federal government's aid will be adequate and won't be withdrawn at some later date.

They also proposed a federal-provincial conference on Indian affairs going beyond welfare services to cover schooling, housing, relocation and like problems. Mr. Chretien agreed to discuss it with the federal cabinet.

Meanwhile, the provinces will negotiate individually with the federal government on welfare extension to Indians on reserves.

New Brunswick, on behalf of the four Atlantic provinces, proposed that the Canada Assistance Plan cost-sharing be changed to give the have-not provinces a greater share of federal funds. Mr. Munro agreed to take it up with the cabinet.

DEBUNKING the claims that the Senate needs reform, Senator J. W. deB. Farris, 90, of Vancouver says the talk is "a lot of damn rot." The Uper Chamber, he says, performs a useful function. It could be improved "but you can say the same thing about the House of Commons."

Drug Price Bill Gets Rough Ride

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative MPs again Friday questioned whether a government bill "goes as far as it should" in protecting Canadians against unsafe drugs.

The bill, before Parliament for more than a year now, is aimed at lowering drug prices by throwing the industry open to foreign competition.

Debate on second reading will resume next week.

P. B. Rynard (PC—Simcoe North) again led the attack on the bill, questioning whether federal inspectors can satisfactorily cope with the flow of foreign drugs expected if the bill becomes law.

Dr. Rynard questioned the cost of inspection and suggested that lower prices will go hand in hand with lower quality.

Dr. Rynard said the bill should be scrapped and replaced with a scheme to subsidize the cost of drugs to needy Canadians. Gordon Ritchie (PC—Dauphin), also a physician, said this already is being done.

Liberal MPs in return rolled out statistics to show that Canadian drug prices are among the highest in the world, disclosed that inspection services are being beefed up, and reiterated that an "unassailable case" for action on drug prices has been made in a series of inquiries.

Ray Perrault (L—Burnaby-Symour) said it is a "brutal and tragic fact" that Canadians with chronic illnesses are being ruined by drug prices.

Mr. Perrault said that at least some of the opposition to the bill is coming from "those who have a vested interest in soaking the sick."

Warren Allmand (L—Montreal Notre-Dame-de-Grace) said it was difficult to know what Conservative policy was with respect to drug prices. "They offered no alternative policy and I doubt if they have one."

ASSURES INDUSTRY

The Montreal MP said the government bill was not radical and was unlikely to cut heavily into industry profits.

And there was no doubt drug prices were too high, Mr. Allmand added.

For instance, one cortisone preparation sold to hospitals for $1.95 cost retail pharmacists $17.

Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo South) said the only effective way to break the international hold the drug industry has is through nationalization and the formation of a Crown corporation to manufacture and distribute drugs.

SPRING BOOST IN TAX UNLIKELY

TORONTO (CP)—The Globe and Mail quotes Finance Minister Benson as saying Canadians will face no federal tax increases this spring.

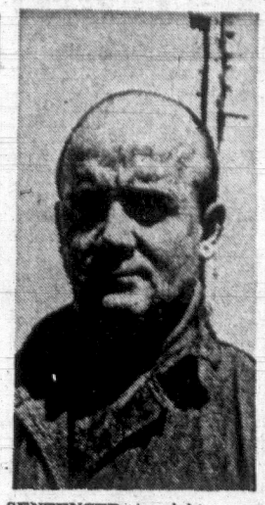
In an Ottawa story, the newspaper said Mr. Benson has no plans for a spring budget and likely will not present one unless there is a significant change from the economic conditions forecast in his Oct. 22 budget.

Budgets are not necessary unless tax changes are planned, the Globe and Mail quotes Mr. Benson as saying.

In his October budget, Mr. Benson forecast a surplus of 1969-70. He estimated expenditures for the next fiscal year at $11,675,000,000.

Detailed estimates for government spending in 1969-70 are expected to be tabled before the end of the month.

Mr. Benson said Friday that forecasts made last October still apepar to be reasonable.



SENTENCED to eight years in prison Friday in Montreal after being convicted of masterminding a complex $600,000 tunnel robbery was Georges Lemay, 42.

Repair Costs Probed

TORONTO (CP) — The Star says the defence production board is reopening an investigation into a suspected price scandal over the millions of dollars spent to refit the aircraft carrier Bonaventure.

In an Ottawa story, the newspaper says the new inquiry was ordered after a German manufacturer told a Munich court Friday that Canadian officials knew he was submitting inflated bills for equipment used to refit the Second World War carrier between 1960 and 1965.

The German said a Montreal businessman was involved in the deals.

After the repairs were completed the carrier was given another $12,000,000 refit in a Quebec shipyard.

The Star says the German, Erhardt Junkers, 60, admitted he overcharged Canadian purchasing officials for compressors and other equipment.

He said he boosted his bills by $133,000 and claimed Canadian officials knew what he was doing.

Claims Tossed Out

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Unemployment Insurance Commission said Thursday that a six-week fraud detection program has led to 652 claims being disqualified and action to reclaim $16,488. Figures cover 3,949 interviews and investigations in the UIC's nine British Columbia offices.

'Land' Sailors Going to Sea

Between 25 and 30 land-bound sailors from the Calgary naval reserve division HMCS Tecumseh are here for a week-end sea exercise aboard HMCS Porte De La Reine.

A Canadian Forces spokesman said today the purpose of the exercise is to teach the sailors the fundamentals of operating and maintaining a ship at sea.

Canadian Historical Study? It's a Bore

TORONTO (CP) — A "strong indictment of the way Canadian studies are being taught" is how Bernie Hodgetts describes his new 122-page National History Project report, What Culture? What Heritage?

Mr. Hodgetts said in an interview Friday that Canadian youth is getting a "greyed-out, poorly taught mash of constitutional and political history, nice neat little acts of Parliament, taught as if everyone agreed with each decision."

"Students paddle and portage over the river routes with the early explorers and fur traders, not once but several times, proving in the process that the spiral theory does little more than increase boredom.

"They have found very little in the Canadian past which is interesting and meaningful to them and practically no source of inspiration in their cultural heritage. They are future citizens without deep roots."

Mr. Hodgetts based the report on a year-long study sponsored by Trinity College School in Port Hope, Ont., where he was a history professor.

With a staff of eight, he observed 847 social studies and history classrooms in operation in 247 schools in 20 cities.

WORKS ON PROGRAMS

The staff interviewed educationists and Grade 10 students and had 1,000 Grade 12 students write short essays giving their own opinions of Canada.

He is currently working for the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education to develop new programs in Canadian studies.

Mr. Hodgetts' report calls for a council of education ministers from the 10 provinces to establish a Canadian studies consortium.

It would consist of regional centres with a national office and communications centre to develop and distribute new material and teaching strategies for use in schools.

The consortium would initiate and work from findings in the report and related studies. Final decisions on any material it produces would be left to the provinces.

He said it would be an enormous project, but could be done within a year.

WRESTLING

Tour Team Tough

By STEWART LANG

Dedication plus intensive training traditionally make Japanese wrestlers formidable opponents and seem to carry them to greater heights than those attained by rivals of equal potential skill.

Members of Japan's touring all-star schoolboy wrestling team appeared to support the theory Friday night at Oak Bay High School in an exhibition appearance against a Vancouver Island all-star high school squad.

Combining dazzling speed with superior control, the Japanese grapplers breezed to a 38-0 shutout over the all-stars, taking seven of eight bouts by falls and one by decision.

They have now lost only one of 58 bouts during a tour of the province.

Taras Hryb of the host school proved to be their toughest opponent Friday, going the distance of three rounds, each of three minutes duration.

PROVINCIAL CHAMPION

Hryb, provincial high school champion in the 165-pound class, dropped a 6-3 decision to Hidemi Minokoshi.

Most of the other matches ended in the first round with the tough Japanese wrestlers pinning their Canadian foes.

In another event of the "sportsfest" at Oak Bay, the visiting Templeton High team of Vancouver was clipped 68-42 in a basketball battle with the Oaks, who are unbeaten this season.

Also served up for spectators was an exhibition of gymnastics by the Victoria Y junior team of Lonnie Mitchell, Mike Blades, Don Williams and Rick Johnson, and their coach, Gordie Gannon.

Looking into the backgrounds of the boys on the Japanese team discloses reasons for their outstanding success during the tour of British Columbia.

Approximately 20 boys in each of 200 high schools within Japan participate in a major wrestling program. Tournaments are held once a month, keeping the standard of competition high.

Most boys have at least three years of experience and training in Olympic amateur freestyle wrestling before entering high school. On top of that are nine to ten years of judo experience — five of the eight all-star team members hold black belt degrees in judo.

WRESTLING NEAR TOP

Although baseball and soccer rank first among participation sports in Japanese high schools, wrestling is not far from the top.

The Japan Amateur Wrestling Federation has had the sport in an organized state for the past 30 years. Wrestling in B.C. high schools has been organized only five years.

This team is now on tour as part of the B.C.-Japan Cultural Athletic Exchange Program, which is to resume in August when a provincial team goes to Japan.

Bill Mitchell, place-kicker with the B.C. Lions last season and now a wrestling coach and teacher at Centennial High School in Coquitlam, is chairman of the host committee.

"To make a success of this sport, we must place more emphasis on promoting wrestling as an alternate winter sport to basketball," he said.

"This is a sport in which the small as well as the large can participate," Mitchell added.

Next stop for the team will be an appearance at Delbrook Collegiate in North Shore on Tuesday.

The boys finish the tour on Wednesday at UBC with matches against a B.C. all-star squad.

Boomer Adds Ulcer Attack To Work Woes

By Canadian Press

A victory by New York Rangers Friday night did little to lessen the problems of Bernie Geoffrion, whose first season as a coach in the National Hockey League has been far from a resounding success.

Geoffrion collapsed with a suspected ulcer attack following his team's 3-1 victory against Oakland Seals in the only scheduled NHL game.

The 37-year-old former Montreal Canadien star was taken to an Oakland hospital where he was kept for observation. Geoffrion has had previous ulcer surgery.

The Ranger coach was not feeling well before the game and collapsed just after his team returned to the dressing room.

The sudden illness came on the heels of reports Geoffrion was in danger of losing his job. Some sources predicted a loss to Oakland would have led to his immediate dismissal.

Emile Francis, general manager of the Rangers, stepped down as coach after last season and gave the job to Geoffrion. But the Rangers' mediocre performance this season led to rumors Francis may reclaim the coaching job.

The victory left the Rangers in last place in the Eastern Division, one point behind Detroit Red Wings and two back of Toronto Maple Leafs and Chicago Black Hawks.

Scoring for the Rangers were Phil Goyette, Don Marshall and Rod Seiling. Billy Hicke, a former Ranger, connected for Oakland in front of 4,982 California fans.

NINE STRAIGHT

The victory helped New York continue its mastery over Oakland. The Rangers have defeated the Seals five consecutive times this season after winning all four games against the expansion team last year.

Francis was not available for comment about the possibility he might take over as New York coach. He was in Memphis to watch Omaha, New York's farm team in the Central Hockey League, play Friday night.

Geoffrion, who finished his playing career with New York after many outstanding years with Montreal, said Friday he knew nothing about rumors of his firing.

"So I don't care to comment on it," he said. "I haven't heard from Francis."

The Rangers started out fast under Geoffrion and were in first place as of Dec. 4. Since then, they have won only six of 20 games.

STRIKE THREAT HOVERS ABOVE MAJOR LEAGUES

NEW YORK (AP)—The threat of a strike by major league baseball players increased again Friday when the Players' Association announced that the owners' offer to increase their pension fund by $1,000,000 had been overwhelmingly rejected.

According to a release from the association, the vote by the players on whether to accept or reject the offer made by the owners on Dec. 17 was described tersely in the following manner:

"Accept the owners' offer — 6."
"Reject the owners' offer — 461."

At the end of the statement was a list of names, reading like a who's who of baseball, of players who were allowing their names to be used in support of the policy of not signing 1969 contracts until a satisfactory benefit plan is worked out.

That Arnie Chap Stalking Leaders

NAPA, Calif. (AP)—Old pro Arnold Palmer stalked Miller Barber and Bruce Devlin today in the third round of the $135,000 Kaiser International golf tournament.

Barber, of Sherman, Tex., held the inside track to the $27,000 first prize after firing a five-under-par 67 Friday, giving him a two-day total of 135, nine under par.

He was a stroke ahead of Australia's Devlin, who also shot a 67 to go with his first-round 69.

Palmer shot a 68 for a 137 total, seven under.

George Knudson of Toronto with a 69-77—146 failed to survive the cut.

Two other Canadians also failed to make the cut. Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver had a 74 to go with his opening 78 for a 152 total, while Bob Cox, also of Vancouver, had a 79 after an opening-round 77 for a 156 total.

Victoria's Bill Wakeham failed to qualify for the start.

The first-round leader, Bob Lunn of Sacramento, wound up with a 73 to go with his earlier 67.

Lunn was tied with Charles Coody of Abilene, Tex., at 138, a stroke behind Palmer.

Also failing to make the cut were Los Angeles Open winner Charles Sifford, who had a 74-72—146, and Alameda Open winner Dick Lotz, who shot 74-73—147.

Harper Wins First Game In South Test

Play was continuing today in the south Vancouver Island curling playdowns at Victoria Curling Club after 24 of the 25 rinks entered hit the ice Friday night during the first two draws.

Competition will continue tonight and Sunday in the two-event, bonspiel-type competition, from which the winners of "A" and "B" event semi-finals will advance to the Island playoff against four north Island representatives.

Among the winners Friday was former provincial champion Glen Harper, who skipped his Duncan rink to a 10-4 triumph over Alex Moore's Esquimalt foursome.

New 'Team' Boosts Vancouver's Hopes

Canuck-Labatt Union Entering Franchise Game

VANCOUVER — Vancouver Canucks are working with a partner today in a new bid to obtain a National Hockey League franchise after the Western Hockey League club announced Friday it was again facing off with the NHL governors in the franchise game.

The club announced it has formed a partnership with Labatt Breweries of Canada Ltd., to purchase controlling interest of the financially-troubled Oakland Seals and transfer the club here.

The deal requires approval of the NHL board of governors and as far as President Clarence Campbell is concerned the NHL is not prepared to get the Vancouver franchise game under way.

The Canucks notified the NHL of its agreement with the brewery when the deal was completed Friday and sought permission to put it on the agenda of a league meeting Tuesday.

NOT ON AGENDA

"Vancouver is definitely not on the agenda for this meeting," Campbell said in an interview in Montreal. "I understand from other sources that Vancouver has taken up Labatt's interest in the Oakland club but Buffalo's application is the only one to be considered at the meeting."

Seymour Knox III, a Buffalo millionaire and president of Niagara Frontier Hockey Inc., said earlier this month his group has reached an agreement to purchase the Seals and has applied to transfer the club to Buffalo for the 1969-70 season.

But Labatt president Peter Hardy told a hastily-called news conference to announce the partnership with the Canucks that the Niagara group's agreement to purchase the Seals is void because of a previous agreement negotiated with the brewery.

The agreement was signed last March when Labatt loaned the Seals, plagued by poor attendance, $680,000 to meet league commitments.

OPTION TO BUY

Under the agreement, the brewery received an option to purchase controlling interest in the club in an effort to transfer the franchise here but the proposal was turned down by the Canucks because Labatt would control the Seals.

Under the new agreement, Hardy said the Canucks would own 65 per cent of the controlling interest in the Seals and would have an option to buy out the Labatt shares "at any time."

Canuck director Coley Hall said that if the Seals were purchased, the Barend Van Gerbig group which owns the Oakland franchise, would be only minor shareholders.

Hall said the Labatt agreement was "speeded up" by Niagara group's bid to gain control of the Seals, currently in second place in the NHL's Western Division.

He said he doubted a Vancouver bid to shift the franchise would be opposed by Montreal Canadiens or Toronto Maple Leafs, but opposition is expected from Jack Kent Cooke, owner of Los Angeles Kings.

Cooke, who wants to keep the Oakland club in the Bay area because of the gate attraction of a nearby rival, said he has the support of five NHL governors to oppose shifting the franchise to Buffalo.

Victoria Jayvees Romp to Victory

LANGLEY — University of Victoria Jayvees staged a spectacular shooting display here Friday night as they defeated Trinity College of Langley 105-78 in a men's exhibition basketball game.

The Victorians, who are scheduled to play Western Washington Jayvees in Bellingham tonight, were paced Friday by Tim Reiger, 29 points, and Trev Cook, 20.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH? —NOT ON TELECASTS!

TORONTO (CP) — Scotty Morrison, referee-in-chief of the National Hockey League, has been barred from appearing on future Hockey Night in Canada telecasts at Maple Leafs Gardens by Punch Imlach.

"I don't need him going out there to whitewash his officials," the manager-coach of Toronto Maple Leafs said in an interview.

Morrison appeared on television during Wednesday night's game against Boston Bruins and defended referee John Ashley's action in ejecting Leaf rookie defenceman Jim Dorey from a game in Boston Jan. 9.

Morrison denied Ashley had called Dorey "pretty boy" and "bright eyes."

"I know he can't do anything else, but I don't need him making out one of my players is a liar," Imlach said. "From now on, officials will confine their appearances in the Gardens to officiating."

Imlach and the Gardens have the right to veto appearances on the telecast, under the terms of the Gardens' contract with MacLaren Advertising, producers of the program.

Vernon Streak Reaches Seven

Vernon Essos have been pedalling along the B.C. Junior Hockey League road at a good clip lately. It pleases him, so coach Odie Lowe is hoping he won't have to shift gears before they finish parking at Memorial Arena tonight.

An undefeated run of seven games has taken Vernon to within two points of second-place Victoria Cougars as they headed for tonight's confrontation at 8:30.

"We need to keep going," Lowe said Friday in Vernon. "Every other team has at least one game in hand on us. That's why a weekend sweep is imperative."

Vernon completes its visit to the coast by playing in New Westminster on Sunday.

Vernon, in hoping to match Victoria's recent eight-game undefeated streak, will be bolstered by the presence of Jeff Wilson. The high-scoring forward is attending UBC on a hockey scholarship.

Studies prevent him from playing regularly in Vernon, but Wilson is readily available for the Okanagan team's games on the Coast.

BRONCOS BREAK

Both Victoria and Vernon lost ground to league-leading Penticton Broncos. A three-goal flurry in the first nine minutes carried Broncos to a 6-3 victory over Kelowna Buckaroos before 700 Penticton fans.

The victory pushed Penticton five points ahead of Victoria.

Reg Cherenko, with two, Kerry Moss, Robin Agur, Ed Hays and Ken Conner hit for the Broncos while Gene Carr, Ken Phillips and Chuck Carigan counted for Kelowna.

Penticton dominated play most of the way, out-shooting Kelowna 27-19.

MONTREAL CANCELS GAME . . . . . DAVID WON'T BE EMBARRASSED

Joke to Russians but Not to Molson

MONTREAL (CP) — After keeping Canadian amateur hockey enthusiasts in a tizzy for days, Russia's national hockey team was to land in Montreal today for a seven-game tour of Canada.

An eighth game went up in an angry puff Friday when the Russians advised the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association they would spend Friday night in Paris and arrive here at 1 p.m. EST today.

Their first game of the Canadian tour was to have been played at the Montreal Forum this afternoon.

David Molson, president of Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League, backed by CAHA president Earl Dawson of Rivers, Man., announced cancellation of the Montreal opener at a news conference Friday.

The remaining seven games of the tour would be played as scheduled in Toronto, Vancouver, Victoria, Winnipeg and Ottawa.

Nearly 5,000 tickets had been sold in advance for the cancelled Montreal game and a full house was expected.

"We spent $40,000 taking our team to Russia," Dawson said, "and the way we recover this money is through the gate receipts here.

"The gate receipts belong to the CAHA after the rink takes off a percentage for the rental and if we'd had a full house here it would have brought us $25,000.

If the complete tour had fallen through, the CAHA stood to lose $150,000.

Following Friday's announcement of the cancellation of the Montreal game, Molson said:

"It's obvious this whole issue is a political one, with the instigators making it propaganda affair.

"Personally, I am not going to be embarrassed any further, or have the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association or the people of Montreal subjected to such treatment. It is obvious the Russians had no intention of coming here to play Saturday, and knew this 36 to 48 hours ago."

Molson said that a previous invitation for the Russians to attend tonight's Canadian-Chicago Black Hawks NHL contest had been withdrawn.

In a late Friday afternoon conversation, Molson told a Russian consulate official here: "I don't want any part of your team any time this year."

Consulate officials "appeared to find it quite a joke."

Dawson and Molson agreed it would have given them considerable pleasure to advise the Russians to stay at home when they first cancelled the tour.

Dawson said he would like to see steps taken by the International Ice Hockey Federation at its summer meeting in Switzerland to have the Russians suspended by the world hockey body.

Sports Ministry Suggestion Fired At Fact-Finders

TORONTO (CP)—The federal government's Task Force on Sport heard, among other things, a call for a Canadian ministry of sport Friday when it met press, radio and television representatives in what it called "a news conference in reverse."

The meeting was one of a series called across Canada by the task force in which the government-appointed group is seeking guidance for its recommendations on how the government can help upgrade sport across the country.

The task force is comprised of administrator Chris Lang, chairman W. Harold Rea, Dr. Paul Des Ruisseaux of the government's Fitness Council, and skier Nancy Greene.

Rea said the force has one more news conference scheduled before compiling its report for presentation by early March.

PROBLEM AREAS

At the Friday session, proposals were made from the floor for a sport governing body, possibly as a government department, to tackle problems related to administration of amateur sport, coaching and financing—termed by Rea as "three problem areas."

"Most administration of amateur sport is done from someone's basement or kitchen table," he said.

Rea said he had visited Scandinavia and Russia for ideas on how sport is run there and has "interviewed more than 40 sports organizations on their problems in Canada."

The assembled sports writers also called for "open competition" in nearly all sports, doing away with what one writer termed "the fiction of amateurism."

It was suggested that Canada "take the lead to force open competition," that other countries might then follow suit.

Rea said the task force has interviewed Canadian ambassadors overseas and that one diplomat said frankly: "Send us one well-disciplined sports team on tour and you can keep your trade missions."

CENTRAL OFFICE

Rea suggested "a Canadian Amateur Sports Federation might be an answer—a central office in Ottawa dealing with sport on an administrative level," with communications and public relations departments operating under such a body.

"Each sport might have its own national secretary—or one for several sports in some cases."

At the top of such a structure, Rea said, it might be advisable to have 10 or 12 outstanding Canadian citizens who could afford to give their time, acting as a board of directors.

He also said the force had heard suggestions for "a new tax structure" to permit deductibility for tax purposes of private funds made available for easing the burden of financing sports facilities.

CURLING TIPS

By RON NORTHCOTT
1968 World Champion

THE SITUATION — Skipping strategy depends largely on the ice conditions. Here's a good example from the Alberta-Ontario game in the 1968 Brier at Kelowna. It's last end with the score tied, and Ontario (whites) have last rock. Needing to steal a point for the victory, Alberta succeeded in setting up the garbage as shown, but Ontario had shot rock biting the four foot with skips' rocks remaining.

THE STRATEGY — Normally if the house was like this, Alberta would have had a great chance to steal. However the ice at Kelowna was such that if you took ice outside the four-foot ring, it would not curl because of the frost. Because of this we could only attempt a long raise on "A" to get shot. Both shots were extremely close but unsuccessful.

Normally the Ontario skip would have been faulted for not keeping the front clear but with such a small area open for drawing the four foot, I think he made an excellent decision in plugging up the house.

TODAY'S TIP

The follow through is an important part of a proper and effective slide.

After releasing your rock, don't jump up. Rather, stay down and reach towards the skip's broom. By taking this extra moment to follow through, you can always see if you are right on target and if not, you can advise your sweepers whether you are wide or narrow.

Also by staying down and following through, you get a better feel for the shot and you will be more accurate, more often.

Portland Challenges For Lead

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Portland Buckaroos defeated Phoenix Roadrunners 3-2 to pull within a point of the Western Hockey League lead Friday night.

The clubs meet again in tonight's only game as Portland attempts to overtake idle Vancouver. No games are scheduled Sunday or Monday.

The defeat was the fourth home loss of the season in 19 games for Roadrunners.

Portland held a 3-0 lead midway through the second period, then had to play all-out to stave off a Phoenix rally.

BLOCKING AID

Bucks got goals from Gerry Goyer, Bill Saunders and Doug Messier and heavy work from defencemen who blocked 11 Phoenix shots in the torrid second period.

Phoenix got both its goals in the last half of the middle period. One was kicked in off a Portland skate and credited to Andre Pronovost, the other was a flip shot from the blue line by Harry Shaw.

Foul Line Helps Trip Mt. Doug

Mount Douglas Rams crashed into a succession of fouls Friday and flubbed a chance to climb into a tie for first place in the Inter-High School Senior Boys' Basketball League.

Esquimalt Dockers, collecting 30 points on foul shots, including 14 in the final 10 minutes, tripped the Rams 56-44 at Mount Douglas.

Glen Lorimer (16 points) and Norm Smith (14) were the Esquimalt scoring leaders while Jim Hunter (12) paced the host club.

In another game Friday, Belmont bounced out of a last-place deadlock with a 54-37 triumph over Claremont as John Campbell paced the victory with 24 points, including 22 in the last half.

Defence Helps Three of Four

The emphasis was strung out on defence Friday, and three of the four Vancouver Island Hockey League entries picked up points for their efforts at Esquimalt's Sports Centre.

University of Victoria Vikings, kept in contention by Jack Leggett's netminding, rallied with two third-period gaols to tie Butler Brothers 2-2.

Queen's Own Rifles upset Stocker North Americans 2-1 in the night's other contest before 875 fans.

Leggett, missing only on shots by Keith Lawrence and Ray Gregoire, was Vikings' standout. He stopped 26 drives compared to 16 handled by Butlers' Ed Hastings. Bob Buie and Greg Gow counted Uvic's goals in the third period.

STOCKERS SLIP

Dave Stones and George Ede counted first-period goals before Rifles' defence took over to fashion a victory that knocked Stockers out of a share of first place.

Jim Schkwarok scored Stockers' goal early in the second, then goalies Brian O'Neill and Ray Chenier dominated action.

Hockey Loop Will Discuss Mexico City

SEATTLE (AP) — The possibility of awarding a franchise to Mexico City will head the agenda when the Western Hockey League holds its mid-season meeting in Phoenix, Tuesday and Wednesday.

League president Al Leader visited the Mexican capital recently and said he was impressed with its potential for hockey.

Others matters due for consideration are the setting of playoff eligibility lists and dates for the 1969 playoffs; adoption of 1967-70 schedule; and assistance to Salt Lake City in obtaining players for its league debut next season.

Retiring Lion Players' Pilot

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — John Gordy, who led a bitter players' revolt in the National Football League last summer, is retiring as a member of Detroit Lions.

His new position: Executive director of the NFL Players Association, a newly-created post.

Gordy, as president of the association in 1968, spearheaded a players' demand for a better pension plan and other benefits.

A threatened boycott almost wrecked the staid old league before the exhibition season began. A mid-July settlement averted a strike.

The new NFLPA president is kicking specialist Jim Bakken of St. Louis Cardinals.

Revival in Offing For Kennedy Cup

VANCOUVER (CP) — An attempt will be made to revive the J. F. Kennedy Memorial Cup soccer competition.

Victoria won the trophy when the tournament was last held in May, 1967, at Vancouver. It was not held last year because of professional soccer which now has folded.

Frank Scherer, president of the greater Los Angeles Area Soccer League, has called a meeting for Feb. 7-9 in an attempt to renew the tournament. He has set May 31 and June 1 as tentative tournament dates in Los Angeles.

ON THE MOVE

"We've been working in that direction with the Los Angeles people and I'm glad something has finally materialized," said Len Burkinshaw, president of the Pacific Coast Soccer League.

The PCSL, together with entries from Los Angeles, San Francisco and Mexico, formed the Pacific International Tournament for the Kennedy Cup in 1960 and the first competition was held the following year in Los Angeles.

As well as Victoria, the PCSL Firefighters won the trophy twice and Mexico has won four times.

RAIDER COACH TAKES POST WITH BUFFALO

BUFFALO (AP) — John Rauch, 41, a championship coach with Oakland Raiders, has signed a four-year contract as head coach of Buffalo Bills replacing Harvey Johnson, interim coach of the Bills since September.

Both clubs are in the American Football League.

Rauch directed Raiders to the AFL title in 1967 but lost to Green Bay in the Super Bowl. Oakland won the Western Division title this season and bowed to New York Jets in the AFL final.

Once a powerhouse in the AFL, Bills had just one win and one tie in 14 starts this season.

Meeting Switched

Monday's meeting of the Victoria Sports Council has been switched to the lower lounge at Victoria Curling Club. The session, starting at 7:30 p.m., was originally scheduled for the McPherson Lounge at Royal Athletic Park.

Fort That Never Fought, Hides Yet on Harbor Hill

The Department of National Defence soon will officially turn over a 15-acre parcel of land known as Macaulay Point to the Municipality of Esquimalt. The land, said the DND, contained a "military installation of historical significance".

By SUSAN RILEY

Behind a rusty chain-link fence near Work Point Barracks an old fort lies hidden in a hill.

All you see from the road passing Work Point is a grey cement structure. It doesn't look impressive, just abandoned.

From Saxe Point or the water even less can be seen.

That's the way the British engineers who built Fort Macaulay in 1895 planned it. The fort was nestled in the hill so ships of an enemy couldn't pinpoint it.

Macaulay and Fort Rodd Hill were built to protect the British fleet at Esquimalt.

But the mighty guns were destined never to fire a shot in anger.

Once inside the fort, it could be 1895 again. There is an underground tunnel with cement walls, wet and slimy. Footsteps echo and a little stream of water trickles through.

The tunnel leads to the grey building on top of the hill.

LOOKOUT

From the prison-like building soldiers could scan the straits and relay positions down to the men who manned gun emplacements at the foot of the hill.

The three gun emplacements are on a flat part of land which stretches into the sea. They are almost hidden in bushes which haven't been trimmed in years.

Beside the circular cement emplacements are rusty black railings and cement stairways that seem to go directly underground. The stairs are covered with moss and rubble. At the bottom, rusted ajar, are heavy black metal doors.

Squeeze past the doors and you're in a small dark chamber under the hill. The cinder block walls, whitewash fading, are damp. There is an indentation in one — they used to put a candle lantern there.

BIG SHELLS

The floor is covered with wet leaves, rotting wood and discarded garbage. The British and Canadian soldiers used to store 100-pound shells in the little room.

The Department of National Defence shut the gates at Fort Macaulay for the last time a few years ago.

No-one goes there any more.

It was different in 1895. Teams of British soldiers manned the guns. Others operated range-finding devices. They marched down the now-deserted tunnel. Horses and wagons travelled the road.

All the bricks for the storage buildings — some still standing — were brought around Cape Horn.

When Britain turned military installations over to Canada in 1906 Canada got the fort too.

Sgt. Major William Walker . . . Macaulay Fort revisited

Actually William Walker, now retired, got Macaulay.

He'd fought for England in the First World War, joined the Canadian Army in 1926 and soon became sgt.-major in charge at Macaulay.

TRAINING

Work Point barracks had since been built and between the wars Sgt.-Major Walker trained soldiers at Macaulay.

In 1949 the defence department took the obsolete guns away, phased out the fort and asked Mr. Walker to look after it.

He moved with his wife and family, and built a house on Macaulay Point near the fort. He had a "lovely garden and a couple of cows." He kept lawns trimmed and buildings clean for 12 years by himself.

Last week he visited the fort again, stood in the rain and wind watching the grass move and the water drip into sunken stairwells.

"It's all overgrown now," he said.

"Since the Second World War the fort has just died a natural death, I guess. Guns like those became obsolete."

They used "disappearing guns" when Mr. Walker worked there.

Under each huge cannon — which could pivot 360 degrees — was a pressure cylinder. The men would pump the cylinder and the cannon would rise from its circular base to peek over the hill.

When the 100-pound shell ripped down the 22-foot-long barrel the force would recoil the gun back down into the pit.

"Even then, and that was a while ago, they had some pretty sophisticated equipment," he said.

Six smaller guns were set up with automatic sites.

But the men had to make their own electricity with a dry cell rigged in an earthenware jar.

"When all the small guns were aimed at a target during practice sessions before the Second World War we could make 57 hits in a minute," he said.

Macaulay gunners are mentioned in the record books for the efficiency with which they operated.

PALISADE

There was a palisade around the fort in the early days too—a seven-foot picket fence. And later, they used barbed wire. Still visible are trenches, like dried-up river beds, where the barbed wire ran.

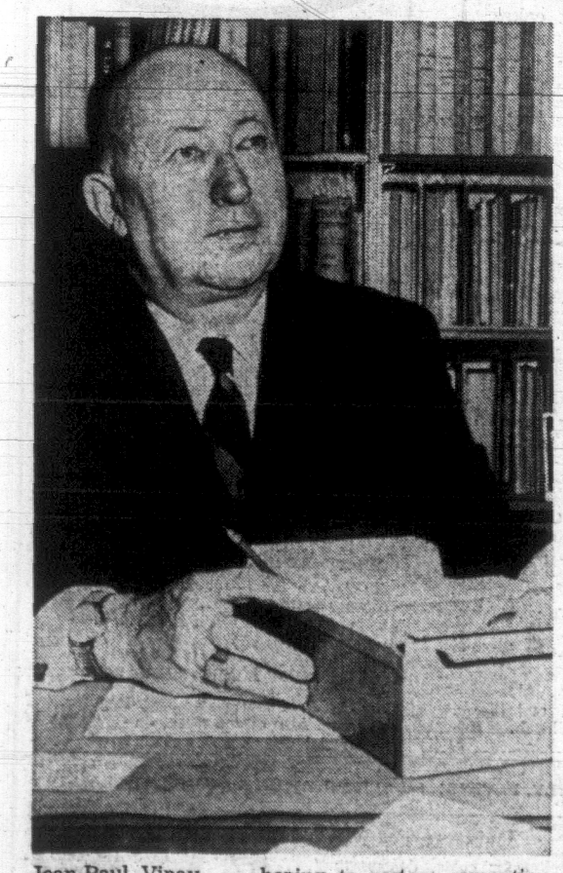
But all that's left is the skeleton of the fort. Just the deteriorating buildings. Its bones have been picked.

Men used to climb up and down the stairs, shouts and shots once rang from the gun emplacements, wagons and later trucks drove down the road and the gates were always open.

But no-one ever goes there any more.

Esquimalt council will decide this year what to do with the fort. In his inaugural address Mayor Ray Bryant said it's "historical significance" will be considered.

CIRCLING ROAD in top picture outlines Macaulay Fort, gunless, overgrown, deteriorating behind a chain fence, a shabby ghost when compared to neat modern defence department buildings adjacent in background. Back in 1888, as centre picture shows, the hill was treed and "C" Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery, lived in bell tents while clearing and building the fort. By 1891 the fort was almost completed and Victoria's Artillery Militia, bottom picture, soon were holding manoeuvres. The horses and wagons transported the shells. While guns crews drilled and powder smoke blued the air, everyone else, it appears, stood well back.



Jean-Paul Vinay . . . hoping to restore semantic balance of the French language.

FRENCH WRITERS IMITATING . . . . . AMERICAN TERMINOLOGY

World-Wide Fight Begins to Erase 'Franglais'

By ALAN WHITE

Professor Jean-Paul Vinay has a plan to use technology to fight technology and save a language in the process.

He and a computer at the University of Victoria will attempt to ward off a year's-long sneak attack on the French language by the American terminology of invention.

They will try to consolidate a now disorganized defence against the jargon of scientific experimenters and writers, by unifying French around the world.

In on the plan would be language experts from 22 nations who would take each new term to be invented and find an equivalent for it in French.

●

These in turn would be sent across the world and filed in an international computer dictionary service as a guide to other writers, in the plan suggested by Professor Vinay.

But this is all in the future.

The project—talked about for several years under various guises—isn't that simple initially. First, linguistic experts must sort out a problem nearly 30 years old.

The French language has been muddled and confused for the better part of the century by an invasion of words and terms from other languages. Linguists must organize the confusion of definitions already in existence before they can begin putting French back on its lexical feet.

●

If words could be taken as gold, the experts could be said to be restoring the monetary balance of the French-speaking world. As it is, they are hoping to restore the semantic balance.

The effects of technology and rapid communications in the twentieth century have created this problem for French-speaking nations, the Uvic professor of linguistics and French said in a recent explanation of his plan.

A flurry of articles crossing the Atlantic every time an invention or scientific discovery is made has caught Europeans in a vacuum.

They have not had equivalent terms in their languages.

And in unconnected attempts at translation or invention of words to describe these developments, they have come up with several words to use for English originals.

Canada has often found one equivalent word, while Europe has found yet another, Professor Vinay said.

The problem has worked the other way around, as well. Articles written in Europe have had differing translations here and in other countries.

"Solutions were different in each French-speaking country," he said. "We ended up with two words—one in North America, for French Canada, and one in Europe."

But many of the inventions of the century have come from the U.S., and that has been the birthplace of many of the new terms.

"It was much easier for some writers in Europe to borrow a word than to invent, or coin one. So we got an influx of borrowings which became a jargon," Professor Vinay said.

"About 1960 there was an outcry against this—every third word in a French technical text was in English and people began to ask why we should bother writing in French."

The complaints then were hurled at "Franglais"—the term applied to the fractured form of French with English words spliced in.

●

It really should have been called "Framericain," Professor Vinay said, because French writers were "imitating American terminology."

Examples of the problem are many. One obvious case arising soon after the Second World War was the tape recorder—what was it to be called in French? After various attempts, it was labelled "magnetophone."

Another such word had to be found to name the computer in French—and here experts referred the problem to a French mathematician who came up with the word "ordinateur."

And of course, draft-dodger. The concept of avoiding conscription was an old one in Europe, where the draft originated, but someone had to bring together the concepts in both languages. Hence the French "insoumis" was paired by linguists with the English term.

But whether Franglais or Framericain is the name applied to the problem, linguists have firmly resolved to do something about it.

Several associations were formed to protect French, culminating in 1967 in the Conseil Internationale de la langue Francaise—a language council with 22 member French-speaking nations.

Professor Vinay is one of 10 Canadians appointed as delegates to the council, eight of them from Quebec.

His plan, unveiled last fall at a conference in Paris, would link together lexicographic (word study) centres from here to France in the defence of scientific French.

The job is already being done to some extent by centres here and in Ottawa and Quebec, but technology will speed up the process of purification.

The three locations would join together through a telex system to co-ordinate the search for equivalent terms in French for terms now adopted from English.

Whenever a new term was translated, or an equivalent decided upon, it would be sent across the country to compare with others. The centres could thus ensure they were not putting out different words or alternate substitutions.

●

A single common term would be selected and filed with a computer dictionary in France, for world-wide reference.

The centre could in turn send computer programming for local computer dictionaries back to the centres for more extensive filing.

The purpose of Professor Vinay's plan would be two-fold in this respect: it would organize one common French language and then tell all French-speaking nations about it.

It but remains for the details of implementation to be worked out, before the technological defence begins.

Pulled Off Reef

MIAMI, Fla. — Lightened by the departure of her 471 passengers and 202 of her crew, the British cruise ship Carmania was hauled off a sandbar in the Bahamas Friday, five days after she ran aground.

As three rescue tugs strained and roared, the 14-year-old Cunard liner slipped loose from a reef just off the island of San Salvador.

HAIR-RAISING sights may confront the tourist who ventures to London this year. 'The Eternal City' Is Now the City of Young

ROME— This traditionally "Eternal City" is now, in addition, the city of youth and not just a place of pilgrimage, of superbly-preserved ruins, of floodlit fountains, and of acres of parkland a mere stone's throw from the busy streets.

Rome is revealing a new and unsuspected face, for the casual London look is "in". Carnaby Street has made its presence felt even here, and though it is not mentioned in the guide books, a place of pilgrimage has been established for young people, in Via Tagliamento.

They gather in their hundreds at the Piper Club where they can listen to local groups and singers. The first shop to cater for the new trend was, appropriately, the "Piper Market", with tubular steel scaffolding as clothes racks.

In these circles, youngsters from Britain — and many from Canada and the U.S. — feel instantly at home. To dress the same is to be the same — although the young Roman lags behind the Londoner and the geared up visitor is the object of some admiration.

Not least of all because he will have been able to do it much more cheaply.

Is Rome worth considering as an alternative, say, to the south of Spain? Certainly, for it is possible to live just as cheaply, if not more so, a fact that is underlined by the scores of Britons and mixtures of Americans and Canadians who arrive on planes that land here several times a day from London.

Language is no problem either for nearly everyone understands some English or French.

Accommodation is particularly inexpensive. A clean, simple room with breakfast can be had for as little as 1,200 lire (just over $2). Addresses can be obtained from lists prepared by the tourist organization.

Lunch and evening meal need not cost more than $1.75 each at one of the many small trattorias where office workers go to eat. Leave the big restaurants in the main shopping centers for the tourists.

VERNON WINTER CARNIVAL
FEB. 6 to 9

This 4-day tour will leave Victoria by ferry, connect with Greyhound at Vancouver for Vernon, where you will stay at the National Hotel for 3 days, room with bath, and ticket for the crowning of the May Queen. There are many outdoor events including Grand Parade—see special program. $49.00 each double, singles and twins available.

SACREMENTO-RENO TOUR
MAR. 14 to 20

This 7-day tour will leave our office by De Luxe Coach Lines chartered bus to Vancouver, thence to Portland and Bend overnight—then on to Reno for three days at nice hotel. Here you will take in a most interesting tour of many historic places. We then leave for Sacramento, capital city of California—overnight with de luxe tour of city. Then on to Portland overnight and home. Cost of tour $89 each double, twins and singles available.

Denmark to Display Wealth of Old Bibles

An unadvertised bonus for visitors to Copenhagen this season is a rich display of treasures in the Danish Royal Library, including a wealth of Bible, Saga manuscripts, important documents in North American history and the rarest book in Denmark.

The rarest item is one of which only a single copy was ever printed: A military manual struck off in 1578 for King Christian IV, whose private collection formed part of the Royal Library when it was founded in 1650.

It is flanked in the display by the first book ever printed in Denmark, a breviary dated 1482, and the first ever printed in Danish, a rhymed chronicle of 1485.

The Bible display includes the Dalby Book of the Gospels, written in 1050-1100, and the oldest book written in Scandinavia and still extant; a Greek Bible manuscript done in Byzantium in the 10th century; and the Gutenberg Bible of 1455, the first book ever printed from movable types.

INDIAN BIBLE

An important New World item is the Algonquin Indian version of the Old and New Testaments, printed in Cambridge, Mass., in 1633. This is the first Bible ever printed outside of Europe and the first larger work from the first printing press in America.

Also of interest to Canadians is the manuscript diary of Jens Munk, who sought the Northwest Passage in 1619-20, came to grief in Hudson's Bay, and made his way back to Bergen, Norway, with the two survivors of his 64-man crew.

Money Shortage Will Hit Major U.S. Space Projects

By THOMAS O'TOOLE

WASHINGTON (WP) — It may be the year of the moon, but you'd never know it from the space agency's budget request for fiscal 1970.

With little but the prevailing wind of austerity in mind, NASA is asking Congress for $3.88 billion for the next fiscal year, the same it was told it could spend in the current year, more than $2 billion less than it spent five years ago and the first time it's asked for less than $4 billion in any year in the last eight.

"This budget," says NASA's acting administrator Thomas O. Paine in painful understatement, "does not make full use of the nation's space capabilities."

30-Day Missions

What is does is allow NASA to close out the Apollo program, by landing four pairs of astronauts on different parts of the moon in the next two years, starting with two crew members of Apollo 11 this summer.

It also lets the space agency continue work on the idea of using men to fly 30-day missions in near-earth orbit (the Apollo workshop) and to try their hand at orbital astronomy (the Apollo telescope mount), flights that are due to begin in 1971 at the earliest and to continue at the rate of one a year, at best.

But what it doesn't do is permit any kind of lunar exploration to begin.

Space Station Out

In effect, the austerity of past years and of fiscal 1970 prohibit NASA from sending men to explore the moon for at least three years after the fourth and final Apollo landing, which means that no astronauts will walk the lunar surface at any time between 1972 and 1975.

Money shortages have also forced NASA to abandon plans, at least for the moment, of starting work on a six-man space station that would remain indefinitely in earth orbit, changing crews by shuttling them back and forth from earth.

While a space station would not have been a reality for another ten years in any case, NASA wanted to begin work on the concept this year, since it takes at least five years to bring something like this beyond the dreaming stage.

Despite the paucity of funds, NASA has managed to squeeze into the fiscal 1970 budget a few new and novel schemes for exploring space in the next decade.

Constant Watch

One is a plan to fly a mariner spacecraft past Venus and then past Mercury (the planet closest to the sun) in 1973. Another is a series of five small space-craft that would orbit Venus and Mars in the mid-70s, with at least one satellite on constant watch around the two planets for a period of several years.

NASA will also begin work this year on the $46 million earth resources satellite (Eros) and a $50 million synchronous weather satellite that will hover over one spot on earth and provide round-the-clock forecasts to an entire hemisphere as it does so.

The space agency would also like to start work next year or the year after at the latest on a scheme to take a grand tour of the outer planets (Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune) in 1977 or 1979.

But together with the other planetary programs that will be begun this year, a grand tour will cost NASA more than the Nixon administration might be just as unwilling to spend as the Johnson administration has been.

79-Year Resident In Area Dies

Mrs. Roberta Young, a resident of Metchosin and Victoria for more than 79 years, died in Royal Jubilee Hospital Thursday in her 90th year.

Mrs. Young was a member of the Pioneer Society of Victoria and received the Canada Centennial Medal in 1967. She resided at Rose Manor and did volunteer work as hospital visitor for First United Church.

Mrs. Young was the widow of Robert Dugan Young. Her first husband, John Dunlop Reid, died here in 1917.

She is survived by two sons, Kenneth Reid, Victoria, and Fergus Reid, Saanichton; one grandson, Ronald Dunlop Reid, Victoria, and four great-grandchildren.

Rev. Benson Summers will conduct funeral services in McCall Brothers' Chapel Tuesday at 1:30 p.m. Canon H. M. Bolton will officiate at the interment in St. Mary's Church, Metchosin.

Chance To Buy City Hall

REGINA (CP) — Want to buy city hall?

Councillors Thursday voted to sell.

By a 6 to 5 vote, they opted to move across the street into six rented floors of a 14-storey downtown bank building.

The change would mean more room for council and administration than they have in their present four-storey quarters.

It would be cheaper to pay $254,000 a year in rent than stay in the stone edifice, a report submitted to council said.

City offices have overflowed into other premises after five years in the block, built in 1906 as a post office.

The asking price for city hall was not disclosed.

Victoria Daily Times

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, JAN. 18, 1969—PAGE 21

Arthur Mayse

Earlier this week, I passed on to you the plight of a happy little girl whose chance of a future hangs on the complex operation that only your help can make possible.

The response to Florenda Joy Dick's need began within minutes after we put Tuesday's Times to bed, and it is continuing at a brisk rate.

My hopes are strong now that the child of six, who has found willing rescuers, will be permitted to make the trip to Mayo Clinic as planned.

A few days ago, that prospect was dim indeed. Even though arrangements had been made in hope for her admission, her parents didn't know whether they could be carried out. David and Sadie Dick are sturdily independent; they have managed, sometimes under difficulties, to meet the ordinary needs of a young family by their own efforts.

As I told you earlier, it was not through them that this extraordianry need came to light.

Today, I would like to give you some idea of how people the Dicks have never met (a circumstance that surpirses them even though they have helped others when they could) are doing their best to fill that need.

★

A newspaper friend laid the first donation on my desk while Tuesday's presses were still rolling.

Before I left this office, two others had been added, and three readers had phoned their assurance that they intended to kick in for Florenda Joy.

That evening, Victoria Central Lions Club gave a most welcome roar.

Central Lions, one unit of an international organization that pioneered and successfully maintains a "blue baby" fund, has earmarked the take from a Saturday night Bingo for Florenda Joy.

(Place, Knights of Pythias Hall on Cormorant Street, and time, 7:30 tonight. This, subject to weather.)

Then came the jolly Shriners, whose splendidly maintained hospitals have enabled many crippled children to walk again. Victoria Gizeh Temple Shrine Club has volunteered to pick up the transportation tab for the trip to Rochester and return.

I can tell you also that a splendid contribution is coming in from a Victorian whose identity must remain undisclosed.

A solid foundation has been laid, and thanks to other groups and citizens of a city with a heart, the building goes on.

★

Laverne M. Sands of Sand's Mortuary Ltd. accompanies his personal donation with word that others will be accepted at the firm's three chapels, and that a radio-telephone equipped car will be placed at the disposal of daughter and mother for the trip to the airport.

From a jumble of notes on my desk, I can tell you that students of Colquitz Junior Secondary intend to help Florenda Joy with the proceeds of a sock hop set for Friday, Jan. 24, and that Gordon Head Secondary students are also putting in their licks.

At University of Victoria, the 30 members of Phrateres Club, an international sisterhood devoted to fellowship and service, has voted to hold a Feb. 13 raffle and tag in aid of the fund.

The youngest contributor — assisted by her parents — is 22-month-old "Cheryl." And here's one fresh-arrived on behalf of a spry first-grader, "Lori."

In the other direction, I know that some who have donated, or who plan to do so, will not see 70 again.

For your good letters, thank you on behalf of Florenda and her family.

The wish expressed, that this child may get her chance, is frequently backed by these words: "I am praying for her."

Home now to a delayed dinner, but first this reminder. Please send all Florenda Joy donations to the Bank of Nova Scotia, Douglas and Hillside branch. There, may it keep on growing!

HOW TO GET AHEAD in fish and wildlife branch was demonstrated Friday as sheepish George Ferguson and deer Donna Storry helped with move to new offices in Dogwood Building at Wharf and Fort. Wildlife offices had been at Fort and Bastion. Now all branches of Recreation and Conservation Department, except the provincial museum, are under one roof.

University Troubles 'Within

'They've Got Crisis But Not Financial'

Premier Bennett today rejected any suggestio. that troubles besetting universities in the province stem from lack of government financial aid.

"University of B.C. in this one year, is receiving more money from the B.C. government than in all the Liberal years (of government) put together," he said.

The premier, speaking in an interview from Vancouver following his return with Mrs. Bennett from an Arizona vacation, was replying to criticisms levelled by B.C. Liberal Leader Dr. Pat McGeer.

The premier said Social Credit "is very much education-minded." He cited the creation of University of Victoria and Simon Fraser University during his time in office and development of regional vocational schools and colleges.

"The trouble (at universities) is within, not without. It's not a question of money or governments, but of the universities themselves. They've got a crisis, but it's not financial." He did not elaborate.

(His statement was at odds with one issued by Dr. Kenneth Hare who has resigned as president of UBC as of Jan. 31. He said in Vancouver Tuesday, "My troubles did not lie within the university.

"The radicals had a go at me but they were not a factor."

(While refusing to be drawn into any criticism of the B.C. government, he said inadequate financial support for the university was behind his resignation.

("You've got to have the financial resources. If you haven't got them or any prospect of getting them, then you can't face the job.")

'Lost Respect' of Legislature

The premier was asked if there was implied criticism in the over-ruling by cabinet of Health Minister Ralph Loffmark who recently withdrew plans to issue a set of strict standards for municipal pollution control.

Jurisdiction for pollution control was plainly left with Lands and Forest Minister Ray Williston and the Pollution Control Board. Opposition critics said this action lost Mr. Loffmark the respect of the legislative assembly.

Premier Bennett said he had made it clear three years ago when opening an election campaign at Campbell River, that his government is dedicated to clean air, pure water and fertile soil.

"It's our number one policy." He said pollution control board jurisdiction of municipal actions was established under a cabinet committee of Mr. Williston, Mr. Loffmark and Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell.

The premier said this had not been changed and there was no criticism of Mr. Loffmark.

The Loffmark withdrawal of plans to firmly rule municipal anti-pollution schemes was just a result of "healthy discussion" at cabinet level.

"There was no difference of opinion."

The premier said the forthcoming session of the legislature will be the most constructive since Social Credit came into government in 1952.

Budget to Show Planning Results

"The people of British Columbia will see that experience counts. When the budget comes down they will see the benefits and effects of long-term planning."

The premier said he was seriously shocked by Prime Minister Trudeau's suggestion this week that it might be a good idea to have police files on reporters.

"We want nothing resembling a police state anywhere in Canada," he stated.

He was commenting on televised remarks by the prime minister who had ticked off reporters for "crummy behavior" when his social activities last week in London were covered in detail.

The prime minister had stated it might be a good idea to have police files on social activities of reporters. He added, perhaps police should investigate girls taken out by English-language reporters.

"Any reference by a head of any government that he is going to call in the RCMP, I think that's a very bad thing.

"It shouldn't be smoothed over lightly."

Premier Bennett said the private life of a government leader must be just as open to the public as his public life.

"Only in the Social Credit government can you talk to the premier as you are talking to him now." (He was contacted by telephone at Vancouver Hotel.)

"No bunch of front men are trying to hold you back either," the premier added.

The premier said his southern holiday had been quiet.

"I don't run around. The premier of British Columbia is not a swinger."

GUESSING GAME inspired by modern symbols extended this week to device on blouse and hat of Darlene Park. Is it a rifle sight? Is it a pool shark spotting the eight-ball? Workmen's Compensation Board says it's a pair of hands encompassing a human figure (an all-round guy?). It portrays the protection of the B.C. working man and will appear in future on all WCB letters, equipment and posters.

PARTING SNOWFALL TONIGHT

The weatherman called it.

He said Friday there will be "a bit of rain and a bit of snow" before a warming trend sets in early next week.

Overnight, Victoria had that bit of snow—1.7 inches in urban areas and two inches at Victoria Airport.

A rising temperature should melt most of it before it freezes again tonight.

Today's high temperature was expected to be 35 degrees (it was 36 Friday), dropping to 28 tonight in the city and going up to 35 again Sunday.

The outlook: a little unclear, some snow flurries, great amounts of snow NOT expected. Warming trend still expected at the beginning of the week.

City police reported eight accidents in three hours this morning and one constable commented that drivers are not being cautious and fail to realize there is ice under the snow.

Other area police reported few accidents and Colwood RCMP commented that "people are beginning to use their heads out here."

ROBERT THOMPSON
... 'unfair' tax

'Danger Flags Of Inflation'

Government spending, not citizen spending, is the cause of inflation in Canada, Progressive Conservative MP Robert Thompson said today.

The present Liberal government is expanding far too rapidly and several other taxation measures smack of "the Boston tea party and taxation without representation," he said.

The member for Red Deer, Alta., was addressing a seminar held by the Vancouver Island Progressive Conservative Association at the University of Victoria.

The former national leader of the Social Credit party who joined the Conservatives prior to the last election said Finance Minister Benson's social development tax is "one of the most unfair and unreasonable taxes" ever applied.

The cost of government is double what it was in 1963 and interest rates now are higher "then they have ever been in the history of Canada."

Mr. Thompson said the danger flags of inflation are flying and the Liberals cannot bring themselves to cut back on spending.

The proposed estate tax—not yet passed in the House—is "straight confiscation" and goes back to Marxist philosophy of capital.

In practice, the tax would mean all capital belongs to the state and not to the individuals who earn it. Capital would revert back to the state when a person died.

"If this is the policy of the government then I am well concerned," Mr. Thompson said.

WATCHING, WAITING

He also said Canada is in the second stage of Trudeaumania—a period of watching and waiting to see what the prime minister's policies are.

The section of the amended rules of parliamentary procedure, which was withdrawn would have "emasculated" Parliament and also would have been "a very fundamental restriction of the freedom of the press."

The controversial section would have permitted the government to set a time-limit on debate without consulting opposition parties.

GIRL THROWN FROM CAR; 4 QUESTIONED

A juvenile girl believed thrown to the icy road from a moving car was found lying unconscious near the intersection of Douglas and Discovery Streets shortly after 8 a.m. today.

She was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital where she was examined and released.

Police are questioning four men in connection with the incident.

Ask The Times

Q. Can you give me any information on John O'Dea, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association?—V.P.

A. John Roche O'Dea was born and educated in Newfoundland and named president of the Newfoundland Brewery Ltd., in 1963. He has been with the company since 1934. He has also served on the boards of several other companies. Mr. O'Dea was a member of the Newfoundland House of Assembly from 1959 to 1962. He lives at 21 King's Bridge Rd., St. John's Newfoundland.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

Our Own 'Lower Slobovia'

Victorians may get snow, but it's nothing compared to Saanich Peninsula's "polar belt."

And if anyone doubts there is such a belt let them talk to residents of the area where snow often is still knee-deep long after the rest of the district is green again.

The cold spot is bounded roughly by Central Saanich Road on the east, West Saanich Road on the west, Elk Lake on the south and Keating Cross Road on the north.

It's the peninsula's "Lower Slobovia" in winter but the banana belt in summer.

"For the past three weeks snow has fallen at least once a day," said one resident. "When it rained in Victoria, it snowed here."

Freezing temperatures are not uncommon when it's mild in Victoria.

This is the area where the majority of greenhouse operators suffered heavy damage under the weight of the December snow.

The weather office confirmed that there is a significant change in temperature in the area, mainly because the region is hillier.

Passengers Praise Driver For Averting Crash Panic

Five persons injured in Friday's downtown truck-bus collision are still receiving treatment in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Among them is five-year-old Albert van Akker, of 550 Rithet, whose nose was broken when the B.C. Hydro bus and a Johnston Terminals' tractor-trailer slammed together at 8:30 a.m. in the Government-Humboldt intersection.

The accident sent 26 persons to Jubilee and St. Joseph's hospitals but 21, including bus driver William Calnan, 48, were released after treatment for minor injuries.

Admitted for treatment were, Joyce Barker, 48, of 415 Michigan, with a back injury; Margaret Barker, 71, of 260 Douglas, with injuries to both legs; Helen Trahan, 66, of 124 Government, with arm and chest injuries and Stella Donylyk, 50, of 143 Government, with a compound of the left leg.

Passengers praised driver Calnan for averting panic. Despite an injured leg and the shock of having the windshield shatter around him, Mr. Clanan moved quickly down the aisle directing people to the rear exit.

Police are urgently requesting witnesses to the accident to contact the traffic division which is investigating.

A spokesman said that in an accident where so many are injured, it is imperative that as many witnesses as possible are assembled to give a "good clear picture."

Most accounts have been from bus passengers, but at least two motorists on their way to work at the time have spoken with the police.

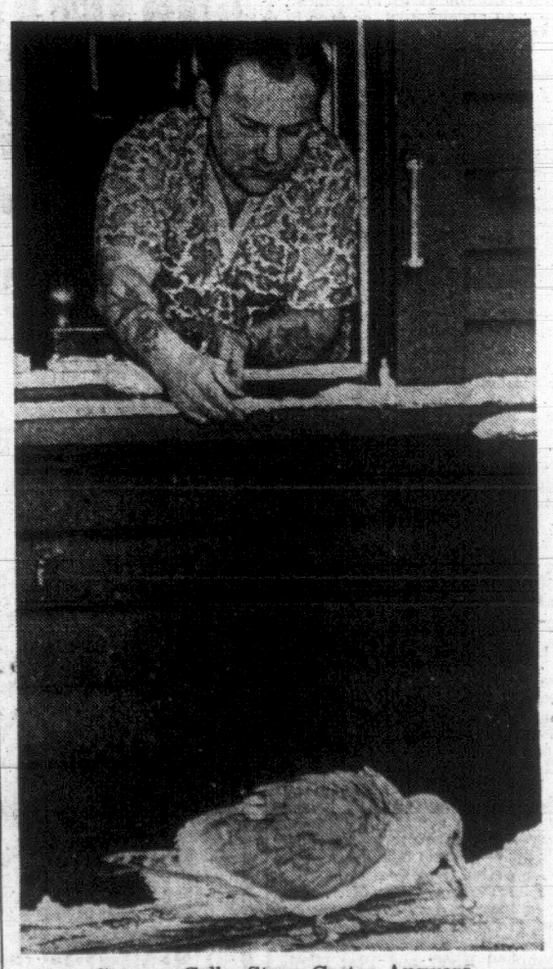
However, the spokesman added, unless more come forward, "we're kind of beat."

44,000 Seek Jobs in B.C.

Unemployment in British Columbia was 44,000 persons at the end of 1968, or 5.4 per cent of the labor force, Canada Manpower said today.

This compares with a rate of 6.3 per cent in B.C. in December, 1967.

Employment in B.C. increased by 43,000 jobs during the year, a growth of 5.9 per cent or nearly double the national rate.



Stumpy Calls, Steve Carter Answers

Master Panhandler Calls Shot

By GEORGE COCHRANE

Stumpy the seagull is entering his 10th year as the master panhandler of the Johnson Street bridge.

The one-legged bird finds the men who operate the lift bridge easy touches.

John Kirkendale, a 22-year veteran on the bridge, first noticed the gull with the rollicking gait in January of 1960.

"Probably had his leg bitten by a codfish," he said.

Then, as now, John, of 1153 Greenwood, was summoned by the inimitable call of a hungry gull.

●

Stumpy adopted a flat area outside the operator's cabin as his landing ground. He is intolerable to competition. He allows only one other gull, with a deformed foot, to share his food.

Winter conditions make landings difficult for the crippled bird. He resorts to belly-landings—usually out of control.

So after every snowfall, the men leave the warmth of their cabin to sweep his area clean.

Stumpy rewards them each time with another staggered landing.

And that loud, hungry call.

Doing The Town

Books for today's traveller . . .

Half the fun in travelling is the anticipation and preparation . . . and under this latter heading comes reading up on the countries and places you plan to visit . . . To read now . . . and tuck into your suitcase when you finally take off . . . are the paperback Collins Holiday Guides . . . the complete series of which you'll find at the Book Nook, priced at a modest $1.25 each . . . All the European countries, including Spain, Portugal, England, Ireland, Scotland, France, Austria and Germany . . . with pertinent up-to-the-minute information . . . Also the handy and inexpensive Ford's Guides . . . "Europe on a Shoestring", "Bargain Paradises of the World" and "All the World at Low Cost" . . . and Frommer's $5 and $10 a day travel books . . . They're as much fun for the arm-chair traveller as the actual sojourner to read! . . . With Israel a focus of world interest, many people are planning an early visit . . . Two fascinating, brand new books on this country are now at Book Nook . . . "Israel" by Elian-J. Finbert . . . best described as "the promised land re-discovered" . . . and "Jerusalem", a joy to read and look at . . . Both copiously illustrated . . . A new, revised edition of "Spain" by Yves Bottineau is really terrific, say people who've travelled in Spain . . . a real "must" if you plan to visit this fascinating country . . . The Book Nook, 10 Centennial Square, 386-0813.

Both men and women in Rome are wearing black velvet suits in the evening. Count Crespi's suit has diamond buttons.

And dresses to travel with . . .

Clothes may not make the woman . . . but the right clothes certainly help make any trip more enjoyable . . . so after examining the aforementioned books . . . we dropped in next door to Impacts 'n' Imports to see what they had to offer in the way of a travel wardrobe . . . A rewarding visit, we must say! . . . We were shown some really lovely pure silk and Abraham silk dresses which take to packing like ducks to water . . . light-weight, uncrushable, undemanding . . . the sort of chic dresses you'll wear proudly and confidently no matter where in the world you may roam . . . There's a silk shirtwaist shift with long sleeves and tie belt . . . a really beautiful flower print . . . priced at just $60 . . . A sleeveless dress in brown and white printed silk with scalloped roll collar and tiny button trim . . . Another print with an oriental flavor and wide border . . . the latter being cleverly used in the dress design to produce a very striking effect . . . one of these in blues and gold, another in shades of rose and gold . . . No two of these dresses come in exactly the same colors . . . which makes them pretty exclusive . . . We also saw two one-of-a-kind dresses . . . An orange and blue oriental print with short sleeves, separate tie collar . . . (heavenly for a tall brunette, size 10) . . . and a sleeveless dress with the new collared V-neckline, contoured belt and stitched pleats starting high on the yoke . . . Lovely! . . . Impacts 'n' Imports, 8 Centennial Square, 388-7023.

Femininity will be restored to the beach next summer with the appearance of soft, demure swim dresses.

Real economy versus the other kind . . .

"It takes as much brains to spend money wisely as it does to make it" . . . we were told in our youth . . . and the longer we live and the more we see, the more we're convinced this is true . . . Take the matter of clothes buying, for instance . . . if you've pots of money you probably don't have to count the cost (though we've noticed that the best-heeled people are often the canniest shoppers!) . . . But the average person has to put her clothes dollar where it will do the most good . . . which brings us right down to W & J Wilson . . . the quality store for the whole family . . . Any and everything you buy at Wilson's is of the very finest quality . . . besides being smart and exclusive . . . Real quality seldom comes cheap . . . in dollars, that is . . . but in terms of durability, smart appearance and lasting satisfaction, it's just about the cheapest thing there is . . . Families who buy all their clothes at Wilson's . . . for the tots, teen-agers, for dad and mom . . . always look superlatively well turned-out . . . even when their clothes are several years old (and we know several smart gals in town who are still wearing . . . and loving . . . their five-year-old Wilson coats and suits!) . . . If you're bent on spending your money wisely . . . getting value-plus for your family clothes budget . . . shop . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

For a fragrant cosmetic bag put a drop of perfume on a cotton square and slip it into the side pocket.

Your wardrobe's best friend . . .

While snow-bound over New Year's, we used one of the (shining?) hours to go through our clothes closets . . . examining everything in the hard, cold light . . . and ending up by dispatching half our wardrobe to Paisley Cleaners (the other half is due to go this coming week) . . . and so we start the year with everything clean, fresh and in tip-top condition . . . It's a nice feeling . . . and if you'd like to experience it too, we recommend you do likewise . . . Just pick up the phone and call Paisley! . . . We promise you you'll be more than pleased with the expert job Paisley does on all your family clothing . . . your suits and coats and good woollens . . . your cocktail and evening dresses . . . your husband's and your children's wearables . . . The people at Paisley take a real personal interest in your clothes . . . treat them with the respect they deserve . . . They use only the very best cleaning chemicals, and the latest in equipment . . . and they wouldn't dream of returning anything to you that wasn't meticulously pressed and finished . . . Maybe you've had unhappy experiences with dry cleaners in the past . . . and if so, we commiserate . . . But once you've tried Paisley, we're sure you'll share our enthusiasm for this completely trustworthy dry cleaner . . . In our book, they're tops! . . . Paisley Cleaners, 522 Gore St., 384-3724.

If you love beautiful clothes . . .

Designer and couturiere Ursula Redwood is the most imaginative person you could hope to meet when it comes to turning out beautiful clothes . . . A lovely piece of fabric . . . unusual buttons or buckles . . . a beautiful piece of jewellery . . . just show her any of these and inspiration goes to work on the spot! . . . When we visited her studio the other day we saw an utterly simple and immensely elegant, pale blue wool crepe dress she'd designed to set off a big Russian tula silver buckle picked up in an antique shop . . . the sort of dress any clothes-conscious woman would give her eye-teeth to own! . . . Mrs. Redwood now has her new magazines illustrating the European collections . . . with swatches of gorgeous fabrics for spring . . . it's well worth a visit to her studios just to look at them! . . . but we wager once you've seen samples of her beautiful haute couture work, you won't be able to rest until you have her make something for you . . . maybe a cocktail or evening dress . . . a superbly cut and tailored suit or coat . . . a dream of a little day or afternoon dress . . . Even slacks or ski pants (for these latter she has the real Swiss stretch material that last for years! . . . Styles may come and styles may go . . . but the well-cut, good-looking sweater and skirt outfit goes on forever . . . it's a case of "age cannot wither, nor custom stale"! . . . For school and campus . . . business office and casual daytime wear around town . . . especially at this time of year . . . you just can't beat the versatile sweater and skirt . . . preferably matching . . . to strike just the right note . . . We saw some very attractive sweaters and skirts at the Madam and Eve Shop this week . . . Skirts in four different styles . . . straight wrap-arounds fastening at the side with a kilt pin . . . Sharply-pleated kilts . . . Dirndl-type, flecked tweeds . . . and skirts with all-around box pleats . . . Matching Drumlanrig lambswool pullovers, in rich colors of blue, orange, hot pink and green . . . One of these pullovers has a deep ribbed Basque waist, buckled belt, classic round neck . . . $19.50 . . . There's another style with mock turtle neck and back zipper . . . and one that's a real turtleneck . . . These are all solid colors . . . but if you want to be a bit gayer, try one of the horizontally striped pullovers in combinations of pink-green-blue or orange-green-blue . . . with skirt in any one of these colors . . . Laird-Portch botany wool pullovers, in moss green, pale blue or navy, have high mock turtle necks and long sleeves . . . combine handsomely with kilts . . . Madam and Eve Shop, Trounce Alley, 383-7177.

Cream and Sugar Perch on Tea Pot

By PENNY SAVER

Hong Kong or home-grown, the flu that has been hanging around this corner of the world is no joke. It hit our family with an agony of aching muscles, then lingered in the form of stuffed heads, a touch of nausea and a general weariness. But we were lucky; reports keep reaching us of friends and acquaintances for whom a bout of flu has turned into pneumonia. One couple called their doctor about their young son's high fever and were given the "keep him in bed with ice-packs to cool the fever" advice. Convinced it was "just the flu" they kept up the home remedies until the child began to cough with such force he could scarcely breathe. On hearing of this new development the doctor arrived in record time, and handed down a verdict of pneumonia in one lung along with the appropriate medication.

Miracle drugs make pneumonia a pale shadow of the threat it used to be, but they won't keep Victorians out of bed should illness strike. Even the most resourceful patient means more work for the housewife, as she must at the very least prepare a tray three times a day. I saw a handy little tea set that is just made for easy carrying and that will continue to see constant use when everyone is up and running around. This is a stacking tea pot, sugar bowl and cream jug all made in ceramic. The tea pot really is short and stout, having been flattened to make as steady a base as possible. It holds around two cups. The sugar bowl doubles as the tea pot's lid, with the cream jug nesting on top. The cream jug itself is lidded and this lid fits on the teapot after the "tower" has been taken down. All the pieces are finished in a golden-brown glaze and decorated with flowers painted in black. This attractive set is $5.50.

Tea Set Special

Now that I am on the subject of tea pots, I would like to mention the special I saw on English semi-porcelain tea sets. These came in three basic styles: round, "tucked" out and "tucked" in. All are plain white with gold trim and a wide assortment of floral designs. The tea pot is a good size and must hold between six to eight cups at the least (depending, too, of course on whether you favor small tea cups or the breakfast cup size). Matching cream jug and a covered sugar bowl with twin handles complete the set. These sets regularly sell for $5.95 but will be selling for $3.95 until the end of January.

I found a new excuse for not making donuts, and my ingenious family found the solution. It's amazing how clever they are when it comes to getting home-made donuts out of Mom! I found I was having quite a bit of difficulty getting the donuts out of the deep fry pan after they had cooked. My slotted spoons and spatulas tended to slip while forks broke the donuts open, flooding the cakey centre with oil if the donut dropped back in accidentally. My family suggested that I put a 65-cent wire basket into the oil before adding the donuts so that when I drew it out the cooked donuts would come too. It works great, and the basket is good for washing greens, or cooking french fries as well.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Guilty Feelings Not Necessary

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My three children and I drove 150 miles for a visit to my home-town recently. (My husband couldn't go. He was working.)

We stayed with my parents, but I contacted my in-laws so we could make plans to see them, too.

I think my in-laws are unreasonable. Let me explain: I married a widower with two small children. We now have a third child, also. Since these in-laws cared for the two children of my husband's former marriage until we wed, they figure my husband and I owe them something. Of course, we do. But how much?

They demanded that I drop off the two older children to visit them, and when I left town I could pick them up. They don't care to see me, or my other child.

I flatly refused, saying we would all come to see them, but no, they didn't want us. My mother-in-law even refused to talk to me.

I don't know what I have done except to try to give the children a home with a mother and father instead of grandparents. They seem to resent me for this.

Since they didn't want all my children, I refused to let them have the two older ones. Was I wrong?

I invited them to my home anytime to visit the little ones, but they refused. I'd like your views.

BEWILDERED

DEAR BEWILDERED: If you invited your in-laws to visit the children, you have no reason to feel guilty. Your husband should tell his parents that showing such obvious favoritism to his two older children creates problems that he and his family will have to live with, so to please be more reasonable.

DEAR ABBY: Medical science has sure given folks a lot of excuses for their shortcomings. We don't have any more drunks, tyrants, or ill-tempered and unreasonable people anymore. They are all "sick." Same goes for liars. I know a woman who would rather lie than tell the truth, and do you know what? I am told to have "compassion" for her because she's "sick." So now, lying is a disease, too! I would sure appreciate your comments on this.

CICERO

DEAR CICERO: People lie because they feel insecure, inadequate and inferior. It takes a truly healthy-minded courageous person to tell the truth, no matter how "bad" it makes him appear. So since lying is a symptom of a character deficiency, perhaps your friend IS "sick."

DEAR ABBY: I am a 52-year-old widow who will soon marry Paul, a very nice 55-year-old widower. Here is my problem: First let me explain that while dating I never wore the rings I got from my deceased husband because I didn't want to inhibit any man who might have an interest in me.

Paul and I didn't have an "official engagement," and certainly nothing was ever mentioned about a ring, but he "surprised" me with a lovely little diamond, and I do mean "little."

Abby, my first diamond is nearly three times the size of this one. (I had intended resetting it to wear after I married.) Now what shall I do? I hate to hurt Paul, but if I wear a diamond, I'd prefer wearing the larger one.

PERPLEXED

DEAR PERPLEXED: Reset the larger diamond and wear it on your right hand. But wear Paul's ring on your "engagement" finger.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "NICE BUT INSULTED": If a "nice" girl is constantly being "insulted" by propositions, she should check her appearance. There is something wrong with her packaging.

Donations had also been sent to the Salvation Army and the Cancer Fund.

For the Birds

VANCOUVER (CP)—At 74, Mrs. Stewart Bradley throws a youthful zest into her adopted hobby, bird-banding. Fifteen years ago, after learning to identify the more than 100 common birds of British Columbia, she was granted a permit to set up a bird-banding station at her home overlooking Vancouver harbor.

Fireplace Becomes Pivot of Home

Where does one put a fireplace when planning a new home? An outside wall used to be the most logical place, but with today's trend towards great use of glass for entire walls, the fireplace has moved to interior walls. In this way, the home owner can have his cake and eat it, too, in that he has the "indoor-outdoor" feeling created by the glass during balmy weather, and the warm, snug shelter provided by a fire, when the weather is cold.

Shown here is a great idea, both for placement and fireplace design, by architect Don Harms, in his own home. Instead of just being a hole in the wall, the fireplace juts into the space between living and dining rooms. Over half of the fireplace stands free, including the round flue, so that the fireplace functions as a partition, with open space above to the low ceiling of the dining room.

Use of materials has great interest, too, in that there is no attempt to conceal the basic construction of the fireplace, made of poured concrete. Lines of the wooden forms and the small air pockets clearly show, the texture a nice contrast to the smooth plaster walls and ceiling.

A redwood cap, almost pagoda-like in its outline, supplants the traditional mantel. The surface has been rubbed to erode the soft portions of the redwood, leaving the hard grain in a handsome pattern.

Debutante List Stands at Seven

The names of seven young women who will be introduced to society when the United Services Institution of Vancouver Island holds its annual Services Ball in the Empress Hotel on Friday, February 7 were released by Institution officials this week.

A first-year arts student at the University of Victoria is among those who will be presented to the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. John R. Nicholson at the gala affair. She is Miss Janice Louisa Melville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Melville, 500 Transit Road.

The 18-year-old student will be sponsored by her father. Her escort will be Mr. Dean Sawyer.

Three of this year's students are currently studying at the Institute of Adult Studies. They are the Misses Judy van Heard, Wendy Marie Ratcliffe and Susan Hope Sinclair.

Miss van Heard is 17 and the daughter of Mrs. D. Sinclair, 302 Vancouver Street. She will be sponsored by Mr. Robert Baker and escorted by Mr. Patrick Henry.

The 20-year-old Miss Ratcliffe is the daughter of Mrs. L. R. Ratcliffe of Duncan. She will be sponsored by Mr. W. W. Sinclair and escorted by Mr. Paul Thomas.

Lt.-Col W. J. Mosedale will sponsor Miss Sinclair, who will be escorted by Mr. Kenneth Lineham. She is the 19-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. N. Sinclair, 1526 Oakcrest Drive.

Two of this year's debutantes are Grade 12 students at Oak Bay Senior Secondary School. They are Miss Jill Elizabeth Chudleigh and Miss Judith Mary Hutchison.

Miss Chudleigh is 17 and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Chudleigh, 209 Stonehewer Place. Mrs. (Capt.) Chudleigh will sponsor her daughter.

Miss Hutchison will be sponsored by her father. She is the 17-year-old daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John A. Hutchison, 3293 Henderson Road.

The seventh name to be released is that of Miss Evelyn Elizabeth-Ann Hammond, a 17-year-old Grade 12 student at St. Margaret's School. She is the daughter of Mrs. Frank Hammond, 934 Foul Bay Road, and the late Mr. Hammond. She will be sponsored by Cmdr. A. C. Wurtele and escorted by Officer Cadet William Herrod.

Victoria Secretaries To Choose Best Boss

Greater Victoria members of the National Secretaries Association (International) decided to hold a "Boss of the Year" contest when 30 members and guests met for a recent meeting in the Executive House.

Vice-president and program chairman, Mrs. Gloria McCleave will be in charge of contest arrangements. A trophy will be presented at a luncheon in April.

O. Glyn Jones, island division public relations manager for the B.C. Telephone Company, was a guest speaker.

The chartering of the local chapter will take place on Saturday, Jan. 25, at a ceremony, to be held at the Imperial Inn at 2:30 p.m. The new group will be sponsored by the Vancouver chapter.

Mrs. Joyce Mair will be installed as president. Also to be installed are: vice-president, Mrs. Gloria McCleave; recording secretary, Mrs. Bunny Mallon; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Mary Jo Read, and treasurer, Miss Joan Island.

'FASCINATED' WITH EXPLOITS OF THE FUR TRADERS

New Zealander Becomes Authority on B.C.

By PAT DUFOUR

Gloria Strathern is a New Zealander. She's also blessed with those "itchy feet" which prompted so many of her countrymen to leave settled lives in Europe and seek their fortunes "down under". It's those "itchy feet" which brought her to Victoria last April.

If there's a main difference between Mrs. Strathern and other globe-trotters it's this; she also likes to cover a lot of ground in time, as well as geographical miles.

Attached to the University of Victoria, she is now working with Dr. Reg Roy, chairman of the university's social service research centre. Her assignment is the creation of a bibliography of British Columbia, dating from the time of the province's discovery to 1849.

Although many miles from her homeland, Mrs. Strathern feels that her work is a close link between the two countries.

"I've always liked to be involved in research and New Zealand's history, like British Columbia's, is cradled in the Pacific. As an example, both have a share in the lives of Captains Cook and Vancouver."

Mrs. Strathern also feels that the struggles of Dunedin, the district in the south of New Zealand where she lived for years, are parallel to B.C.'s in the early days.

"On a miniature scale, Dunedin faced the same challenges as B.C., being forced to build roads around mountains, and create a civilized society in an awesome locale."

Although on university staff, Mrs. Strathern spends most of her time at the provincial museum or archives, indexing from the time "the Spaniards first stubbed their toes on the land in the 1670s."

Most of the period in which Mrs. Strathern is involved is concerned with maritime exploration. She finds it anything but dull with its "characters" ranging from Spaniards, Russians, Canadian explorers from the east, to the Americans who came here via Oregon. She refuses to choose any favorites, although she admits that the fur traders were a remarkable breed, providing fascinating reading.

This is Gloria Strathern's third stop in Canada. She first worked at the University of Saskatchewan, and was book selector for the University of Toronto before she headed for the west coast.

Living history in reverse, she spent a year in England after she left New Zealand, researching for such organizations as the British Museum and the Colonial Office. Her present project is expected to take three years.

Since her arrival in Victoria, Mrs. Strathern has had little time to indulge in her two hobbies, music and theatre. She hopes to correct this and join local groups this coming fall.

For, fascinating though her wanderings into the past may be, she intends to avoid the risk of bypassing the present.

"It's important to get involved with people. Otherwise, you run the risk of becoming fossilized."

Give Youth to Your Complexion

Good results in complexion beauty are being achieved with a tropical oil that has unique properties to bring youth and peaches-and-cream loveliness to the skin. It ends wrinkle dryness and gives the complexion dewy loveliness. Many druggists here have been able to obtain this oil of Olay. Use it daily as you would a powder base and note how the complexion soon takes on a milky look.

11-Year-Olds ONLY
36 Eleven-Year-Olds from 9 Countries will Attend this Year's Village in Victoria.
4 Vancouver Island Children Will be Chosen and will be Hosts to the Visiting Delegations. All will be guests of the Vancouver Island Chapter!
Need Apply for the Thrilling Experience Of Attending the CHILDREN'S INTERNATIONAL SUMMER VILLAGES
To be held July 12 to Aug. 12, '69 IN VICTORIA!

WOULD YOUR CHILD QUALIFY?
The 4 Island delegates will be chosen for the expenses-paid session from applicants with the following qualifications:
★ Canadian resident on Vancouver Island or Gulf Islands.
★ Age 11 during the period of the village.
★ In good health and able to participate in all phases of an active camp program.
★ Have a desire to know and understand children from other lands
★ Recognize that he or she will be playing and mixing with children whose language, customs and habits are different.
★ Be willing and able to speak publicly about experiences gained at camp.

WHAT IS IT?
The CISV was conceived in 1946 by Dr. Doris Twitchell Allen, associate professor of pyschology at the University of Cincinnati. Children will attend from Germany, Costa Rica, Italy, Japan, Mexico, Norway, The Philippines, Sweden and the U.S. Two boys and two girls from each country with an adult chaperon.
WHY IS IT HELD?
The purpose of CISV is to better world understanding through the association of 11-year-olds from many nations. Through this contact with children of other races it is hoped they will learn that those speaking foreign languages are not strange people but basically like themselves with the same interests. The program will consist of games and sports, tours of local historic and tourist attractions, trips up-Island and to Vancouver.
WHERE and WHEN?
At Westerham School, 1765 Rockland Avenue, Victoria, July 12 to August 12, 1969.

It is supposed to be a blueberry cake but it is more appropriate as a blueberry batter pudding with a tangy orange sauce, recipes for both being given today. An added dividend is a big-time recipe designed to serve 48 people.

COOKING CAN BE FUN

By MARY MOORE

Orange Sauce Adds Zest to Blueberry Dish

If rules are really made to be broken I am going to do it. Furthermore, it is one of my own.

I have made a blueberry cake and the blueberries stained the batter blue. I thought "All is ruined!" but then tasted it. It was too easy to make and tasted too good to ignore. Sliced thinly and buttered, it is a sort of tea bread. To mask the blue I served it as a pudding with an orange sauce. This saved the day and gave it the eye-appeal that is so important.

Moore

One more item in connection with this is that I am giving amounts for a banquet requiring 48 servings. So conveners, please clip.

BLUEBERRY PUDDING (Cake?) (Family Size)

Batter: 2 cups sifted cake flour, 1 tablespoon baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, ¾ cup sugar, ¼ teaspoon nutmeg, ⅛ cup plus 1 tablespoon shortening, 2 small eggs (or 1½ large ones), ¾ cup milk, one 11-oz. package thawed fresh frozen blueberries (or drained 15-oz. can blueberries), grated rind one lemon.

Topping: Half cup sugar, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon.

Into a mixing bowl sift sifted flour, baking powder, salt, sugar and nutmeg. Cut in shortening with pastry blender until size of large peas. Add eggs, milk, blueberries and lemon rind and stir to barely mix.

Pour into standard loaf pan lined with buttered wax paper.

Mix together topping sugar and cinnamon and sprinkle all over top. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 65 min.

Serve warm as a dessert with:

ORANGE SAUCE made by stirring together in saucepan 2 tablespoons cornstarch, ½ cup (or ¾) sugar, and when mixed stir in over heat one 6-oz. can fresh frozen orange juice concentrate and 1½ cups boiling water until thick.

BANQUET SIZE BLUEBERRY PUDDING (above multiplied by four); 48 two-inch-square servings.

Batter: 8 cups sifted cake flour, 4 tablespoons (¼ cup) baking powder, 4 teaspoons salt, 3 cups sugar, 1 teaspoon nutmeg, 2¼ cups shortening, 6 eggs, 3 cups milk, four 11-oz. packages fresh frozen blueberries (or four 15-oz. cans drained blueberries).

Topping: 2 cups sugar, 1 teaspoon cinnamon.

METHOD: Make exactly as above except bake in two 13x9x2" pans. Multiply Orange Sauce ingredients by four.

Fabric Chart Simplifies Buying

Solution Required for Clinging Bonded Fabric

Dear Readers:

I have had many questions about the "clinging" quality of bonded fabrics. Seems that even if the garment has been lined, when it is worn, it still clings like sin. Our readers have even used static-free taffeta slips to no avail. If any of you have solved the problem of knits that cling, please write me at once so that I may pass this information on to eager readers.

Dear Eunice Farmer,

I find it very frustrating to purchase more fabric than necessary simply because it was wider than the pattern called for. Is there any type of chart that would list comparative yardages to be purchased in varying fabric widths? When fabric is expensive, it becomes very costly to purchase more fabric than necessary.—Mrs. R. T.

Dear Mrs. R.T.:

The following fabric conversion chart was worked out by the government and has proved satisfactory in most cases for us. Please remember one thing: when choosing a pattern where you must add additional width to the side seams, you should decide the correct fabric requirement from the next largest pattern size.

If you would like your very own purse-size copy of the fabric conversion chart, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Eunice Farmer in care of this newspaper.

FABRIC CONVERSION CHART

Fabric Width	32"	35"-36"	39"	41"	44"-45"	50"	52"-54"	58"-60"
Yardage	1⅞	1¾	1½	1½	1⅜	1¼	1⅛	1
	2¼	2	1¾	1¾	1⅝	1½	1⅜	1⅛
	2½	2¼	2	2	1¾	1⅝	1½	1⅜
	2¾	2½	2¼	2¼	2⅛	1¾	1⅝	1⅝
	3⅛	2⅞	2½	2½	2¼	2	1⅞	1¾
	3⅜	3⅛	2¾	2¾	2½	2¼	2	1⅞
	3¾	3⅜	3	2⅞	2¾	2⅜	2¼	2
	4	3¾	3¼	3⅛	2⅞	2⅝	2⅜	2¼
	4⅜	4¼	3½	3⅜	3⅛	2¾	2⅝	2⅜
	4⅝	4½	3¾	3⅝	3⅜	3	2¾	2⅝
	5	4¾	4	3⅞	3⅝	3¼	2⅞	2¾
	5¼	5	4¼	4⅛	3⅞	3⅜	3⅛	2⅞

Add Additional ¼ Yard:

- For wide span conversion in fabric
- For nap or one-directional printed fabrics
- For styles with sleeves cut in one piece with body of garment

Firemen Remove Caps, Dynamite

CEDAR — Blasting caps and dynamite in a burning farm building had to be removed before firemen could go into action Friday night.

"The caps were what we worried about and we got them out first thing," said fire chief Bill Shaw. "The dynamite would have just burned."

The 16 firemen had the fire out in a short time.

After the blaze, 20-degree temperatures froze couplings on hoses carrying water uphill from the river.

The farm building on Aikenhead Road, near Nanaimo River, was owned by Herb Armishaw. The upper portion was gutted but milk storage equipment and stainless steel tanks were saved.

No estimate of damage was available Friday night and cause of the fire was not determined, said Mr. Shaw. An investigation was begun this morning.

DANGEROUS FLOODING EXPECTED

DUNCAN — Dangerous flood conditions can now be anticipated because of the heavy snowfall but necessary steps have been taken to prevent any flash floods, Alderman John Cannon said Thursday.

Mr. Cannon, a director on the Cowichan Valley Regional Board, said water level, rainfall and snowfall readings are now being taken at Lake Cowichan and Duncan as well as tidal heights at Cowichan Bay.

"The only weak link in this warning system is a daily check of the rate that Lake Cowichan rises," Mr. Cannon said.

He said the regional board will contact the forest service to request re-establishment of previous daily level checks.

REWARD OFFERED IN SWAN KILLING

DUNCAN — B.C. Wildlife Association today offered a $500 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of hunters who killed four young swans in North Cowichan during the Christmas season.

Game warden Jack Fox found the swans along with some shotgun shells, a pair of binoculars and a duck, on a Herd Road property.

Jack Fielden, president of Cowichan Fish and Game Association, announced the reward. He described the killing of the rare birds as "an act of wanton destruction spurred by ignorance, stupidity and lack of training."

Mr. Fielden outlined a program of hunter training which the association has proposed to the provincial government under which prospective hunters will be required to identify various types of game before being issued a licence.

The local association also sponsors a small bore rifle club which practises every Monday night at the old Eagle Hall range. Practices will be moved to a new rifle range on Vaux Road when the weather improves.

4-H Club Worker, Leader Dies at 59

DUNCAN—Funeral services will be held at 1:30 p.m. Monday for Dorothy Winnifred Sibbald, 59, who died in Cowichan District Hospital on Friday.

Mrs. Sibbald was well known in the Cowichan Valley for her active participation in 4-H clubs and Duncan and Cowichan Lamb Club.

Born in Halifax, she completed her education at Esquimalt and married in Victoria in 1942 where she lived until 1947.

She had lived the last 21 years in Cobble Hill, where she worked with Duncan and Cowichan Lamb Club and was leader of Duncan 4-H Club for eight years.

She travelled east many times as a representative of B.C. purebred sheep breeders.

Mrs. Sibbald is survived by her husband, Hamish, and one son, Ronald Gordon, in Malton, Ont.

She also leaves her parents, Lt.-Col. and Mrs. G. Rycroft, and a brother, Max Rycroft, and sister, Mrs. C. Cant, all of Victoria.

Services will be held at Hirst Funeral Chapel conducted by Rev. C. R. Day. Cremation will follow.

Injunction Rejected

VANCOUVER (CP) — Heavy construction companies Friday were refused a British Columbia Supreme Court injunction which would have declared a teamsters' strike illegal and banned pickets.

Northern Construction Co. and J. W. Stewart Ltd., along with Canadian Comstock Co., had contended there might have been irregularities in the union's strike vote.

But the County Judge E. E. Hinkson, sitting as a local judge of B.C. Supreme Court, held that balloting was properly conducted. Strike against 18 firms in a pay dispute started Monday.

Shawnigan Loans Approved

SHAWNIGAN LAKE — National Housing Act loans were approved Friday for construction of student residences and administration building at Shawnigan Lake school for boys and Strathcona Lodge school for girls.

The 50-year loans total $1,690,000—all but $500,000 of which goes to the girls' school.

George Ferguson, bursar, said the loan will be used to replace Copman's House, a wooden frame building built in the thirties, which burned down in August, 1968.

Since then six mobile units have housed the 100 students.

Head mistress Mrs. C. C. Guthrie said the $1,190,000 loan for three new residences at Strathcona will accommodate 150 students. Provision is also being made for accommodating 10 students in an existing building.

A separate dining room administration and student lounge building will also be constructed.

A total of 200 students will be accommodated within two years, Mrs. Guthrie said. "We hope to have it operational by September. We've been working up a plan for the last year and can now move ahead much more quickly."

Old Shawnigan Lake Lodge must be demolished first. The former hotel, built in 1905, started as a school in 1927.

DEEPSEA SHIPS IN PORT

(All cargo is lumber unless otherwise stated. Place names are destination, not ports of registry.)

Victoria—Piha, U.S.; Achilles, Alaska; Amstelhof, China (grain).

Ladysmith — Yeikaku Maru, Japan.

Chemainus — Belisland, Australia.

Harmac — Paolo D'Amico, Italy; Hong Kong Amber, Orient.

Nanaimo—Maas Lloyd, South Africa.

Campbell River—Hosei Maru, Japan.

Port Alberni — Ostrogozhsk, Russia; J. V. Clyne, U.K.; Fernwind, U.S.; Brimanger, South America.

APPOINTED southern area logging manager of Crown Zellerbach's timber department is Gordon Naylor who will be based at the Ladysmith office. He will be responsible for Ladysmith, Nanaimo Lakes, Nitinat and Courtenay operations. He succeeds William Chalmers who retires at the end of this month.

RECEIVER APPOINTED

VANCOUVER (CP)—E. C. Dobell, president of Cerna Copper Mines, formerly Cowichan Copper, has put the company in the hands of a receiver, a spokesman said Friday.

Vancouver Stock Exchange delisted Cerna Friday for "failing to maintain listing requirements."

S. B. Fowlds has been appointed receiver for the company which operates the Sunro Mine near Jordan River.

False Pretences Net Jail Term

DUNCAN — Wilfred Philibert of Crofton was sentenced to a total of 80 days in Okalla prison farm in Burnaby Thursday after pleading guilty in magistrate's court to three separate charges of false pretences involving NSF cheques.

The charges are to run consecutively. The offences took place in Chemainus and restitution was ordered.

Mr. Philibert told court he was unemployed and separated from his wife and family.

Building Drop Is 'Sad State'

CAMPBELL RIVER — For the first time in many years Campbell River is having to take a back seat in construction growth.

Until the end of 1967 this town was the second fastest growing community in the province, but, in 1968, the value of building permits nose-dived more than 100 per cent.

Municipal figures show that $3,714,463 in building permits were issued in 1967 compared to $1,590,934 in 1968.

Mayor Skip McDonald said for the town, it is a sad state of affairs.

CREATED A LULL

"NHA money not being readily available has created a lull and we can't hope for more apartment construction as we're over supplied for the next year or two.

"We didn't have any school construction in '68 and that makes quite a difference," he added.

In the territory surrounding the city of Courtenay and this municipality, 226 private dwellings were built in 1967 and only 120 last year. Commercial construction in the same area plunged from $1,950,000 in 1967 to $259,000 in 1968.

Local accountant Bill Smith said he believed the 1967 surge could be attributed in part to Gold River and Sayward development.

"You have to consider that there was a lot of material moving through this town destined for these other areas in 1967 and that always effects business," he said.

Social Credit Won't Contest Byelection

NANAIMO (CP) — The Social Credit party decided Friday not to enter a candidate in the Feb. 10 federal byelection in Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands, in which T. C. Douglas, national NDP leader, is entered.

The party voted unanimously to allow members to cast their ballots independent of party lines.

Eric Winch, a former magistrate, is contesting the riding for the Liberals and the Progressive Conservatives have nominated Dr. Magnus Verbrugge.

The vacancy was created by the death last year of NDP MP Colin Cameron.

Lot of 'Hangups' Being Youngest MP

By ED GOULD
Times Duncan Bureau

DUNCAN—Being the youngest member in the House of Commons has plenty of hangups, says Lorne Nystrom, the 22-year-old New Democratic member for Yorkton-Melville.

"When I first went to the House I was just like Lincoln Alexander (Lib.—Hamilton), the first Negro member ever to sit in the House.

●

"The older members really put the pressure on us. Everything you say or do is subjected to careful scrutiny. They watched us to see how many mistakes we would make in procedure. It's just like living under glass."

Mr. Nystrom, who was interviewed this week while on a speaking tour to youth groups in the area, said the pressure has lifted a little now that "I have started to prove myself."

"A couple of old guys took me under their wings and gave me some good advice," he said. He did not say what the advice was but one adviser was NDP whip Stanley Knowles and the other was none other than former Conservative chief, John Diefenbaker.

"Probably because we both come from Saskatchewan," he admits. "He was very friendly for the first two weeks, after that he cooled off a bit. I think Mr. Diefenbaker has the image of himself as the elder statesman whose job it was to look after the green, young kids."

●

As much of his mail comes from the big cities as from his largely rural home riding. "Mostly students asking about student power and youth involvement in politics," he said. "And lots of letters from teenagers, for some reason."

Born on a farm 110 miles from Yorkton, the six-foot-three inch bachelor was born of a Swedish father and English mother ("she detested the day I decided to run but has got used to the idea now") and has no strong attachment for monarchy or commonwealth.

"I couldn't care less about the monarchy," he said. "It's an antiquated institution. Like the commonwealth, it has a tradition, cultural purpose. But I think Canada needs to withdraw from regional economic and political pacts and concentrate on a role in international government."

NYSTROM
. . . urges Biafran aid

Mr. Nystrom recently returned from a trip to Biafra where he visited a guerrilla training camp and other areas where Ibo tribesmen have entrenched themselves for a fight to the death against the Nigerians. "The Biafrans are sincerely convinced they will all be killed," he said.

●

Although it is "partially" a religious war between Moslems and Christian factions as well as other issues, "I have never seen such beautiful co-operation.

"When relief supplies arrive, it ceases to be Protestant, Catholic or Jewish—just food for starving people."

After his trip there in November with Ralph Stewart, the Liberal member from Cochrane, Ont., sponsored by B'nai B'rith, he was convinced between 6,000 and 9,000 persons a day—mostly children—were starving to death.

He said: "Britain could end the war there if she wanted to but she won't because Nigeria would no longer be the showpiece of British democracy in Africa; she's afraid of Balkanization of Africa; she wants the oil, and she's afraid if she steps out the Russians will come in even more than they already are, and the country will go Communist."

●

He has made the Biafran situation a personal crusade through aid to the Biafran Christmas Relief Fund and helping organize the shipment of 3,500 tons of foodstuff which was to have left Thursday for the breakaway African state.

"My biggest disappointment in coming back to Canada was Prime Minister Trudeau's interpretation of the situation, his refusal to take it to the United Nations, or even communicate with Biafran officials."

Every Woman May Now Quickly

Lift Her Face Out Of Winter Lines, Wrinkles and Aging Dryness

. . . thanks to the "European Discovery" CEF-600

Helps Every Complexion Regain and Retain The Younger Look by Immediately Counteracting Effects of Winter's Icy Grip

No matter if your skin is typed dry, normal or even oily . . . no matter whether you enjoy being outdoors or prefer indoor protection . . . both frigid arctic air and overheated dry rooms dehydrate, drain skin of water and deprive it of the necessary moisture that pushes skin up and out to keep it as smooth, firm and wrinkle-free as the day you were married. And now, during the social season, when you particularly want to look your youngest best, "old man winter" works overtime to dry out and make your skin on face and neck flabby, sagging, rough, chapped and weatherbeaten. You look and feel years older than your age. And your husband . . . it makes him feel older too!

Your Chance for a Quicker Winter Youth

Medical journals have acclaimed the "European Discovery" known scientifically as CEF-600 and now embodied as the active ingredient in the cosmetic-like lotion named "2ND DEBUT." Apply "2ND DEBUT" nightly before retiring and daily before make-up. Day and night, it is constantly carrying water into the skin . . . counteracting all the skin drying effects of outside cold and inside overheating that chaps, dries, wrinkles your skin and makes it sag.

How 2ND DEBUT Works Quickly

Once again skin is moisturized, fresh, dewey radiant. Once again those aging lines and wrinkles are pushed up and out. Once again skin on face and throat is smoother and years younger in appearance. No matter how weather beaten your complexion may be, a youth-like color glows from within. Your complexion seems to have been born beautiful. Only 2ND DEBUT can bring about this fantastic skin youthifying miracle . . . in spite of winter's drying action!

For Extra Dry Skin— Or Mi-Lady In A Hurry— 2ND DEBUT With Double Strength CEF 1200

New DOUBLE STRENGTH 2ND DEBUT contains CEF 1200 instead of CEF 600. It acts much faster to smooth and flatten skin made scaly by winter's icy grip . . . and it works quicker to push up and out the more deeply seated lines and wrinkles.

Important To Regular Users of 2ND DEBUT

Particularly in these winter months, in time will your skin revert to the lined and wrinkled condition it was, unless you keep using 2ND DEBUT day and night. Your skin is constantly exfoliating . . . old skin flakes off and away and new skin is constantly being born. In winter weather it is more important than ever that you keep applying 2ND DEBUT before retiring and before make-up if you want to retain your soft, smooth youthful looking complexion. Users of 2ND DEBUT with CEF 600 are urged to switch to 2ND DEBUT with CEF 1200 . . . double strength and to use it all winter long.

2nd Début with CEF 600 and CEF 1200

Split Christians Like Drunk Abstainers

"Divided Christians are like drunken members of a temperance society," said Dean Brian Whitlow, preaching in Metropolitan United Church.

"They deny the very thing they claim to share."

The dean was one of about 100 Anglican ministers who preached in United Churches throughout Vancouver Island as part of a ministerial exchange between the two denominations.

He said the church has many branches and they can all bear fruit so long as there is a living unity in diversity.

"By living unity I mean common allegiance to a living centre, regardless of form or dogma. Being a Christian means belonging to a group of people who have been drawn together by the life, death and ascension of Jesus Christ.

"Our Lord did not found a religion called Christianity. The many individual parts are held together by a mutual dependence on a living centre.

"Saint Paul compares the church to a building held in place by a great cornerstone which is Christ."

DEEP DIVISIONS

Dean Whitlow said Saint Paul and the pioneer Christians would have been scandalized by the divisions now existing.

Yet these divisions go deep and cannot lightly be denied.

"Only determined men of goodwill can attempt to remove the causes of division and draw men of different traditions together. Their task is not easy and the paths they follow should be labelled honesty and love."

Dean Whitlow said that, while the Anglican Church is distrustful of papal autocracy, it is conscious of a deep affinity with Catholic traditions.

"We have passed through the cleansing fires of the Reformation but we still recognize many pre-Reformation traditions as worthwhile.

Dean Whitlow pointed out that the Anglican Church itself has many differences of tradition.

In Victoria for instance:

St. Barnabas Anglican Church, with its vestments, incense and elaborate ceremonies, is much like a Roman Catholic church.

St. John's Anglican avoids ceremonial and presents a plainer form of service, similar to that to that of the United and other Christian churches.

Christ Church Cathedral uses a form of service different from both.

"We believe we are fully Catholic and fully Protestant," Dean Whitlow said, "and the Holy Eucharist is our chief Sunday service."

UNION NOT EASY

Union between such a diversified faith and that of the United Church will not be easy.

"Yet we are agreed that our aim must be to find a way into a viable and visible union with each other.

"To accomplish it, we need honesty and we need love. A hasty, ill-considered and shallow agreement would carry with it the seed of its own destruction."

SOLOIST with the Sanctuary Choir in Metropolitan United Church Sunday morning will be Victoria soprano Grace Hanning. She will sing I Walk Today Where Jesus Walked. The choir will sing With Gladness We Worship.

In another sermon, Rev. H. Gordon Walker, rector of St. David - by - the - Sea Anglican Church, told United Church congregations at Gordon Head and Cordova Bay that the Anglican and United Churches are now officially engaged.

"We are now courting one another and our objective is matrimony. We hope to give birth to a baby — a new church, the child of two parents who are learning to love and trust each other.

LIFE OF OWN

"The new church inheriting basic characteristics from both parents, but developing a life of its own. This way the new church may become an effective part of the rising generation with its new world society."

Mr. Walker said a good union can be achieved because both denominations are in agreement on essentials of faith.

"What keeps us apart?" he asked. "The same thing that keeps water and oil from mixing—our differences."

Mr. Walker said God's people are identified by basic differences.

"We have no real choice but to be ourselves and we ought to allow others to be their true selves. But we do have a choice. We can either accept or reject one another."

Mr. Walker said the experience of the Greater Victoria Council of Churches is that a divided church is not capable of meeting human needs in modern cities.

UNITED CHURCH ministers throughout Vancouver Island will preach in Anglican churches Sunday morning as part of an interchange plan arranged by a committee of the two organizations. From left are Rev. Albert King, preaching in Christ Church Cathedral; Dr. H. W. Kerley of Fairfield United in St. Matthias; Rev. Robert Morris of First United in St. John's Church.

Leger Denies He's Prepared To Quit Lepers

MONTREAL (CP) — Paul-Emile Cardinal Leger has reaffirmed his desire and intention to serve African lepers in a letter to Fame Pereo, an organization which he founded in 1962 to fight world hunger.

The message was sent to mark World Day for the Lepers Jan. 26. It also served to discount rumors which have circulated recently about the cardinal's disillusionment with missionary work.

"Strange rumors have been spread about me," the cardinal said in his letter, made public here Friday.

"I was ill . . . discouragement was dogging my steps . . . one disappointment came on the heels of the other. But I know that your confidence was not in any way shaken by these false reports invented by pessimistic minds.

"I now feel that I am ready to press on to the next lap of the journey, which will take me to the very heart of a leper colony.

"By the time you have read these lines, I shall be installed in Nyamsong in the diocese of Bafia, Cameroon."

Cardinal Leger, who retired as Archbishop of Montreal last year to devote his life to African lepers, said he encountered many obstacles to his missionary efforts, but did not elaborate.

Cardinal Leger plans to establish special dispensaries on wheels for lepers in particularly difficult straits.

Clergy and Laity Show Division Over Church Aims

TORONTO (CP) — Anglican leaders have expressed disappointment at the response to a questionnaire circulated across Canada on the church's role in modern society.

The questionnaire was sent to some 7,000 Anglicans, clerical and lay, most of the latter active in parish administration or organizations. Replies were received from fewer than 500.

The survey showed that a majority of laymen and laywomen held that the church's primary purpose was "to communicate the Christian gospel to society" and "to provide inspiration and strength for daily life." The clergy upheld "worship" and "identifying and interpreting God's action in society" as the most important purposes.

At the same time, both clergy and laity saw issues involving social and political action such as hunger, poverty, youth problems, race relations, international affairs and housing as the great questions of today.

The traditional roles of the church ranked the highest for both clergy and laity, but few respondents felt the church should become involved in social or political action.

CAUSE OF CONFLICT

"The differences between clergy and laity over the church's primary purpose could be a cause of conflict and dissatisfaction within the church," said Canon Graham H. Tucker, consultant in lay training in the division of parish and diocesan services, commenting on the survey.

"Presumably those who answered the questionnaire see the church as providing motivation, compassion, etc., based on the gospel, but that the action and involvement must be done through other channels."

Recognition of the responsibilities of clergy, particularly in busy urban parishes, was noted in many replies, but there was considerable criticism of the ministry and with the conduct of parochial affairs. Lay respondents felt that high priority should be give to clergy retraining, with emphasis on youth and family life. Most of the replies favored establishment of more lay training centres in Canada.

"A new approach to laymen's work is needed—something to fire the apathetic types," wrote a churchwoman in the 45-54 age group. "We need a Robert Kennedy in the church just to stir us up, or a Trudeau."

DISTINCTION NOTED

Several clerical respondents noted the occupational distinction between the clergy and the laity. One reply said: "As long as the clergy personify the church, and as long as the laity are content to leave things this way, there is little hope for renewal. The clergy must be prepared to serve the laity so that the laity, as the church, can serve the world."

The survey indicated that most men feel men's organizations are irrelevant, out of date or dying out. On the other hand, women respondents gave a favorable rating to women's organizations in the church.

Two-thirds of the respondents preferred flexible, short-term groups organized around projects, instead of continuing men's and women's organizations. There was general recognition that the church needs to change, comments indicating that this referred to such matters as worship, and more democratic leadership and administration in parishes.

Ecumenical Services Scheduled

An interdenominational service will be held in Knox Presbyterian Church, 2964 Richmond Avenue, Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

Preacher will be Rev. F. W. Hayes of St. Alban's Anglican Church. Also participating will be Rev. Frederick Knebel of the Church of the Good Shepherd (Lutheran) and Jack Wester, an elder of Knox Presbyterian Church.

Congregations involved are St. Alban's, St. Barnabas, St. Philip's, Church of the Good Shepherd, Belmont United and Knox Presbyterian.

The service, sponsored by Greater Victoria Council of Churches, is the first of a series to be held on the third Sunday of each month in one of the participating churches.

"After each service there will be a social hour at which members of the different congregations may meet and mingle," says Rev. Alan Beaton, minister of Knox Presbyterian.

Witnesses Plan Rally

More than 1,000 Jehovah's Witnesses are expected to attend a rally in S. J. Willis junior secondary school at 7 p.m. today to hear Donald Malpass, service director of Jehovah's Witnesses for Canada.

"Mr. Malpass will discuss how Christians must guard themselves against the rising indifference to God's Word," a spokesman said.

Mr. Malpass will visit up-Island points before returning to his home in Toronto.

'We Have Duty to Country' Evangelist Tells Soldier Son

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

From war-torn Vietnam, a U.S. marine wrote to his father: "I killed my first man today."

Major James Henry of the Salvation Army sensed a mood of desolation in this solitary sentence. No explanation followed. Nothing was added. The letter went on to other things.

"But I knew my boy expected a comment from me as a follower of Jesus Christ," Major Henry said.

"I replied telling him tp place his problem in Christ's hands, and I reminded him that Christ told us to 'render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's

"This means we have a duty to our country as well as to our God."

Tall, vigorous Major Henry has been a Salvation Army crusader for nearly 30 years. But he's no pacifist.

'MUST DEFEND'

"It's too easy to be a conscientious objector," he said. "A man knows instinctively he must defend that which is precious to him. War may be wicked in principle but you don't stop war by refusing to participate in it." Major Henry said his son won a decoration while serving in Vietnam. Now he is back home playing in the Salvation Army band at Atlanta, Georgia.

Visiting Victoria for the first time, Major Henry said he found nothing of the "English reserve" among Victoria people.

"They're delightful, very outgiving and very helpful. I love Victoria so much I want to come back here with my family and spend a holiday."

Major Henry conducted a series of evangelistic meetings in Victoria Salvation Army Citadel Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

Sunday at 11 a.m. he will speak in Esquimalt Citadel, returning to Victoria Citadel for the 7 p.m. service.

Born at Crozet in the Blue Mountains of Virginia, Major Henry, 49, became a salvation soldier at Ashland, Kentucky, at the age of 20. After 20 years as a corps officer, he was appointed a territorial evangelist.

Spending about 30 days a year at home, the major travels the rest of the time in the U.S. and Canada. He flew to Victoria from Cumberland, Maryland, and from here he goes to Cushing, Oklahoma.

He believes the world is ripe for revival and a re-dedication to Christ.

"People all over the world were moved when the Apollo astronauts recited the Creation story from Genesis while orbiting in outer space.

"The astronauts felt they were with God. They saw His handiwork at first hand, and the millions who watched on TV shared their experience."

HOPE FOR YOUTH

Major Henry described the religious inspiration emanating from the transmission as incalculable—particularly for millions of young people who are looking for an objective in living.

"These youngsters are looking for a cause, a flag to follow, a song to sing. They turn to drink and drugs when they feel life is cruel and aimless—that nothing and nobody cares for them.

"Our job is to show that Jesus Christ is still the answer; that he can lead us to a rich and satisfying way of life based on love and mutual interest."

Speaking from experience, Major Henry said most people who turn to drink and drugs do so because of a feeling of being unloved.

Sometimes they are unconscious of this feeling and it may go back to a childhood in which mothers were too busy working to make them feel wanted.

Major Henry said the Salvation Army fights the drink and drug menace by establishing rehabilitation centres.

"The success we have had in this field is our greatest inspiration."

Eagle Nest Sit-in Helps Biologist Compile Material

Dave Hancock once spent nine hours sitting in an eagle's nest with his wife and two large baby eagles.

The nest-sitting incident took place a few years ago at Barkley Sound on the west coast while the Hancocks were waiting for a friend to return with their boat and camera to take a picture of them in the nest.

"Actually it wasn't all that bad," the director of the Wildlife Conservation Centre on Island View Beach, said. "Lyn and I had only been married about six months, and it was one of the first chances we had to talk things over."

His main complaint was that the eagle's nest was smaller than average. Usually they measure 10 or 12 feet across, with plenty of room for four people.

EAGLE ADVENTURES

It was one of several amusing incidents related by the biologist Friday night during his slide-lecture, Adventures With Eagles, in the Newcombe Auditorium at the Provincial Museum.

His lecture led off a new series sponsored by the museum and featuring wildlife conservation experts. It is held every second Friday.

The Hancocks have spent several summers flying into remote coastal spots on the west coast of Vancouver Island, Triangle Island at the northern tip, Bella Bella and other little fishing villages.

Sponsored by the Canadian Audubon Association, the Hancock study of the bald eagle's growth and habitat has resulted in a collection of hundreds of color slides.

The task of tagging young eagles means climbing the trees in which they build their huge nests, the biologist said.

"When you lean over a nest, you get the most surprised looks from eagles," he said.

"People often ask me if I've ever been attacked by full grown eagles. Well, they're actually quite shy, and prefer to fly around or perch on some branch and wait for you to go."

STORIES NOT TRUE

He said legends about ferocious eagles carrying off lambs, calves or children in their sharp talons are not true. The full grown bird weighs about 11 pounds and can carry objects up to only one-third of its own weight.

When handling the birds, the main danger is in the thrashing claws and, if you can get hold of the feet, you have little to fear from the beak.

Information contained on the tags includes the bird's age, date of tagging and the location. If the eagle is later found, the tag gives clues as to its migration habits.

"You hope you never get the information on the tag back because it probably means the bird has been shot or dies."

Mr. Hancock said the bald eagle population in the United States once numbered in the tens of thousands, but indiscriminate shooting has lowered the number to around 5,000.

Experts estimate the number of mating birds in the U.S. at 500, about half the number of mating birds on Vancouver Island.

Fishermen along the B.C. coast are often guilty of shooting the eagles "because to them they're just something to shoot at. They think the eagle population is unlimited."

The Hancocks once found 21 eagles that had been shot by an official of the department of fisheries. Officials of the department are no longer permitted to shoot the birds, the biologist said.

He also showed slides of some of the other animals that board at his home at 3215 Island View, including Sam, a fur seal, Tom, a 170-pound cougar, and Gypsy, a four-month-old female Gibbon.

"I have Lyn to thank for being able to keep these pets. She's the one who cleans out their cages and cleans up after them."

Between slide sessions, Mrs. Hancock read poems about the animals written by Grade 4 and 5 pupils in her classes at Monterey Elementary.

Kiwanis Clubs Installations

Local Kiwanis clubs will install new officers tonight in the Empress Hotel Ballroom.

Oak Bay, Victoria-Downtown and Victoria "Ss. Beaver" clubs will attend ceremonies starting at 6 p.m.

Dinner starts at 7 with installation slated for 7:30. Entertainment and dancing follows.

Nominations For Bishop Awaited

Nominations for the office of Anglican Bishop of British Columbia (Vancouver Island) will be considered by a committee of the Anglican synod Monday at 8 p.m.

The meeting will be held in the synod office, 912 Vancouver Street, Victoria.

Nominations are expected from every Anglican parish on Vancouver Island.

Voting will take place at an extraordinary session of the synod (parliament) in Christ Church Cathedral, Friday, Feb. 21.

Only elected delegates to the synod are eligible to vote. They number 252 and represent 55 parishes on Vancouver Island and adjacent islands.

BIRDWATCHER FIRST?

Strange Young Gull Creates Big Flutter

By ROSEMARY SPEIRS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A strange young gull, with buff-colored legs and dark feathers showing faintly on his back, ended his ocean-spanning wanderings at a collector's hands near the north end of the Welland Canal just before Christmas.

If he turns out to be the bird that Dan Salisbury of Beaverdams, Ont., thinks he is, then he ought to have been somewhere off the coast of Scandinavia.

The National Museum in Ottawa has confirmed Salisbury's identification of his gull as a European species, an immature lesser black-backed gull whose distinctive yellow legs and sooty back are not yet apparent.

Now the bird is off to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington for final confirmation.

If he's right, Mr. Salisbury, a 24-year-old surveyor for the St. Lawrence Seaway, will have spotted the first lesser black-backed gull ever seen in Canada.

The gull was the only Canadian "first" reported as traditional year-end counts put hundreds of birdwatchers, their necks strung with field glasses, out into snowy woods and sideroads to tally winter bird life.

WEST POPULATION LOW

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press of bird censuses taken near major cities showed record bird counts for some areas, identification of several unusual species, and an unusually low bird population in the West.

In Vancouver a watcher spotted a white-throated sparrow, usually found in the district only in summer. Near Pickering, Ont., a Boreal chickadee was counted although this bird is normally found in the spruce forests about 200 miles to the north. Off Fort Amherst, at the entrance to the harbor of St. John's, Nfld., a bald eagle was spotted.

Colorful Bohemian waxwings, possibly driven from the northwest by a shortage of their favorite mountain ash berries, turned up in unusual numbers in the Maritimes and also were plentiful in the West

The year-end census of Canadian birds began in 1900 when the editor of a bird magazine began the count as a means of informing readers about occurrences of birds in parts of Canada and the United States.

It was also an alternative to the "side-hunt" annual slaughter of birds still popular around 1900. Binoculars replaced the shotgun as the count grew in popularity.

This year's census turned up record counts in the Atlantic provinces.

TOTAL 'INCREDIBLE'

The Audubon Society of St. John's, Nfld., sighted 35 species, an increase over the 27 sighted in 1967, and also found "an incredible total" of 14,012 individual birds, says Dr. William Threlfall of Memorial University.

He credited an abundance of food for the large count of birds, many of whom normally would have been at sea or moved south at this time of year.

Included were 107 great black-backed gulls, 2,500 herring gulls, 3,808 American robins, 4,500 starlings, 404 evening grosbeaks, almost 500 common redpolls, 450 pine siskins and a kingfisher.

Mild weather also kept birds lingering along the coastal areas of Nova Scotia where a high 74 different species were counted Dec. 21 and 71 species in a second census Dec. 28.

Nova Scotia birdwatchers tallied two species of warbler, a woodcock, a pipit and two Bohemian waxwings. A common murre and a razor-billed auk turned up in Halifax harbor.

New Brunswick spotters found 52 species, including unusually large numbers of pine grosbeaks and redpolls and more Bohemian waxwings than ever before. Thirty of the waxwings were counted at Fredericton alone.

At Point Lepreau, N.B., a count of seabirds turned up large numbers of razorbills and kittiwakes.

FOUGHT WINTER SNOW

Montreal's count ended with a record 48 species and a total of 12,834 birds spotted, including a newcomer for the Christmas census, the rusty blackbird.

Toronto birdwatchers reached a record total of 90 species, one up on the 89 recorded in 1963.

Birdwatchers fought continuous flurries and sleet in the area to record unusual numbers of seven species. There were 19 canvasbacks, 924 common goldeneyes, 310 bufleheads, 6,632 old squaws, two king eiders, 1,680 black-capped chickadees and five Bohemian waxwings.

Winnipeg census-takers found 23 species, with rare sightings for that time of year of two flickers, four short-eared owls, seven crows and one grackle. About 400 Bohemian waxwings were counted.

At Regina' co-ordinator Al Binnie said 26 species were counted in below-zero weather, down 10 from the previous years. Watchers noticed a shortage of snowy and great horned owls, usually plentiful in the area.

Snow and freezing temperatures were blamed for a low count of 116 species in the Vancouver area. Among them were four bluejays—227 of this species were counted last year—two barn owls, a short-eared owl, skylarks and goldfinches.

Mather, of Bamfield, B.C. The wedding will take place April 5, 1969, at 7 p.m. in St. Dunstan's Anglican Church.

Weddings

Halkett — Gaffney

Central Baptist Church was the scene of a pretty Christmas candlelight wedding on December 20, 1968 at 7:30 p.m. when Sharon Judith, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Warren Gaffney of Victoria, and the late Mrs. Dorothy Gaffney, became the bride of Mr. Murray Norman Halkett of Los Angeles, California, only son of Mr. and Mrs. William Halkett of Victoria. The double ring ceremony was solemnized by Reverend John Moore. Soloist, Miss Linda Falconer, accompanied on the organ by Mrs. Andrew Yeats, sang "The Wedding Prayer" during the ceremony and "Whither Thou Goest" during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was elegant in a floor-length gown of white matte elysee. The high wedding ring neckline and lily point sleeves accented the empire waistline and slim skirt. A detachable train fell from a bridal bow at the shoulders. The headpiece, a small floral covered cap, held a full flowing cathedral train. She carried a large floral-styled bow of wide red velvet ribbon accented with three large white mums encircled with pine needles.

The bride was attended by Miss Carol Dohms, Saskatoon, Sask. as maid of honor; her sister Miss Marnie Gaffney of Victoria, Miss Gail Dunsmore, Winnipeg, Manitoba, Miss Donna King, Prince George, B.C. and Mrs. Janis Overgaard, Dawson Creek, B.C. as bridesmaids. They were lovely in identical floor-length gowns of red velvet fashioned in a slim empire style. Red velvet ribbon entwined the curls of their ringlet styled hairdos and they carried white fur muffs accented with two small red poinsettas. Mr. Bruce MacFarlane attended as best man and guests were ushered by Mr. Warren Gaffney, brother of the bride, Mr. Wayne Farmer, Mr. Sandy Green and Mr. Skooke Roberts, both of Vancouver.

Following a reception at Victoria Golf Club, the couple left for a short stay at the Shawnigan Lake Inn, and then returned to Victoria to spend Christmas with their families before leaving for their home in Los Angeles.

Vrooman — Brandon

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Brandon, Victoria, take pleasure in announcing the marriage of their only daughter Gail Louise, to Mr. Michael Vrooman, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Vrooman, Kitimat, B.C. The ceremony took place January 10th, 1969, followed by a reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Connor, 1649 Wilmot Place. Mr. Connor proposed the toast to the bride. Out-of town guests included relatives from Kitimat, Vancouver, and Penticton.

The couple are now enroute to Great Britain.

Ashby — Punt

Reverend Paul Hawkes officiated at a double-ring ceremony in the Glad Tidings Pentecostal Church, North Park Street, Victoria on January 4th, 1969, at 2:00 p.m. when Wendy Teresa, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell H. Punt, 3380 Quadra Street, became the bride of Mr. Daryl Wayne Ashby, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Ashby, 1080 Chesterfield Road. Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in an empire model gown of pure white taffeta. Alencon lace created the bodice and elbow length sleeves and was repeated in the trim on the skirt which formed a slight train. A coronet of brilliants and tiny flowers held her chapel veil and she carried a cascade of red roses and white freesias. Matron of honor, Mrs. Lorna Salmon and bridesmatrons Mrs. Veronica Walker and Mrs. Heather McDonald wore gowns, of turquoise peau de soie featuring matching lace panels falling from the high waistlines at the back. They wore matching rose and net in their hair and carried crescent bouquets of Linda carnations. The little flower girl, Miss Lesley Punt, niece of the bride, was captivating in identical attire to the bride and carried a basket of Linda carnations. Mr. Gregory Punt, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer. Mr. Herb. Mugee attended as best man and the ushers were Messrs. Rick Carver and Jack Bradstock.

Following a reception the happy couple flew to Los Angeles. Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. H. Hamel, North Surrey, Mrs. W. Fletcher, Vancouver, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Punt and family, Gold River.

Morrison — Howery

The marriage is announced of Sandra Howery, daughter of Mrs. Alex McLeod of Victoria, and the late Mr. McLeod, to Dr. Gary E. T. Morrison of Vancouver, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Morrison of Vancouver.

The wedding took place in St. Dunstan's Anglican Church, Victoria, on December 28, 1968, Archdeacon A. E. Hendy officiating.

Rates for publication of Wedding or Engagement notices, with or without pictures, available on request from the Advertising Department. (Special forms to assist you in writing copy also available.) 8 CARD OF THANKS

The memory of the kindness and sympathy shown us by our friends, nurses and technicians of Royal Jubilee Hospital will remain with us through the years. We want you all to know that we are truly grateful for the comfort you have given us in our sorrow of losing a dear wife and mother, Ava Dodsworth. Special thanks to Doctors Leith and Perry for their untiring care.—Bill Dodsworth, Mary and Morris Lawson and family.

We would like to thank all our friends for their kind expressions of sympathy, flowers and cards, also Dr. Warrington, Dr. Hosie, Dr. Perera and attending doctors, also the staff of 3-C surgery and 1-C of St. Joseph's Hospital for all their kindness and help during Ray's illness. — Verna, Daryl and Cheryl Sparkes, Nicholas and Lillian Mackay.

Appreciation to my many friends and neighbours, Fairfield Church Minister, congregation, choir, and Presbyterial members, Jubilee doctors and nurses for so much kindness and care during my stay in hospital and at home. Thank you one and all. (Mrs. G. A.) Kathleen Pole.

9 IN MEMORIAM

AYLING—In loving memory of my husband, father and grandfather, W. J. Ayling, who passed away January 19th, 1967.
You gave us years of happiness,
With your kind and loving ways.
You left us beautiful memories,
To cherish all our days.
—Sadly missed by your loving wife Ruby and family.

MILES—In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Edward D. Miles, who passed away Jan. 18, 1959.
In memory you are always near,
Still loved, still missed, still very dear.
—Always remembered by his wife, Helen, daughter Dianne, and sons Philip, Terry and Ted.

MOSS — In loving memory of my husband, Frank Moss, who passed away Jan. 18, 1962.
Absent from the Body,
But present with the Lord.
—Sadly missed by loving wife, Ethel, and son, Rod.

Human Torch Renews Fire Of Protests

PRAGUE (AP) — Czechoslovak leaders fear a youth who set himself afire might die and set off a new wave of violent demonstrations against this country's Soviet occupiers.

The youth, Jan Palach, 21, immolated himself Thursday to "awaken the people" to their plight under Kremlin domination. He was reported in "very grave" condition today with burns covering 85 per cent of his body.

Reaction to his act was already apparent in tense city streets, among groups of workers huddled on Wenceslas Square, on university campuses, and among groups of Communist party central committee members in Prague Castle.

A declaration by Palach's fellow students at the philosophical faculty of Charles University blamed the Soviet Union and the Prague leadership for his act. It said that "under these conditions the hope that any time in the future we may find common language with this leadership is definitely disappearing."

Another declaration by the Scientific Council of the university referred to Palach's act as "the first horrible cry of warning."

LACK INFLUENCE

"Again and again we are asked for confidence, patience and concrete work," it said. "But how can we trust, be patient, work peacefully, when we have no influence on who governs us and how they govern?"

The students apparently placed little stock in published resolutions and speeches of the central committee meeting Friday that promised adherence to the pre-invasion reform policies as modified in November and December. Students have been in the forefront of the battle to restore freedoms lost since Soviet troops invaded Czechoslovakia last August.

A letter left by Palach added to fears that others might repeat his act. The letter said members of his student group are willing to commit suicide by burning if censorship is not lifted and if the illegal propaganda sheet Zpravy, disseminated by the Soviet forces, is not banned.

It was not reported in official communiques, but some sources said the central committee is considering stronger censorship measures to prevent news reports of dissent and demands for continuation of reforms.

The letter and the student declarations, pasted on buildings and telephone booths, were removed after several hours.

MOVED BY ACT

The central committee issued a statement that members were "greatly moved by news of the unfortunate act."

"We understand the stirred-up emotions of many young people, their yearning for ideal moral purity and also their fears for that policy of socialist development which our party has been pursuing since January, 1968," it said.

A Czech government statement expressed "deep emotion at the tragedy."

The central committee also announced it confirmed Petr Colotka as head of the new Federal Assembly and that former National Assembly president Josef Smrkovsky would serve as deputy chairman. Smrkovsky, a leader in the pre-invasion reforms, became the centre of a political crisis last month when students and workers feared he was going to be ousted from all his posts.

Fierce, Warring Nootkas On Brink of Oblivion

By DENNIS BELL

FRIENDLY COVE — This idyllic, remote community on the rugged west coast stands on the brink of oblivion.

When the Spanish discovered what now is the Canadian West Coast in 1774, there were 1,500 Nootka Indians living here. Friendly Cove was the summer capital of 8,000 fierce, warring Nootkas, the greatest native whaling people in North America.

The Nootkas once dominated the western half of Vancouver Island and the northern tip of the Olympic Peninsula in Washington State.

Now there are fewer than 50 people living on the beautiful little reserve here, and probably fewer than 1,000 people of pure Nootka stock scattered over the rest of the Island and the province.

Friendly Cove is undoubtedly the most historic community in the province. University of British Columbia anthropologists say the Nootkas have been living here for more than 3,000 years.

First Contact

It was at Friendly Cove that white men first came in contact with Canada's Pacific Coastal Indians, the great totem pole carvers whose work has since become symbolic of Indians everywhere.

This was the site of the first white settlement in B.C. Capt. James, Cook, the famed British explorer, anchored HMS Resolution here. A nearby island is named after William Bligh, his navigator, who later earned a place in history as skipper of HMS Bounty.

Europe came close to war over possession of Friendly Cove and Nootka Sound in the late 18th century. And Vancouver Island very nearly became part of Spain's empire.

Today, Indian affairs department spokesmen say there's a good chance that Friendly Cove will be abandoned completely by 1974, the second centennial of the Nootkas' first contact with European civilization.

The rapid abandonment of the settlement and the cultural extinction of the Nootkas has given Jerry Jack, a 30-year-old tubgoat skipper, a desperate mission.

Mr. Jack, a full-blooded Nootka descendant of the chiefs who first greeted the European adventurers, was born and raised on the Friendly Cove reserve.

He's waging a one-man campaign to save as much of his tribe's heritage as possible before it's too late. He has tape-recorded hours of interviews with tribal elders in which they recount legends of great battles, mighty chiefs and whaling adventures.

But Mr. Jack isn't a professional anthropologist or historian—he makes his living piloting a tugboat through the waters of Nootka Sound where once his forefathers sailed 50-foot whaling canoes.

A FULL-BLOODED Nootka Indian from the Friendly Cove Reserve, Jerry Jack, is involved in a one-man project to salvage as much of his tribal heritage as possible. He holds a ceremonial mask carved by a Nootka artist.—(CP Wirephoto)

"I'm trying to preserve as much as I can," he said in an interview at his split-level home at nearby Gold River.

"I suppose if I had stayed on the reserve I never would have thought of this.

"But when I moved to Gold River about eight years ago I could see what was happening to the band. That's when I decided to do everything I could to save our heritage."

Mr. Jack, a short, soft-spoken man whose accent in English reflects the lilting speech patterns of the Nootka dialect, said that as far as he knows he's the only Nootka actively engaged in researching the history of his own tribe.

He says that some day he'd like to write a series of articles and possibly a book on his ancestors.

It's a history that ranges from the most exciting facets of North American exploration to the tragic destruction of a highly complex Indian civilization that anthropologists identify as existing in late stone age conditions.

The first Europeans to sight the B.C. coast were members of Capt. Juan Perez' expedition, which anchored and traded with the natives at the head of Nootka Sound in the summer of 1774.

Four years later, on March 29, 1778, Capt. Cook sailed into Nootka Sound.

The Indian settlement was known as Yuquot—"place where winds from all directions meet"—and the reception the British officer received prompted him to name the little bay Friendly Cove.

In retrospect, Jerry Jack thinks his forefathers were far too friendly with the English for their own good. They were swapping sea otter pelts with the visitors for anything they could get—buttons, tin cups, sailors' caps.

After a month of trading and refitting, the two British ships sailed for China loaded with furs. Capt. Cook was later killed by less-friendly natives in Hawaii and his expedition returned to England in 1780.

In a matter of months a rash of English expeditions set out for Friendly Cove and its lucrative fur trade. This prompted the Spanish to assert their old claims to the island.

Spain sent a major expedition into Nootka Sound and in 1789 constructed a fort, known as Fort San Miguel, on a spit of rock in the cove. Relics of it have recently been uncovered.

Quadra Withdrew

Several English trading ships were seized and the incidents brought Europe to the edge of a major war over what was known as the Nootka Controversy.

Spain backed down eventually—one of the first large contractions of the then-powerful Spanish empire. Capt. George Vancouver met his Spanish counterpart, Juan Francisco de la Bodega y Quadra, at Friendly Cove to enforce provisions of the Nootka Convention in 1795.

Later the same year Quadra, the first and last Spaniard governor of Vancouver Island, withdrew his garrison, and New Albion as it was then known became British Columbia.

The fur trade boomed for the next 50 years with up to 30 ships anchored in Nootka Sound at one time. The British had a highly developed Indian civilization to cope with—and both sides were totally unprepared.

The Nootkas, second to none in battle with the exception of the marauding Haidas of the Queen Charlotte Islands, skirmished frequently with their neighbors to the north, the Kwaktiutl, and the Coast Salish to the south and east, but spent most of the time raiding each others' villages for slaves and human heads.

They went whaling in huge canoes made from hollowed-out giant red cedars rigged with animal-skin sails. They roamed hundreds of miles of the coast, sometimes 25 miles out to sea.

Sold to Tourists

"I think the last whaling was three or four generations ago," said Mr. Jack. "But there are descendants of whale hunters alive today and some have harpoons their ancestors used.

"One fellow had a harpoon with 32 cuts—that meant the man who used it got 32 whales in a single year.

"If I remember, he sold the harpoon to an American tourist a few years ago."

The most accurate records of ancient Nootka life were those of Capt. Cook and the early expeditions into Nootka Sound. There are holes in the Nootka history torn by guns, typhoid, smallpox and rum.

By 1870, the economic emphasis on the island's west coast had shifted to Port Alberni and logs had replaced furs as the major stock in trade. The Nootkas found themselves isolated on 15 small reserves.

At the start of the Second World War, there were only 71 people here. After the war the birth rate improved but economic conditions for the Nootkas worsened.

Fishing Forgotten

There were 200 Nootkas here in 1964, and 111 permanent residents in 1966. Loging has taken most of the young people away from the reserve. Welfare and treaty money is the only thing holding those who remain.

Once the best whalers in the Pacific, the Nootkas have forgotten how to fish. There were 23 fishing boats here 10 years ago. Now there is only one, operated by Chief Pat Murphy.

The language is virtually dead. Only a handful of Nootkas have full command of it — the very old and people like Jerry Jack, who is teaching it to his children.

Wetness Sometimes Worse Than Cold

By JACK BEASTALL

When cold weather invades this area our thoughts turn to survival of plants and the word "hardy" creeps into most conversations. It is a common word in the English language, denoting ability to withstand hardship. It is also the name of a blacksmith's chisel, and the hole in the anvil (hardy-hole) where the chisel is placed for cutting heated metal.

Jack

As applied to plants, the compilers of dictionaries give a terse five-word definition: "able to withstand winter weather."

To the uninitiated that definition satisfies, but to the plantsman it leaves a lot to be desired.

HARDSHIPS

The ability to withstand winter weather is not nearly as far reaching as the ability to withstand hardship, and the hardships that beset a plant are certainly not limited to winter weather.

Many plants we commonly grow here are less affected by winter cold than by winter wetness. Others, quite immune to cold, cannot tolerate summer drought.

A recognized cold-hardy plant can be killed, or severely damaged, if low temperatures follow a mild period in which active growth has continued beyond its normal season.

Evergreens, which transpire moisture from their foliage at all seasons, can die of drought if the soil freezes deep enough to prevent the roots from obtaining moisture for replacement. Low relative humidity has a dehydrating effect on plant foliage whether temperatures are low, normal or high.

Summer drought can restrict root growth and destroy roots, thus weakening a plant's resistance. In turn, weakened resistance can result in severe damage from cold temperatures.

Even with plants known to be hardy to cold, a rich soil that has contributed to luscious growth may result in severe winter damage.

Experience has shown that plants in a well-tended garden always suffer more in a cold spell than those grown under more rigorous conditions in neglected gardens.

When we buy a plant and ask the nurseryman if it is hardy, what is our definition of hardy?

Do we mean able to survive winter conditions of cold, or mild winter conditions with water logged soil? Either can be a hardship.

IS IT HARDY?

Or are we concerned with the plant surviving all hardships of climate, soil and neglect, likely to occur?

Whenever a gardener asks me if a certain plant is hardy I hesitate before answering. I feel that implications of hardiness are not fully realized, and I know that few of our cultivated plants have the constitution of a dandelion or a creeping thistle.

In the next few months we shall be faced with many surprises. Plants we thought hardy will have been lost or severely damaged. Others, thought tender, will have come through unscathed.

The cold spell of December will be blamed for all losses in the coming season, and little thought will be given to other factors that contribute to hardiness in our plants.

And the reason these other factors so seldom enter into our deductions and decisions, is the fact that few of us keep even a sketchy record of conditions that could, and do, affect the plants we grow.

Is this plant hardy? Yes, to some conditions; no, to others.

Every U.S. President Honored With a Stamp

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT

Every president of the United States has been honored philatelically. The U.S. has issued stamps bearing portraits of all 32 deceased presidents. Harry S. Truman (b. 1884), Dwight D. Eisenhower (b. 1890), and Lyndon B. Johnson (b. 1908) have been honored on stamps of a number of nations other than the United States.

In 1951, President Galo Plaza y Lasso of Ecuador paid a visit to President Truman in the United States. In March, 1952, Ecuador issued a commemorative showing Plaza and Truman riding in the back seat of an automobile. President Plaza is seen waving, and President Truman bears his familiar smile.

Presidents Eisenhower and Truman, and Truman's daughter Margaret (Mrs. Clifton Daniel) appear on the one-rupee Umm Al Qiwain stamp issued in 1965. It is part of a set honoring John F. Kennedy (1917-63).

●

One of the best likenesses of President Eisenhower is on two stamps issued by the Philippines Dec. 30, 1960. This pair commemorates Eisenhower's visit to the Philippines, and features him shaking hands with Philippine President Carlos P. Garcia.

When Richard M. Nixon (b. 1913) visited Ecuador in May, 1958, that country issued a stamp (1958) bearing his image, and the flags of the United States and Ecuador. Nr. Nixon was vice-president from Jan. 20, 1953 to Jan. 20, 1961. He received 49.6 per cent of the popular vote in the 1960 presidential election.

In 1966, Korea issued two stamps and a souvenir sheet showing the smiling presidents Chung Hee Park of Korea, and Lyndon B. Johnson. This issue honored Johnson's visit to Korea.

Ajman released Dec. 15, 1964 a number of stamps paying tribute to John F. Kennedy. The 5-rupee value shows President Kennedy with Lyndon B. Johnson, and Hubert H. Humphrey (b. 1911), who became vice-president on Jan. 20, 1965.

Stamp News

An enlightened philatelist once said the following about stamp collecting "It dispels boredom, enlarges our vision, broadens our knowledge, and in innumerable ways enriches our life. I commend stamp collecting because I really believe it makes one a better citizen." This collector was Franklin D. Roosevelt (1885-1945), the 32nd president of the United States.

On March 15, the U.S. will issue a six-cent stamp honoring the American Legion. The date of issue is the Legion's 50th anniversary. Another six-cent stamp will be issued, I believe, on May 5 to honor the successful Apollo 8 space flight around the moon.

The following U.S. six-cent issues are also planned for 1969: 200th anniversary of the settlement of California; 150th anniversary of Alabama achieving statehood (Dec. 14, 1819); American folklore pictorial honoring the primitive artist Grandma Moses (1860-1961); 100th anniversary of inter-collegiate football; honoring the 11th International Botanical Congress; and one value honoring both the composer and bandmaster W. C. Handy (1873-1958), and the 150th anniversary of Memphis, Tenn. Another stamp may be issued to mark the centenary of the bold journey through the Grand Canyon by John Wesley Powell (1834-1902).

●

On Feb. 13, the Republic of San Marino will place on sale four stamps featuring details from the fresco The Good Government by Ambrogio Lorenzetti. The values are 50-lira, 80-lira, 90-lira and 180-lira. The first three stamps show seated women. One is holding an olive branch (symbol of peace) in her left hand. The second woman is grasping a sword in her right hand, and a crown in her left and on her right knee is a man's severed head. The woman on the 90-lira pictorial is pointing to an hour glass which she is holding in her right hand. A castle complex is depicted on the 180-lira value.

A five-cent postage stamp will be issued Feb. 26 by Australia to mark the sixth biennial conference of the International Association of Ports and Harbors. This meeting will be held in Melbourne March 3 to 8. A Melbourne harbor scene is shown on this black, blue, red and yellow-brown, photogravure printed stamp.

Gambia will release Jan. 20 three adhesives (4d, 6d and 2s 6d) honoring and depicting their first postage stamps, which were issued a century ago. As in the originals, the cameo portraits of Queen Victoria on these reproductions were embossed. This new issue was designed by G. Drummond, and was photogravure printed by Harrison and Sons Ltd. on block CA watermarked paper; in sheets of 60.

Week's Work

By JACK BEASTALL

This season, the owner of a slightly heated greenhouse will feel able to get a head start on other gardeners, for he can sow seed of clarkia, snapdragon, nicotine, lupin, pansy, delphinium and columbine. They need only slight heat, and cool growing conditions for a few weeks before going into coldframes.

Also, cuttings can be taken from indoor carnations, and from late (October-November) blooming chrysanthemums. Root with bottom heat.

Order vegetable seeds and potato sets to avoid disappointment when sowing time comes around. Keep seeds in a cool place such as a low drawer on an outside wall of kitchen cabinets.

Look for bands of tent caterpillars on fruit and ornamental trees.

For living rooms with glass walls like solariums, purchase early blooming shrubs to flower early in tubs.

Ask The Gardener

By JACK BEASTALL

Q. My Witch-hazel has not bloomed this winter. Do you think the frost in December killed it?—N.K.M., Gordon Head.

A. Not likely unless the shrub was unusually exposed to other damaging circumstance than snow and frost. The buds have probably been somewhat delayed, but look at it again and you may find that they are becoming yellow now. Witch-hazel (hamamelis mollis) is seldom harmed by above-zero temperatures.

Patio Popular As All Outdoors

A patio is almost a prerequisite for modern homes.

It's considered a sales asset for new houses, and is high on the priority list of improvement projects for older homes.

The increasing demand for patios stems from a growing desire for the pleasures of "outdoor living." Patios are a practical answer to outdoor dining, entertaining, recreation and relaxation.

If you're building a patio, make sure you get its maximum advantages by careful planning. Here are some suggestions:

SUGGESTIONS

● When possible, locate the patio on the southern side of the house. This affords plenty of sunlight without excessive heat. If the area is subjected to high winds, put the patio on the leeward side so the shouse will act as a shield.

● Use the patio to visually expand the house interior. The best way to do this is with gliding patio doors. Their uninterrupted glass area gives the room adjacent to the patio an extensive outdoor view, and their easy operation makes access to the patio convenient.

Gliding patio doors with wood sash are a practical choice. Insulating glass assures comfort and convenience. The doors are also obtainable with tempered insulating glass (a safety feature strongly recommended), or tinted glass (which reduces sun-glare).

● Install a few electrical outlets so you can light the patio at night and have convenient plug-ins for an automatic coffee-maker, radio or TV. An outdoor water faucet should be nearby.

● Provide some storage space for outdoor and sports equipment. This could be a bin, closet or storage shed—depending on whatever gear you wish to keep at hand and out of the weather.

● If necessary, protect the patio's privacy with a high hedge or fence.

Cheer Fund Needs $300

DUNCAN — Cowichan Christmas Cheer Fund received a total of $1,225 during its 1968 campaign but still requires $300 to balance its budget, a fund spokesman said Thursday.

Expenditures amounted to more than $1,587. More than 200 families received hampers and gifts.

Car Thefts Soar

VANCOUVER (CP) — Nearly $4,000,000 worth of cars were stolen in Vancouver during 1968, Staff Sgt. Charles Campbell, head of the police auto theft squad said Friday. A total of 2,578 vehicles were stolen, 274 more than in 1967.

The Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Hu is a very affectionate cat but he has one habit I could do without. He sleeps on my bed and that's fine except he crowds me into a corner before the night's over. But that isn't the problem.

What he does is to wait until I'm just about asleep, then sneaks up and starts washing my hair! My hair is long and you'd think he'd give up but he never does.

He tries the same night I've washed my hair; could it be he likes my hair spray? Eventually his rough tongue gets down to my scalp and he'd peel it right off so I duck my head under the sheet until he gets disgusted and leaves.

Is he just expressing affection? Is there any way I can stop his habit without hurting his feelings?—W.Y.

DEAR W.Y.: Your cat's caress could, indeed be a sign of affection. Unless you found a particularly disagreeable hair spray, he'd probably keep it up anyway. Scolding would work, but I'm sure he wouldn't understand your lack of appreciation. It will be easier on his psyche if you wear a nightcap long enough to break Hu's hairy habit.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I am going into the kennel business. So far my bitches have had two litters of puppies. These are miniature dachshunds, and the puppies are very small. The veterinarian vaccinates these puppies against distemper somewhere between seven and nine weeks of age and at that time he uses the full adult live virus vaccine.

So far it hasn't happened, but I am worried that giving this big dose to such little puppies might cause a very bad reaction. Wouldn't it work just as well to give only part of the vaccine dose seeing as how these are such small pups?—B.E.

DEAR B.E.: Your veterinarian is following the accepted procedure in giving the entire dose of vaccine at one time, regardless of the size of the pups. While the smaller pup may have more immediate physical discomfort from the standard size dose, it is not more likely to show a shot "reaction" than a larger pup.

And the larger the live virus dose, the faster immunization develops. If your veterinarian attempted to reduce the dose, he would have no way to determine just how much to reduce it and still develop the best response in the pup.

The response to the vaccination cannot be gauged by the size or weight of the pup, so most veterinarians prefer that a full dose be given to all to insure the best response possible.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: When our nine-year-old parakeet died last year, we immediately went out and got John to fill the void. But we have never had much success teaching Johnny to talk while our last parakeet had a 200-word vocabulary.

We have been somewhat disappointed but his personality has mostly made up for it. Then we noticed in the last few weeks that his cere was turning from a very pale blue to a chocolate brown. And yesterday it happened: Johnny laid an egg! Isn't all this very irregular? Is there anything we have to do? What should we expect now?—K.M.

DEAR K.M.: I can't say that Johnny's performance is the least bit irregular; at least not for a hen. They normally talk less. (We're talking about birds, of course.)

When the hen is in top laying condition the cere (the prominent areas surrounding the nostrils above the beak) does become a dark brown color. A hen in good condition tends to do what comes naturally — and that includes laying eggs.

There isn't much you have to do as long as she doesn't lay too many. Watch her; though, as she may become pooped in the process and need (immediate) help. You can't expect anything else but perhaps more of the same.

No matter how hard Johnny tries, she can only lay eggs, not hatch them. Only fertile eggs hatch. And presumably since you've had her, Johnny has never even seen a male bird let alone had an affair with one.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Franklin Explored Bleak Arctic

By BOB BOWMAN

Although marvellous developments are taking place in the Canadian Arctic, the most dramatic story about that region is still the loss of the Franklin expedition in 1847. It took 14 years of searching by 40 expeditions before it was known that every member of the expedition had dies of exposure. Lady Franklin financed a number of expeditions and took part in one herself. On the way to the Arctic by the Pacific she stopped in British Columbia and explored part of the Fraser River. Her visit has been commemorated by Lady Franklin's Rock near Hell's Gate.

Bowman

Sir John Franklin was trying to find the North West Passage and spent years training for the task. In 1819 he commanded an expedition to explore the Arctic coastline by travelling overland from Hudson Bay to the mouth of Coppermine River. He and his men were at Cumberland House in northern Saskatchewan on January 18, 1820.

It was a fantastic exploit because they had to cover 5,500 miles of some of the toughest country on the continent, and did not return to Hudson Bay until 1822. Franklin said then that he had seen nothing that could stop well-equipped ships from getting through the Arctic ice. Franklin spent two more years exploring the coast. On his way back to Britain he paddled down the Ottawa River and arrived at Bytown (Ottawa) on time to lay the cornerstone of one of the locks of the Rideau Canal, now beside the Chateau Laurier Hotel.

The North West Passage was found by Captain Robert McClure of the Royal Navy in 1850 when he was searching for Franklin. McClure had served on the Great Lakes. However it was not until 1903 that a ship managed to get through the North West Passage. That expedition was led by Roald Amundsen, and took three years. The RCMP patrol vessel St. Roch, now in the Marine Museum at Vancouver, was the first ship to get through in a single year. That was in 1944 and the trip from Halifax to Vancouver took only 88 days.

Other events on Jan. 18:

1813—British-Aa

1813—British-Canadian force defeated U.S. invasion force at Frenchtown.

1839—Lower Canada rebels were hanged at Montreal.

1849—Parliament met at Montreal in session that included Rebellion Losses Bill.

1910—French Canadian Congress met at Ottawa.

1940—Mitchell Hepburn, Liberal Premier of Ontario, moved resolution criticising W. L. Mackenzie King, Liberal Prime Minister of Canada, for lack of war effort.

Happiness Is A Warm Lion

By AL FORREST

If you believe that happiness is a warm lion cub you'll be delighted to learn that a documentary sequel to "Born Free" is coming up next week.

The movie was one of the best family shows of the decade and this TV special on Thursday should be tremendous.

The movie told the story of Elsa the lion cub who was raised as a pet by a game warden (played by Bill Travers) and his wife (played by Virginia McKenna).

Bill and Virginia appear in the documentary along with the real-life game warden George Adamson. The cameras record a two-month expedition to Kenya to see how Elsa is enjoying her new way of life.

The hour-long documentary includes film clips from the movie and uses the hit song Born Free as background theme music.

JULIE
. . . thirst for knowledge

Entitled The Lions Are Free, the telecast starts at 7:30 p.m. Thursday on Channel 5.

●

Monday, Richard Nixon is sworn in as president and that night he is the featured comedian on Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In. His routine consists of film clips of his campaign speeches.

●

The Bob Hope TV special on his Christmas tour of military bases was delightful.

The pace was fast, the entertainment varied. And it was a full 90 minutes without a stop for a commercial by the car firm sponsoring the show. A tremendous precedent. If only they'd do that with TV movies!

Hope is a comedian, not a politician, but he has always been a superhawk and it was interesting to note his change of heart in the closing minutes of the show.

He has concluded that the U.S. is up to its neck in Big Muddy and the sooner the boys can get out of Vietnam, the better.

Just 12 months ago he was talking up a military victory.

Obviously he has decided to ride with the forces of change that are revising American philosophies of life.

●

One of the better science fiction movies, Fahrenheit 451, featuring Julie Christie and Oskar Werner, is on Channel 8 tonight at 8:30 p.m. It's a sort of Adam and Eve of tomorrow in which a pretty schoolteacher entices a man to satisfy his new-found hunger for knowledge under a regime where reading is forbidden.

●

There's hope on the horizon for those who became enraged by the way TV networks cut up feature movies to get them to fit into available time . . . and leave lots of room for commercials.

Paul Newman demanded and—after a long struggle—won the right to edit Rachel, Rachel when it is sold to TV.

The vast majority of movies sold to TV are left to the tender mercies of the networks to clip and paste as they like. Some of their efforts have been almost criminal.

Newman, who directed Rachel, may have at last established the precedent that movies belong to their makers and not to the sponsors.

●

And finally from California a friend sends the information that at his multi-racial college the faculty keeps stressing the theme of equality. He adds that the football team ended the season with 16 straight tie games.

MARRIED at Lake Geneva to Italian psychiatrist Dr. Andrea Botti today is film actress Audrey Hepburn.

Arctic MP Blasts Advice Of Ottawa-Based Experts

By JI MOSBORNE

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — The Northwest Territories council Friday rejected committee study of an advisory paper requested on northern education after members were told the paper was written in Ottawa.

"This . . . is a snow job," said Bob Williamson, elected member for Central Arctic.

He said the paper on curriculum was requested at the last council session, but now only the territorial education director was present for questioning.

"I am beginning to get tired of territorial advisors having to be answerable for papers presented to council that were prepared in Ottawa," he said.

Mr. Williamson said he had three dozen questions about schooling in the Canadian north and it was unfair to ask N.W.T. Education Director B. C. Gillie about a paper prepared without Mr. Gillie's advice.

Earlier, Lyle Trimble accused the federal government of preaching sermons about a just society while keeping the Canadian north in perpetual colonialism.

Mr. Trimble, 33, elected member of the council for Mackenzie Delta, said recent administrative transfers to the territorial government had not included additional powers for its council.

He joined two other elected councillors who earlier had warned that unless basic policy changes were made soon, "there will be trouble."

Mr. Trimble, replying to Commissioner Stuart Hodgson's opening address, said despite the Carrothers Royal Commission Report on northern development in 1966 there still had been no policy reaction from Ottawa.

UN TO ESTABLISH CONTROL OF DRUGS

GENEVA (Reuters)—Experts from 24 countries began efforts Friday to hammer out an international system of controls on drugs such as LSD and amphetamines.

The experts, who make up the United Nations Commission on Narcotics, have before them two draft proposals for international controls on so-called psychotropic drugs, which now are subject only to national surveillance.

NEGRO DIES FOLLOWING TRANSPLANT

CHICAGO (Reuters) — A 49-year-old Negro died Friday night about 4½ hours after a heart transplant operation at Veterans' Hospital in suburban West Hines.

Benjamin F. Evans, a former Chicago bus driver, died shortly before midnight.

Mao Reported Sick

HONG KONG—The Hong Kong Star said Friday that Mao Tse-tung, Chinese Communist party chairman, is ill and that other Communist leaders have selected a 14-man body to rule in case of his death. Mao is 75.

How to save and improve your hair demonstrated by expert here Mon. & Tues.

FOR BALDING HEADS LIKE THESE, a "SAVE-YOUR-HAIR DAY" has been announced. As long as you have some hair, you have an excellent chance to grow thicker hair by new methods of home treatment.

SCALP SPECIALIST HERE TO DEMONSTRATE NEW HOME TREATMENT

New home treatment methods for preventing baldness — and growing thicker hair—will be demonstrated in Victoria this Monday and Tuesday, January 20 and 21.

This news was released here today by Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists.

In their announcement, they named staff trichologist Mr. John Giza to conduct the Victoria clinic. Mr. Giza will personally examine hair-worried men and women from 1 p.m. to 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday at the hotel Executive House.

EXAMINE YOU

"I want to make it clear that you incur no obligation by seeing Mr. Giza."

"Your only obligation is to yourself—to free your mind of worries about hair loss, dandruff, itching, or other scalp disorders, by learning how to take care of your hair. If your trouble is beyond the scope of Harrison Home Treatment, we will frankly tell you so."

We always make a personal examination before suggesting any treatment. There is no one-cure-all that will correct every one of the 18 scalp disorders that cause most baldness."

WHO CAN BE HELPED?

Will this new treatment cure baldness? "No. We cannot help men who are slick-bald after years of gradual hair loss. But where your scalp still grows hair, we can at least save and improve what you have. Usually, we can grow more hair even where you have only 'fuzz' now."

The important thing is: Don't wait until it's too late!

Best evidence of the success of Harrison treatment is the phenomenal growth behind it. Harrison trichologists hold clinics in all major cities across Canada.

"Our biggest problem is not in doing what we claim to do. But to overcome the average man's initial skepticism is sometimes difficult. He's usually quite desperate—and baldish—by the time he nerves himself to see a Harrison trichologist. He's 'tried everything'. So he starts consoling himself with one of the old superstitions about hair:

That baldness is hereditary; that men naturally lose hair as they get along in years; that nothing can be done to stop hair loss—and a lot of other notions that we know are not true today."

SCALP EXAMINATION

See Mr. Giza in person. Learn how baldness can be corrected, and new hair grown. The new Harrison method permits you to actually correct your baldness and improve your hair in the privacy of your own home.

For an examination and discussion of your hair problems ask the desk clerk at the hotel Executive House Monday or Tuesday between 1 p.m. and 8 p.m. for Mr. Giza's suite number.

You don't need an appointment. Examinations are given in private.

Before Magistrate

The lighters in the jeweller's shop window were worth $6 and Henry Cooper, 29, 1325 Fernwood, told Magistrate Byers he wasn't quite sure why he bothered to smash the window and steal them Friday.

In fact, Cooper ran only a block or so after making the grab when he decided he didn't want the lighters and threw them into a doorway.

Arrested soon afterwards, he pleaded guilty to breaking and entry and theft from Lee Wah Lee Jewellers, 1323 Government. Cooper was remanded to Jan. 24 for sentence.

Daliel Singh, ill with a heart attack suffered since he shoplifted a 19-cent package of garlic and unable to appear in court, got a cut-rate fine for his pains.

A plea of guilty was entered in his absence and Magistrate Byers, "tempting justice with mercy" fined him $75 instead of the usual $100 to $200 "because he's a sick man."

Singh, 73, of 597 John, was charged with the offence Nov. 23 in The Bay's now-closed food market.

Margaret Shook the store detective who caught Singh, said the man had accused her of planting the garlic package on him.

Gordon Walker, 37, 3820 Shelbourne, was sentenced to a year in prison for contributing to the delinquency of a 15-year-old boy. Court heard he had a previous conviction for a similar offence two years ago.

A man who police said drove 25 minutes after receiving a 24-hour roadside suspension for drinking was fined $100.

Richard Taylor, 23, 2129 Lorne Terrace pleaded guilty.

Garry R. Plant, listed as living in a Gorge Road motel, was sentenced to a year in prison after a conviction on a charge of false pretences.

During his trial, court heard he cashed a cheque Dec. 31 for $155.35 at a city store in return for a suit and a raincoat.

He told the magistrate he intended to have the money in his account because he was owed some wages from an employer.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said Plant had previous convictions in 1965 and 1966 for similar offences.

Fined $150 each for failing to remain at the scene of an accident were: Robert Ganner, 1955 Ashgrove, and Roy Orvis, 1080 Dunford. Francis Stewart, 657 Grenville, was fined $100 for the same offence.

U.S. Citizens Living Here Get Tax Aid

The U.S. consulate-general in Vancouver will offer assistance to taxpayers filing U.S. income tax returns this year.

A U.S. Internal Revenue Service representative will be at the consulate, 1030 West Georgia St., from Tuesday through Feb. 25, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Victoria residents wishing to contact the representative can call Vancouver 685-4311.

U.S. citizens under 65 with gross incomes of $600 or more and living in Canada must file returns. Those over 65 can earn up to $1,200 without filing.

Citizens in other countries doing business in the U.S. are subject to tax on income derived from U.S. sources.

The 1968 filing deadline is April 15. U.S. citizens living out of the country should file returns with the director of International Operations, Internal Revenue Service, Washington, D.C.

Decks Cleared for Start Of Viet Ceasefire Talks

Full Agreement On Procedure

PARIS (AP)—The four representatives at the new Vietnam peace talks reached agreement today on all procedural matters, and real negotiations will begin early next week, the United States delegation reported.

After a five-hour 15-minute meeting with representatives of the South Vietnamese government, North Vietnam and the Viet Cong guerrillas' South Vietnam National Liberation Front, U.S. Ambassador Cyrus R. Vance told reporers:

"I am happy to report that we have reached full agreement on all procedural questions for the first plenary session which will take place early next week."

The U.S. ambassador gave no immediate details on the procedural format for the peace negotiations. But he said: "I am happy that we are getting down to the serious business of making peace in Vietnam."

The swift disposal of procedural questions means that there will be no more haggling over matters not directly concerned with the achievement of a Vietnam peace.

STARTED FAST

The meeting, which began at 10:30 a.m. in the International Conference Centre, got off to a flying start when North Vietnam at once proposed that the first meeting on matters of substance should begin early next week.

This was just what the Americans had said they wanted.

North Vietnamese spokesman Nguyen Thanh Le said the National Liberation Front had proposed to hold the first plenary session Tuesday.

But, Le said, Vance had declared he must report to Washington. He said Vance promised to get in touch with the other side early next week.

Le said the North Vietnamese would consider that the talks should be referred to as "The Paris Conference on Vietnam." Asked whether other delegations agreed, he said: "This has no importance."

The U.S. and the South Vietnamese government had proposed calling the talks the "Paris meetings."

In the conference hall, Col. Ha Van Lau, deputy chief of the Hanoi delegation, when it came his turn to speak, said: "I propose that the procedural points already agreed upon for this first session be used for all sessions to come."

This meant that procedural matters could be swept aside, representing dramatic progress for the first session of the meeting which had been stalled two months in quarrelling over table shapes, speaking orders and other matters of procedure.

As the meeting began, Vance told the North Vietnamese and front delegations it was the American desire, shared by the Saigon government, to "arrange an early end to the fighting and bloodshed that Vietnam has suffered."

Lau listed four recommendations:

"1. The number of persons from each delegation to participate in the plenary sessions will not exceed 15.

"2. All press, radio and television to be admitted for 15 minutes before the start of the first plenary session.

"3. The plenary session of the conference for substantive discussions will be held early next week in the international conference centre.

"4. In view of the great number of persons, the French government shall be requested to put at our disposal the big hall."

LARGER ROOM READY

A bigger hall is available at the conference centre at the former Hotel Majestic.

But Lau's statement did not discount the prospect of hard bargaining. Lau made clear when he appended to his proposals the statement, "we reject all ideas according to which this conference would be a two-party or a two-sided conference."

Both North Vietnam and the NFL insists that these are four-sided talks, implying independent and equal status for the Front. The Americans and South Vietnamese insist the talks represent two sides in a two-sided war. They say the NLF is a tool of Hanoi.

It was obvious the North Vietnamese had moved faster than the Americans expected. Calling a substantive session next week could entail problems, since the new chief negotiator representing the Nixon administration, Henry Cabot Lodge, may not be able to arrive that early.

After the coffee break the delegates returned to their round conference table, about 15 feet in diameter with two rectangular secretarial tables on opposite sides.

There were no markings, nameplates or flags in the conference room.

The Americans were first on the scene, followed by the North Vietnamese, the NLF and the South Vietnamese.

Vance said he would quickly present "a draft of rules on procedure" for the sessions and added: "I hope these can be adopted rapidly."

About 150 onlookers, including some North Vietnamese waving their country's flag, watched the delegates arrive.

Lau and Mrs. Binh arrived with their staffs seven minutes before the scheduled starting time. They were greeted with applause from the small group of North Vietnamese spectators.

There were no cheers for the Americans or the South Vietnamese.

U.S. to Cut Troops In Vietnam

SAIGON (AP) — President Nguyen Van Thieu announced today some United States combat troops will be withdrawn from South Vietnam this year.

He has directed his military chief of staff to draft a timetable with the U.S. command.

Thieu did not say how many of the 532,500 U.S. troops in the country would be withdrawn, and added "detailed plans will first have to be developed by the military staffs of the two countries before specific timing can be developed."

But sources said the initial withdrawal might affect 20,000 troops and 100,000 might be phased out by the end of the year.

An aide to Gen. Cao Van Vien, chief of South Vietnam's armed forces, said Vien conferred with the U.S. commander in South Vietnam, Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, last week. A spokesman for Abrams said further discussions are scheduled between the two.

Abrams is understood to have reluctantly accepted the fact that some American troops will have to be withdrawn soon, but he is opposed to any reduction until mid-July.

ARMY GOOD ENOUGH?

Abrams believes the South Vietnamese army will not be good enough to fill the gaps until then. He also wants to keep the Viet Cong "on the run," sources said, and would prefer to await developments at the Paris peace talks before paring down U.S. strength.

Thieu's announcement followed a two-hour meeting Friday between Thieu, U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker and Abrams.

Some high-ranking American officials who are critical of current military tactics have reported to Washington that a 30-percent U.S. troops reduction is possible without letting up the pressure on the Viet Cong. But they say troops left in Vietnam would have to be utilized more effectively than at present.

Latest official figures put the strength of the South Vietnamese armed forces at 800,000 regulars and militiamen.

Thieu said American troops could now be withdrawn "thanks to the growth of the ARVN (Army of the Republic of Vietnam) both in quantity as well as quality." He added that a gradual American withdrawal "will in no way alter the military and security situation in Vietnam."

On the battlefield there were no reports of major sustained fighting.

Thousands Jam Washington For Counter-Inauguration

By PAUL W. VALENTINE

WASHINGTON (WP) — For the first time in America's history, a presidential inauguration — one of the nation's most sacrosanct institutions — is about to be confronted by a large-scale, nationally organized and politically irreverent "counter" presence.

Leaders of the protest contend the three-day program (which begins today with up to 10,000 persons participtaing shows how the nation is bitterly divided over the war in Vietnam and the urban crisis at home.

It will be the first major public manifestation of the new left anti-war movement since the Chicago convention last summer and comes after much internal bickering over how it should be played.

POLITICAL DRAMA

A majority decision was reached to make it a political, rather than a physical, drama.

Many of the players will be different. The National Students for a Democratic Society voted to boycott the event. Other hard left radicals have individually decided to sit this one out.

But the National Mobilization Committee to end the war in Vietnam, the loose coalition of pacifist and anti-war groups organizing the counter-inauguration, has attracted several older and more staid organizations into the program.

Though the stress is on moderation and peaceableness, mobilization leaders, who traditionally resist organizational rigidity and discipline, say they cannot be responsible for everyone coming to the counter-inauguration. A few "crazies" may slip through, they said.

BREW TROUBLE

Some local SDS chapters have talked of coming to Washington to brew trouble. Mobilization officials suspect, however, that winter weather and mid-year college exams, which will keep their own numbers down, may have the same effect on the "crazies."

On Sunday at 1 p.m. (EST) demonstrators will rally at their green-and-white striped circus tent at 15 Street and Independence Avenue Southwest, to stage their counter-inaugural parade to the capitol.

PARADE MAKEUP

The parade will be led by an anticipated 50 to 100 military servicemen, some of whom are ignoring restrictions against leaving their installations this weekend. A small black contingent, including possibly the mule train from last summer's poor people campaign, may be in the entourage.

MOD MUSIC

The counter-inaugural ball —complete with mod music, light shows and guerrilla theatre — will be held in the enormous 300-by-100 foot tent just south of the Washington Monument. In keeping with the reverse values of the counter-inauguration, the best seats will cost $2, the worst $35.

On Monday, the day of the Nixon-Agnew inaugural, deomonstrators plan to take up four positions along the parade route. The mobilization purchased 100 tickets, costing $1,000, for bleacher seats at 15th St. and Pennsylvania Ave., and at 11th St. and Pennsylvania Ave.

THREAT AGAINST KENNEDY'S LIFE

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — Police established a patrol around the home of Senator Edward M. (Teddy) Kennedy (Dem.—Mass.) after being informed of a threat on his life, authorities reported today.

A spokesman for the Fairfax County police said "there's a patrol car cruising the general area" when asked whether special precautions were being taken to guard the senator, sole survivor of the four Kennedy brothers. Two were assassinated and Joseph, Jr. was killed in the Second World War.

The police said they were informed Friday by the senators' office of a threat on his life.

Mid-East Talks By Big-4 Urged

By Associated Press

France has called for a Big Four conference aimed at settling the Middle East crisis. But the United States is reported backing a peacemaking plan which would include provisions for direct talks between the Arab states and Israel.

APPOINTMENT of Peter C. Newman as editor in chief of the Toronto Star was announced Friday by Beland Honderich, president of the daily newspaper. Mr. Newman, 39, joined The Star in 1964. He is the author of three books, the most recent Distemper of Our Times, a chronicle of Canadian politics when Lester Pearson was prime minister. Mr. Newman's column will still appear occasionally in The Times.

The Washington Evening Star, in a story following the French announcement Friday, quotes qualified sources as saying State Secretary Dean Rusk outlined a form of two-track negotiations in a note handed to Soviet Charge d'Affaires Yuri N. Tcherniakov.

The Star says Rusk's note proposed talks between the United States and the Soviet Union, and separate talks between Israel and the Arab states under a United Nations "umbrella."

The talks between the two big powers, the newspaper reported, would be to help UN special envoy Gunnar V. Jarring mark out "the perimeters" for detailed Arab-Israeli negotiations. Jarring would mediate the talks between the Arabs and Israelis.

The French proposal, issued at the United Nations and in Paris, suggested that France, the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union meet at the United Nations to discuss ways to end the Middle East dispute.

BELONG TO COUNCIL

The countries are among the five permanent members of the 15-country UN Security Council. The fifth, Nationalist China, is not recognized by the Soviet Union.

The French statement avoided any implication that the Big Four would attempt to impose a settlement, but indicated the aim of the meeting would be to implement the Security Council's November, 1967, Middle East resolution.

The resolution called for Arab recognition of Israel and Israel's withdrawal from Arab territory occupied in the June, 1967, war.

Foreign Minister Abba Eban of Israel said Friday the Soviet Union's latest plan for peace in the Middle East displayed "a low level of thought, politics and expression."

The plan is reported to call for both sides to declare in writing unconditional acceptance of the UN peace formula.

Eban said the proposal was "very ambivalent" in the issue of the Suez Canal and the Tiran Straits.

STUDENTS TRY TO TOSS RECTOR

MADRID (Reuters) — Barcelona University was closed indefinitely today after rebel Spanish students tried to toss the rector out of his office window.

About 60 students invaded the office of the rector, Prof. Manuel Albadalejo, Friday night after a tumultuous mass meeting to protest the arrest of several of their leaders.

The students ransacked the office, draped it with protest banners and a red flag then attacked the rector. He was rescued before being thrown through the window.

Six students were arrested. The latest outburst followed an attempt to set fire to underground lavatories near the political science department.

DACCA (Reuters)—Pakistani students armed with field hockey sticks and slingshots fought a two-hour pitched battle with riot police today on the campus of Dacca University.

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, JAN. 18, 1969—PAGE 21

Arthur Mayse

Earlier this week, I passed on to you the plight of a happy little girl whose chance of a future hangs on the complex operation that only your help can make possible.

The response to Florenda Joy Dick's need began within minutes after we put Tuesday's Times to bed, and it is continuing at a brisk rate.

My hopes are strong now that the child of six, who has found willing rescuers, will be permitted to make the trip to Mayo Clinic as planned.

A few days ago, that prospect was dim indeed. Even though arrangements had been made in hope for her admission, her parents didn't know whether they could be carried out. David and Sadie Dick are sturdily independent; they have managed, sometimes under difficulties, to meet the ordinary needs of a young family by their own efforts.

As I told you earlier, it was not through them that this extraordianry need came to light.

Today, I would like to give you some idea of how people the Dicks have never met (a circumstance that surpirses them even though they have helped others when they could) are doing their best to fill that need.

★

A newspaper friend laid the first donation on my desk while Tuesday's presses were still rolling.

Before I left this office, two others had been added, and three readers had phoned their assurance that they intended to kick in for Florenda Joy.

That evening, Victoria Central Lions Club gave a most welcome roar.

Central Lions, one unit of an international organization that pioneered and successfully maintains a "blue baby" fund, has earmarked the take from a Saturday night Bingo for Florenda Joy.

(Place, Knights of Pythias Hall on Cormorant Street, and time, 7:30 p.m. tonight. This, subject to weather.)

Then came the jolly Shriners, whose splendidly maintained hospitals have enabled many crippled children to walk again. Victoria Gizeh Temple Shrine Club has volunteered to pick up the transportation tab for the trip to Rochester and return.

I can tell you also that a splendid contribution is coming in from a Victorian whose identity must remain undisclosed.

A solid foundation has been laid, and thanks to other groups and citizens of a city with a heart, the building goes on.

★

Laverne M. Sands of Sand's Mortuary Ltd. accompanies his personal donation with word that others will be accepted at the firm's three chapels, and that a radio-telephone equipped car will be placed at the disposal of daughter and mother for the trip to the airport.

From a jumble of notes on my desk, I can tell you that students of Colquitz Junior Secondary intend to help Florenda Joy with the proceeds of a sock hop set for Friday, Jan. 24, and that Gordon Head Secondary students are also putting in their licks.

At University of Victoria, the 30 members of Phrateres Club, an international sisterhood devoted to fellowship and service, has voted to hold a Feb. 13 raffle and tag in aid of the fund.

The youngest contributor — assisted by her parents — is 22-month-old "Cheryl." And here's one fresh-arrived on behalf of a spry first-grader, "Lori."

In the other direction, I know that some who have donated, or who plan to do so, will not see 70 again.

For your good letters, thank you on behalf of Florenda and her family.

The wish expressed, that this child may get her chance, is frequently backed by these words: "I am praying for her."

Home now to a delayed dinner, but first this reminder. Please send all Florenda Joy donations to the Bank of Nova Scotia, Douglas and Hillside branch. There, may it keep on growing!

HOW TO GET AHEAD in fish and wildlife branch was demonstrated Friday as sheepish George Ferguson and deer Donna Storry helped with move to new offices in Dogwood Building at Wharf and Fort. Wildlife offices had been at Fort and Bastion. Now all branches of Recreation and Conservation Department, except the provincial museum, are under one roof.

GUESSING GAME inspired by modern symbols extended this week to device on blouse and hat of Darlene Park. Is it a rifle sight? Is it a pool shark spotting the eight-ball? Workmen's Compensation Board says it's a pair of hands encompassing a human figure (an all-round guy?). It portrays the protection of the B.C. workingman and will appear in future on all WCB letters, equipment and posters.

PARTING SNOWFALL TONIGHT

The weatherman called it. He said Friday there will be "a bit of rain and a bit of snow" before a warming trend sets in early next week.

Overnight, Victoria had that bit of snow—1.7 inches in urban areas and two inches at Victoria Airport.

A rising temperature should melt most of it before it freezes again tonight.

Today's high temperature was expected to be 35 degrees (it was 36 Friday), dropping to 28 tonight in the city and going up to 35 again Sunday.

The outlook: a little unclear, some snow flurries, great amounts of snow NOT expected. Warming trend still expected at the beginning of the week.

City police reported eight accidents in three hours this morning and one constable commented that drivers are not being cautious and fail to realize there is ice under the snow.

Other area police reported few accidents and Colwood RCMP commented that "people are beginning to use their heads out here."

GIRL THROWN FROM CAR; 4 QUESTIONED

A juvenile girl believed thrown to the icy road from a moving car was found lying unconscious near the intersection of Douglas and Discovery Streets shortly after 8 a.m. today.

She was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital where she was examined and released.

Police are questioning four men in connection with the incident.

'Danger Flags Of Inflation'

Government spending, not citizen spending, is the cause of inflation in Canada, Progressive Conservative MP Robert Thompson said today.

The present Liberal government is expanding far too rapidly and several other taxation measures smack of "the Boston tea party and taxation without representation," he said.

The member for Red Deer, Alta., was addressing a seminar held by the Vancouver Island Progressive Conservative Association at the University of Victoria.

The former national leader of the Social Credit party who joined the Conservatives prior to the last election said Finance Minister Benson's social development tax is "one of the most unfair and unreasonable taxes" ever applied.

The cost of government is double what it was in 1963 and interest rates now are higher "then they have ever been in the history of Canada."

Mr. Thompson said the danger flags of inflation are flying and the Liberals cannot bring themselves to cut back on spending.

The proposed estate tax—not yet passed in the House—is "straight confiscation" and goes back to Marxist philosophy of capital.

In practice, the tax would mean all capital belongs to the state and not to the individuals who earn it. Capital would revert back to the state when a person died.

"If this is the policy of the government then I am well concerned," Mr. Thompson said.

WATCHING, WAITING

He also said Canada is in the second stage of Trudeaumania—a period of watching and waiting to see what the prime minister's policies are.

The section of the amended rules of parliamentary procedure, which was withdrawn would have "emasculated" Parliament and also would have been "a very fundamental restriction of the freedom of the press."

The controversial section would have permitted the government to set a time-limit on debate without consulting opposition parties.

Ask The Times

Q. Can you give me any information on John O'Dea, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association?—V.P.

A. John Roche O'Dea was born and educated in Newfoundland and named president of the Newfoundland Brewery Ltd., in 1963. He has been with the company since 1934. He has also served on the boards of several other companies. Mr. O'Dea was a member of the Newfoundland House of Assembly from 1959 to 1962. He lives at 21 King's Bridge Rd., St. John's Newfoundland.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

Our Own 'Lower Slobovia'

Victorians may get snow, but it's nothing compared to Saanich Peninsula's "polar belt."

And if anyone doubts there is such a belt let them talk to residents of the area where snow is still knee-deep long after the rest of the district is green again.

The cold spot is bounded roughly by Central Saanich Road on the east, West Saanich Road on the west, Elk Lake on the south and Keating Cross Road on the north.

It's the peninsula's "Lower Slobovia" in winter but the banana belt in summer.

"For the past three weeks snow has fallen at least once a day," said one resident. "When it rained in Victoria, it snowed here."

Freezing temperatures are not uncommon when it's mild in Victoria.

This is the area where the majority of greenhouse operators suffered heavy damage under the weight of the December snow.

The weather office confirmed that there is a significant change in temperature in the area, mainly because the region is hillier.

Passengers Praise Driver For Averting Crash Panic

Five persons injured in Friday's downtown truck-bus collision are still receiving treatment in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Among them is five-year-old Albert van Akker, of 550 Rithet, whose nose was broken when the B.C. Hydro bus and a Johnston Terminals' tractor-trailer slammed together at 8:30 a.m. in the Government-Humboldt intersection.

The accident sent 26 persons to Jubilee and St. Joseph's hospitals but 21, including bus driver William Calnan, 48, were released after treatment for minor injuries.

Admitted for treatment were, Joyce Barker, 48, of 415 Michigan, with a back injury; Margaret Barker, 71, of 260 Douglas, with injuries to both legs; Helen Trahan, 66, of 124 Government, with arm and chest injuries and Stella Donylyk, 50, of 143 Government, with a compound of the left leg.

Passengers praised driver Calnan for averting panic. Despite an injured leg and the shock of having the windshield shatter around him, Mr. Clanan moved quickly down the aisle directing people to the rear exit.

Police are urgently requesting witnesses to the accident to contact the traffic division which is investigating.

A spokesman said that in an accident where so many are injured, it is imperative that as many witnesses as possible are assembled to give a "good clear picture."

Most accounts have been from bus passengers, but at least two motorists on their way to work at the time have spoken with the police.

However, the spokesman added, unless more come forward, "we're kind of beat."

44,000 Seek Jobs in B.C.

Unemployment in British Columbia was 44,000 persons at the end of 1968, or 5.4 per cent of the labor force, Canada Manpower said today.

This compares with a rate of 6.3 per cent in B.C. in December, 1967.

Employment in B.C. increased by 43,000 jobs during the year, a growth of 5.9 per cent or nearly double the national rate.

University Troubles 'Within

'They've Got Crisis But Not Financial'

Premier Bennett today rejected any suggestion that troubles besetting universities in the province stem from lack of government financial aid.

"University of B.C. in this one year, is receiving more money from the B.C. government than in all the Liberal years (of government) put together," he said.

The premier, speaking in an interview from Vancouver following his return with Mrs. Bennett from an Arizona vacation, was replying to criticisms levelled by B.C. Liberal Leader Dr. Pat McGeer.

The premier said Social Credit "is very much education-minded." He cited the creation of University of Victoria and Simon Fraser University during his time in office and development of regional vocational schools and colleges.

"The trouble (at universities) is within, not without. It's not a question of money or governments, but of the universities themselves. They've got a crisis, but it's not financial." He did not elaborate.

(His statement was at odds with one issued by Dr. Kenneth Hare who has resigned as president of UBC as of Jan. 31. He said in Vancouver Tuesday, "My troubles did not lie within the university.

"The radicals had a go at me but they were not a factor."

(While refusing to be drawn into any criticism of the B.C. government, he said inadequate financial support for the university was behind his resignation.

("You've got to have the financial resources. If you haven't got them or any prospect of getting them, then you can't face the job.")

'Lost Respect' of Legislature

The premier was asked if there was implied criticism in the over-ruling by cabinet of Health Minister Ralph Loffmark who recently withdrew plans to issue a set of strict standards for municipal pollution control.

Jurisdiction for pollution control was plainly left with Lands and Forest Minister Ray Williston and the Pollution Control Board. Opposition critics said this action lost Mr. Loffmark the respect of the legislative assembly.

Premier Bennett said he had made it clear three years ago when opening an election campaign at Campbell River, that his government is dedicated to clean air, pure water and fertile soil.

"It's our number one policy." He said pollution control board jurisdiction of municipal actions was established under a cabinet committee of Mr. Williston, Mr. Loffmark and Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell.

The premier said this had not been changed and there was no criticism of Mr. Loffmark.

The Loffmark withdrawal of plans to firmly rule municipal anti-pollution schemes was just a result of "healthy discussion" at cabinet level.

"There was no difference of opinion."

The premier said the forthcoming session of the legislature will be the most constructive since Social Credit came into government in 1952.

Budget to Show Planning Results

"The people of British Columbia will see that experience counts. When the budget comes down they will see the benefits and effects of long-term planning."

The premier said he was seriously shocked by Prime Minister Trudeau's suggestion this week that it might be a good idea to have police files on reporters.

"We want nothing resembling a police state anywhere in Canada," he stated.

He was commenting on televised remarks by the prime minister who had ticked off reporters for "crummy behavior" when his social activities last week in London were covered in detail.

The prime minister had stated it might be a good idea to have police files on social activities of reporters. He added, perhaps police should investigate girls taken out by English-language reporters.

"Any reference by a head of any government that he is going to call in the RCMP, I think that's a very bad thing.

"It shouldn't be smoothed over lightly."

Premier Bennett said the private life of a government leader must be just as open to the public as his public life.

"Only in the Social Credit government can you talk to the premier as you are talking to him now." (He was contacted by telephone at Vancouver Hotel.)

"No bunch of front men are trying to hold you back either," the premier added.

The premier said his southern holiday had been quiet.

"I don't run around. The premier of British Columbia is not a swinger."

Stumpy Calls, Steve Carter Answers

Master Panhandler Calls Shot

By GEORGE COCHRANE

Stumpy the seagull is entering his 10th year as the master panhandler of the Johnson Street bridge.

The one-legged bird finds the men who operate the lift bridge easy touches.

John Kirkendale, a 22-year veteran on the bridge, first noticed the gull with the rollicking gait in January of 1960.

"Probably had his leg bitten off by a codfish," he said.

Then, as now, John, of 1153 Greenwood, was summoned by the inimitable call of a hungry gull.

●

Stumpy adopted a flat area outside the operator's cabin as his landing ground. He is intolerable to competition. He allows only one other gull, with a deformed foot, to share his food.

Winter conditions make landings difficult for the crippled bird. He resorts to belly-landings—usually out of control.

So after every snowfall, the men leave the warmth of their cabin to sweep his area clean.

Stumpy rewards them each time with another staggered landing.

And that loud, hungry call.

Firemen Remove Caps, Dynamite

CEDAR — Blasting caps and dynamite in a burning farm building had to be removed before firemen could go into action Friday night.

"The caps were what we worried about and we got them out first thing," said fire chief Bill Shaw. "The dynamite would have just burned."

The 16 firemen had the fire out in a short time.

After the blaze, 20-degree temperatures froze couplings on hoses carrying water uphill from the river.

The farm building on Aikenhead Road, near Nanaimo River, was owned by Herb Armishaw. The upper portion was gutted but milk storage equipment and stainless steel tanks were saved.

No estimate of damage was available Friday night and cause of the fire was not determined, said Mr. Shaw. An investigation was begun this morning.

DANGEROUS FLOODING EXPECTED

DUNCAN — Dangerous flood conditions can now be anticipated because of the heavy snowfall but necessary steps have been taken to prevent any flash floods, Alderman John Cannon said Thursday.

Mr. Cannon, a director on the Cowichan Valley Regional Board, said water level, rainfall and snowfall readings are now being taken at Lake Cowichan and Duncan as well as tidal heights at Cowichan Bay.

"The only weak link in this warning system is a daily check of the rate that Lake Cowichan rises," Mr. Cannon said.

He said the regional board will contact the forest service to request re-establishment of previous daily level checks.

REWARD OFFERED IN SWAN KILLING

DUNCAN — B.C. Wildlife Association today offered a $500 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of hunters who killed four young swans in North Cowichan during the Christmas season.

Game warden Jack Fox found the swans along with some shotgun shells, a pair of binoculars and a duck, on a Herd Road property.

Jack Fielden, president of Cowichan Fish and Game Association, announced the reward. He described the killing of the rare birds as "an act of wanton destruction spurred by ignorance, stupidity and lack of training."

Mr. Fielden outlined a program of hunter training which the association has proposed to the provincial government under which prospective hunters will be required to identify various types of game before being issued a licence.

The local association also sponsors a small bore rifle club which practises every Monday night at the old Eagle Hall range. Practices will be moved to a new rifle range on Vaux Road when the weather improves.

4H Club Worker, Leader Dies at 59

DUNCAN—Funeral services will be held at 1:30 p.m. Monday for Dorothy Winnifred Sibbald, 59, who died in Cowichan District Hospital on Friday.

Mrs. Sibbald was well known in the Cowichan Valley for her active participation in 4-H clubs and Duncan and Cowichan Lamb Club.

Born in Halifax, she completed her education at Esquimalt and married in Victoria in 1942 where she lived until 1947.

She had lived the last 21 years in Cobble Hill, where she worked with Duncan and Cowichan Lamb Club and was leader of Duncan 4-H Club for eight years.

She travelled east many times as a representative of B.C. purebred sheep breeders.

Mrs. Sibbald is survived by her husband, Hamish, and one son, Ronald Gordon, in Malton, Ont.

She also leaves her parents, Lt.-Col. and Mrs. G. Rycroft, and a brother, Max Rycroft, and sister, Mrs. C. Cant, all of Victoria.

Services will be held at Hirst Funeral Chapel conducted by Rev. C. R. Day. Cremation will follow.

Injunction Rejected

VANCOUVER (CP) — Heavy construction companies Friday were refused a British Columbia Supreme Court injunction which would have declared a teamsters' strike illegal and banned pickets.

Northern Construction Co. and J. W. Stewart Ltd., along with Canadian Comstock Co., had contended there might have been irregularities in the union's strike vote.

But the County Judge E. E. Hinkson, sitting as a local judge of B.C. Supreme Court, held that balloting was properly conducted. Strike against 18 firms in a pay dispute started Monday.

Shawnigan Loans Approved

SHAWNIGAN LAKE — National Housing Act loans were approved Friday for construction of student residences and administration building at Shawnigan Lake school for boys and Strathcona Lodge school for girls.

The 50-year loans total $1,690,000—all but $500,000 of which goes to the girls' school.

George Ferguson, bursar, said the loan will be used to replace Copman's House, a wooden frame building built in the thirties, which burned down in August, 1968.

Since then six mobile units have housed the 100 students.

Head mistress Mrs. C. C. Guthrie said the $1,190,000 loan for three new residences at Strathcona will accommodate 150 students. Provision is also being made for accommodating 10 students in an existing building.

A separate dining room administration and student lounge building will also be constructed.

A total of 200 students will be accommodated within two years, Mrs. Guthrie said. "We hope to have it operational by September. We've been working up a plan for the last year and can now move ahead much more quickly."

Old Shawnigan Lake Lodge must be demolished first. The former hotel, built in 1905, started as a school in 1927.

DEEPSEA SHIPS IN PORT

(All cargo is lumber unless otherwise stated. Place names are destination, not ports of registry.)

Victoria—Piha, U.S.; Achilles, Alaska; Amstelhof, China (grain).

Ladysmith — Yeikaku Maru, Japan.

Chemainus — Belisland, Australia.

Nanaimo—Maas Lloyd, South Africa.

Campbell River—Hosei Maru, Japan.

Port Alberni — Ostrogozhsk, Russia; J. V. Clyne, U.K.; Fernwind, U.S.; Brimanger, South America.

APPOINTED southern area logging manager of Crown Zellerbach's timber department is Gordon Naylor who will be based at the Ladysmith office. He will be responsible for Ladysmith, Nanaimo Lakes, Nitinat and Courtenay operations. He succeeds William Chalmers who retires at the end of this month.

RECEIVER APPOINTED

VANCOUVER (CP)—E. C. Dobell, president of Cerna Copper Mines, formerly Cowichan Copper, has put the company in the hands of a receiver, a spokesman said Friday.

Vancouver Stock Exchange delisted Cerna Friday for "failing to maintain listing requirements."

S. B. Fowlds has been appointed receiver for the company which operates the Sunro Mine near Jordan River.

False Pretences Net Jail Term

DUNCAN — Wilfred Philibert of Crofton was sentenced to a total of 80 days in Okalla prison farm in Burnaby Thursday after pleading guilty in magistrate's court to three separate charges of false pretences involving NSF cheques.

The charges are to run consecutively. The offences took place in Chemainus and restitution was ordered.

Mr. Philibert told court he was unemployed and separated from his wife and family.

Building Drop Is 'Sad State'

CAMPBELL RIVER — For the first time in many years Campbell River is having to take a back seat in construction growth.

Until the end of 1967 this town was the second fastest growing community in the province, but, in 1968, the value of building permits nose-dived more than 100 per cent.

Municipal figures show that $3,714,463 in building permits were issued in 1967 compared to $1,590,934 in 1968.

Mayor Skip McDonald said for the town, it is a sad state of affairs.

CREATED A LULL

"NHA money not being readily available has created a lull and we can't hope for more apartment construction as we're over supplied for the next year or two.

"We didn't have any school construction in '68 and that makes quite a difference," he added.

In the territory surrounding the city of Courtenay and this municipality, 226 private dwellings were built in 1967 and only 120 last year. Commercial construction in the same area plunged from $1,950,000 in 1967 to $259,000 in 1968.

Local accountant Bill Smith said he believed the 1967 surge could be attributed in part to Gold River and Sayward development.

"You have to consider that there was a lot of material moving through this town destined for these other areas in 1967 and that always effects business," he said.

Social Credit Won't Contest Byelection

NANAIMO (CP) — The Social Credit party decided Friday not to enter a candidate in the Feb. 10 federal byelection in Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands, in which T. C. Douglas, national NDP leader, is entered.

The party voted unanimously to allow members to cast their ballots independent of party lines.

Eric Winch, a former magistrate, is contesting the riding for the Liberals and the Progressive Conservatives have nominated Dr. Magnus Verbrugge.

The vacancy was created by the death last year of NDP MP Colin Cameron.

Lot of 'Hangups' Being Youngest MP

By ED GOULD
Times Duncan Bureau

DUNCAN—Being the youngest member in the House of Commons has plenty of hangups, says Lorne Nystrom, the 22-year-old New Democratic member for Yorkton-Melville.

"When I first went to the House I was just like Lincoln Alexander (Lib.—Hamilton), the first Negro member ever to sit in the House.

●

"The older members really put the pressure on us. Everything you say or do is subjected to careful scrutiny. They watched us to see how many mistakes we would make in procedure. It's just like living under glass."

Mr. Nystrom, who was interviewed this week while on a speaking tour to youth groups in the area, said the pressure has lifted a little now that "I have started to prove myself."

"A couple of old guys took me under their wings and gave me some good advice," he said. He did not say what the advice was but one adviser was NDP whip Stanley Knowles and the other was none other than former Conservative chief, John Diefenbaker.

"Probably because we both come from Saskatchewan," he admits. "He was very friendly for the first two weeks, after that he cooled off a bit. I think Mr. Diefenbaker has the image of himself as the elder statesman whose job it was to look after the green, young kids."

●

As much of his mail comes from the big cities as from his largely rural home riding. "Mostly students asking about student power and youth involvement in politics," he said. "And lots of letters from teenagers, for some reason."

Born on a farm 110 miles from Yorkton, the six-foot-three inch bachelor was born of a Swedish father and English mother ("she detested the day I decided to run but has got used to the idea now") and has no strong attachment for monarchy or commonwealth.

"I couldn't care less about the monarchy," he said. "It's an antiquated institution. Like the commonwealth, it has a tradition, cultural purpose. But I think Canada needs to withdraw from regional economic and political pacts and concentrate on a role in international government."

NYSTROM
. . . urges Biafran aid

Mr. Nystrom recently returned from a trip to Biafra where he visited a guerrilla training camp and other areas where Ibo tribesmen have entrenched themselves for a fight to the death against the Nigerians. "The Biafrans are sincerely convinced they will all be killed," he said.

●

Although it is "partially" a religious war between Moslems and Christian factions as well as other issues, "I have never seen such beautiful cooperation.

"When relief supplies arrive, it ceases to be Protestant, Catholic or Jewish—just food for starving people."

After his trip there in November with Ralph Stewart, the Liberal member from Cochrane, Ont., sponsored by B'nai B'rith, he was convinced between 6,000 and 9,000 persons a day—mostly children—were starving to death.

He said: "Britain could end the war there if she wanted to but she won't because Nigeria would no longer be the showpiece of British democracy in Africa; she's afraid of Balkanization of Africa; she wants the oil, and she's afraid if she steps out the Russians will come in even more than they already are, and the country will go Communist."

●

He has made the Biafran situation a personal crusade through aid to the Biafran Christmas Relief Fund and helping organize the shipment of 3,500 tons of foodstuff which was to have left Thursday for the breakaway African state.

"My biggest disappointment in coming back to Canada was Prime Minister Trudeau's interpretation of the situation, his refusal to take it to the United Nations, or even communicate with Biafran officials."

Every Woman May Now Quickly

Lift Her Face Out Of Winter Lines, Wrinkles and Aging Dryness

. . . thanks to the "European Discovery" CEF-600

Helps Every Complexion Regain and Retain The Younger Look by Immediately Counteracting Effects of Winter's Icy Grip

No matter if your skin is typed dry, normal or even oily . . . no matter whether you enjoy being outdoors or prefer indoor protection . . . both frigid arctic air and overheated dry rooms dehydrate, drain skin of water and deprive it of the necessary moisture that pushes skin up and out to keep it as smooth, firm and wrinkle-free as the day you were married. And now, during the social season, when you particularly want to look your youngest best, "old man winter" works overtime to dry out and make your skin on face and neck flabby, sagging, rough, chapped and weatherbeaten. You look and feel years older than your age. And your husband . . . it makes him feel older too!

Your Chance for a Quicker Winter Youth

Medical journals have acclaimed the "European Discovery" known scientifically as CEF-600 and now embodied as the active ingredient in the cosmetic-like lotion named "2ND DEBUT." Apply "2ND DEBUT" nightly before retiring and daily before make-up. Day and night, it is constantly carrying water into the skin . . . counteracting all the skin drying effects of outside cold and inside overheating that chaps, dries, wrinkles your skin and makes it sag.

How 2ND DEBUT Works Quickly

Once again skin is moisturized, fresh, dewey radiant. Once again those aging lines and wrinkles are pushed up and out. Once again skin on face and throat is smoother and years younger in appearance. No matter how weather beaten your complexion may be, a youth-like color glows from within. Your complexion seems to have been born beautiful. Only 2ND DEBUT can bring about this fantastic skin youthifying miracle . . . in spite of winter's drying action!

For Extra Dry Skin— Or Mi-Lady In A Hurry— 2ND DEBUT With Double Strength CEF 1200

New DOUBLE STRENGTH 2ND DEBUT contains CEF 1200 instead of CEF 600. It acts much faster to smooth and flatten skin made scaly by winter's icy grip . . . and it works quicker to push up and out the more deeply seated lines and wrinkles.

Important To Regular Users of 2ND DEBUT

Particularly in these winter months, in time will your skin revert to the lined and wrinkled condition it was, unless you keep using 2ND DEBUT day and night. Your skin is constantly exfoliating . . . old skin flakes off and away and new skin is constantly being born. In winter weather it is more important than ever that you keep applying 2ND DEBUT before retiring and before make-up if you want to retain your soft, smooth youthful looking complexion. Users of 2ND DEBUT with CEF 600 are urged to switch to 2ND DEBUT with CEF 1200 . . . double strength and to use it all winter long.

2nd Début with CEF 600 and CEF 1200

The Art of Children is Unique

By TED LINDBERG

One of the most indisputable and universal realms of art in the world is that of the drawing, painting and sculpture of children. It is impervious to critical analysis, a natural phenomenon which exists from the time a child has attained certain mental and motor responses, and remains abundant until forms of educational acculturation are implemented.

Lindberg

At this point, a relatively free form of expression is subordinated to what is thought to be the more practical needs of society, and if one day painstakingly reacquire the very innocence and assuredness of purpose he once possessed innately.

●

Even then, there is an essential readaptation to space, a necessary reorientation of the ego to the world, which takes place in adolescence and which makes whatever art the artist may have done as a child of quite different order, character and intention from his work as an adult.

Thus, the art of children is unique, remaining within its own borders, as anthropologically and psychologically stimulating as it is aesthetic. Those who live outside its reach indeed suffer a definite fear of deprivation, and we would all do well to now and again seize the opportunity to see it when an extensive showing is at hand.

Through Feb. 2, the Provincial Museum is exhibiting the fruits of nine years' labor by artist-teacher Robert Aller of Port Alberni, who has taken it upon himself to make available, for Indian children in particular, the stimuli and materials for graphic expression.

The activity has been maintained as primarily recreational, with a de-emphasis on instruction, so that the expression remains as uninhibited and non-commercial as possible. Aller has remained primarily interested in reaching Canadian Indian children in distant areas of British Columbia, Manitoba and Ontario.

●

Some parts of the program were sponsored by the department of Indian Affairs, others by several Indian communities, and a good many parts were volunteered by Mr. Aller himself.

The children involved ranged in age from 2 to 17, with the largest number, among early teen-age participants, working in mixed media, in two and three dimensions.

There was apparently no attempt made to suggest Indian subject matter or designs, though it naturally appears from time to time, especially in the work of the older children.

What is most important is that, however lacking in urban niceties, economic security or language skills, the kids are perfectly adequate when it comes to the visual arts.

●

If anything, and according to Pied Piper Aller, they come to art with a naturalness which is astonishing. In many cases, all he had to do was set up a work area, engage in a bit of dabbling himself, and the diminutive onlookers, gathering rapidly in number, were clamoring for paints, brushes and paper "to do their own thing". From then on, it was with great difficulty that he could manage a day off.

The rest is a long and rewarding history, and much of it reflected in the children's work and a photographic display accompanying the art.

Everywhere is demonstrated the sheer tactile and visual exuberance in the application of paint and formation of image, the very thing acquired so latently by the early modern painters who once thronged to the ethnological museums, suddenly affected by the art of Asia and Africa, marvelling in its freedom and evocative power.

●

With the exhibit at hand, the subject matter is as well refreshingly free of planes, guns, rockets and violence; more concerned with natural surroundings, people, universal symbols like sunbursts and pleasing abstract patterns.

There is really nothing particularly Indian in the quality of these paintings. One is struck mainly with the thought that these are very normal children who have been providetd with a temporary respite from the rigors of their particular lives, who will learn all too soon that they are Indians, and less likely ever to hope for the luxury of art in their lives and careers.

Make an attempt to see this show in the remaining days of this month: enjoy these things for themselves, without comparison or thought of meanings. This is the spirit in which they were created, and ought to be the spirit in which they are observed.

●

I am delighted to correct a statement which I made last week, when alluding to the apparent demise of Pandora's Box Gallery. The gallery still has its financial problems, but was closed, primarily because of the cold temperatures.

After some physical alterations, and a new tack in policy, a three-pronged endeavor: (1) high quality contemporary for those interested in such things; (2) decorator-traditional for better home-makers and gardeners; and (3) a small but highly selective offering of top Canadian masters, Group of Seven sketches and the likes, for well-heeled collectors.

●

The gallery will re-open Feb. 27 with a one-man show of sculpture by Tony Urquhart, to occur simultaneously with the National Gallery's Heart of London exhibition at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, also featuring Urquhart with many others.

Things are looking up, as the new year gets under way: next week starting Jan. 22, the Vancouver Art Gallery, for the second time in its history, will devote its entire capacity to New York 13, western Canada's biggest look at celebrities like Jasper Johns, Donald Judd, Elsworth Kelly, Roy Lichtenstein, Robert Morris, Barnett Newman, Kenneth Noland, Claes Oldenburg, Robert Rauschenberg, James Rosenquist, George Segal, Frank Stella and Andy Warhol.

Start raising your ferry fares, folks, it's still cheaper than a trip to New York.

His Classical Guitar Only Means of Support

By BERYL PROUDMAN

The demand for qualified guitar teachers far exceeds the supply so Marty Rosenberg who travels with a classical guitar as his only visible means of support need have no fear of lacking employment as long as he is willing to teach.

At 19, Marty has studied for six years with well-known Toronto teachers, Eli Kassner and Tony Braden, has passed his Grade VIII Royal Conservatory of Music examinations and studied theory extensively.

●

Determined to continue to play and study to improve his firmly-based qualifications, Mr. Rosenberg already has much to offer to advanced students who have been without the benefit of a qualified teacher for many frustrating years of self-teaching.

When asked to outline the method by which he teaches, the young guitarist explained that most teachers find themselves developing their own variation of a basic method originated by one of the great masters.

"Someone like Segovia," he explained, "passes his system on to his students who then pass it on to others. Each time the system is transmitted it loses a little of its original form and picks up modifications characteristic of the person passing it on.

●

Eager to see as much of Europe as he can, Marty Rosenberg is willing to stay in one place only as long as students need him.

"For one student I would stay six months," he says, "but for several I would have to stay for at least a year to give them the benefit of regular lessons."

While he believes that some folk and popular guitar music can be learned in groups, he also thinks that serious classical guitar students need individual tuition, for each has his own problems and moves at his own pace.

Though he realizes that many students could learn almost as much by studying the right books conscientiously, Marty knows that—human nature being what it is—few achieve the best results by teaching themselves.

"They need the discipline of an outside opinion and to measure up to someone who will not let them skip over the difficult parts."

Like so many students, Mr. Rosenberg, as a young boy, played around with a guitar, picking out tunes and discovering chords without knowing how to hold the instrument or the do's and don'ts of basic technique.

MARTY ROSENBURG
. . . much to offer

As an experienced "unlearner," he advises anyone who acquires a guitar to take at least a short course of lessons to set them on the right road to future proficiency.

While progress may seem slow when care is taken with details of technique and the correct hand positions, Mr. Rosenberg knows and affirms that without such a grounding a player must soon reach an impasse, a plateau from which he cannot advance without going back and correcting his faulty technique.

Moderately priced Japanese instruments sometimes sound better than guitars which cost four times as much. Only careful selection and a knowledge of what to look for will find the right instrument at the right price.

●

Still unable to conquer nervous tension completely, Marty Rosenberg enjoys playing in a group rather than as a solo performer.

The number of people, particularly young people, who turned out to hear Oscar Ghiglia play his classical guitar last week suggests that there is plenty of interest in the guitar in Victoria, more than enough to keep Marty Rosenberg here for a considerable time.

Sunday night, the session will be held in honor of "Bunk" McEwen. He has been around Victoria for a long time and has done a great deal to keep jazz alive in the city.

FINE PIANIST

A fine pianist, Bunk will be sitting in on two or three of the sets with members of the house quintet. I imagine that he will be in his usual fun-loving form and I am looking forward to seeing him again.

Doors open at 8—music at half past.

Maybe it is just as well that Victoria has few name acts visit its dance halls and arenas. It would appear that many cities are not allowing various groups to perform in civic facilities.

Saskatoon has closed its Centennial Auditorium to all groups "of the rock and roll variety" because of continuing vandalism. Of course, this couldn't happen in Victoria, could it???

ACID ACTS OUT

In Phoenix, the directors of the civic coliseum, who in early December declared The Doors "persona non grata," have announced that all "acid" or "underground" acts will be banned and all future performances will be taped, with the exception of circuses and ice shows.

This statement came after the officials laid charges of "lewd and obscene performance" against The Fraternity of Man. All this means is that the group risks being prosecuted if it again enters Arizona.

Next they will be banning the performance of Swan Lake.

Although their music is still as hard-driving as ever, The Doors may lose some of their box-office appeal with Morrison's image change.

He fancies himself a poet and isn't satisfied with singing any more. He would rather recite his works (especially excerpts from Celebration of the Lizard), and the audiences just won't buy it. They have appropriately named him The Ego King.

Morrison is one of the better singer poets of the past decade and people should pay more attention to the words of his songs.

But, when an audience pays to see and hear The Doors perform, they should not be subjected to an indifferent Morrison, who stands on stage and mockingly recites his fantasies.

I don't have very much to say about George Harrison's Wonderwall Music long play on the Beatles' Apple label. I think that's enough.

Speaking loosely of the Beatles, Northern Songs Ltd., in which they have controlling interest, has purchased one of the oldest publishing firms in England.

19TH ENTURY

Lawrence Wright Music has a catalogue of music that dates back to the early 19th century. This move, besides being sound business, allows the Beatles almost free access to a treasure chest of old ideas that they can use for their next album.

Noel Redding, who used to play lead guitar before joining Hendrix as bassist, has waxed an album on his own.

Featured with Redding in this spontaneous session are Mike Ratledge and Robert Wyatt of The Soft Machine, and members of another British group called The Move. According to the grapevine, Stevie Winwood and Chris Wood are also featured on this album.

GOODBYE ALBUM

Polydor has released the Goodbye album of The Cream. It should be in the stores in a week or two.

Wheels of Fire is now available as a single LP, as well as in the two record set.

It was in May of last year that CKLG-FM (99.3) became the first FM station in Canada to program underground material.

Terry David Mulligan was instrumental in getting The Moffatt Broadcasting Corporation to make the change to progressive music, and LG-FM has since maintained a very high standard of programming.

Take a listen to 99.3, and you will find it difficult to listen to the commercial AM stations with all their blab and chatter, and their restricted format.

When will the ordinary citizens of Greater Victoria learn that this city needs a complete centre for the arts, more than it needs a convention complex that will have little value other than being a big, empty eyesore on the side of the Empress?

Come on' speak up for a change—PROTEST, DEMONSTRATE, DO ANYTHING!!!

Africa Topic Of PTA Talk

Lyn Hagglund, third-year education student at the University of Victoria, will give an illustrated talk on Cross Roads Africa at a Willows PTA meeting Tuesday.

The meeting in the school auditorium will start at 8 p.m. and interested persons are welcome.

Miss Hagglund worked last summer at a work camp in Lesotha, formerly Basutoland, in a program dedicated to development of emerging African nations.

Farce Entitled For Pete's Sake

A three-night run, starting next Thursday, is being offered by St. Luke's Players as comedy relief to the dreary month of January.

The play is a three-act farce entitled For Pete's Sake. Its author is Leslie Sands.

A cast well experienced in this type of play is under the direction of Dorothea House.

The players are Betty Jeanpierre, Alec Hutchins, Harry Lukey, Jo Pepper, Dave Shearer, Jack McIlveen, Barbara Bawlf and Helen McWhinney.

Curtain time is 8.15 p.m.

Housing Starts Zero In On Annual Needs Goal

OTTAWA (CP) — A record 196,878 dwelling units were started in 1968, "outstripping actual annual needs," said Central Mortgage and Housing Corp.

The 1968 starts were 32,800 units or 20 per cent above 1967 and far surpassed the previous record of 166,565 starts established in 1965.

A CMHC news release described the 1968 total which includes single houses, apartment units, row housing and projects for the poor, elderly, handicapped, underprivileged and for students, as "a tremendous boost."

CMHC president H. W. Hignett described the figures as remarkable considering current interest rates.

"It represents the first step in reaching the target set by the Economic Council of Canada of an annual house production of 200,000 units by 1970," Mr. Hignett said. "For the first time we can say this target is within reach."

Apartment units accounted for more than half the 1968 total with 103,383 being started. This was 39.2 per cent more than in 1967.

CMHC didn't give a total for single houses alone but said starts of single houses and duplexes together numbered 85,453 units, an increase of 3.6 per cent over 1967.

Row housing units numbered 8,042, up 8.8 per cent.

CMHC said December dwelling starts reached a record level as well for the month.

Construction of 15,095 units began during December in urban centres compared with 8,761 in December, 1967.

Outlooks Clash From Fabled East

By G. S. KENT

Comments of two local investment men who came home recently from trips to the fabled East indicate the usual diversity on what to expect in the markets this year.

They returned within a few days of each other, having sampled opinion in Toronto and New York investment circles. But while one reports the feeling that recession is inevitable and the bears are out of the woods, the other said they're not and felt trading would simply become more selective, with greater numbers of Americans looking to Canadian equities for their performance qualities.

There was a definite bearish feeling among research men consulted by the one dealer, who said that in order for inflation to be further checked, Richard Nixon must tighten the lid on money.

To do it at the most politically acceptable time he would have to act immediately, it was felt.

Of course the federal reserve banks had already raised their discount rate, with the result that the cost of credit went up to borrowers in general. Interest rates would have to be hiked even further to discourage the American spending spree, the gloom merchants were saying.

The other man had a different story. He said the question raised in New York was "Why did the (Federal) Reserve put the discount rate up when there was no government pressure to do so?"

The answer, as his informants believed, is that the discount rate increase was imposed by Republican-minded bankers to reflect on the Johnson administration in its closing days.

By so doing they could expect some improvement in the domestic scene, for which Nixon could take the credit in the weeks to come.

"They were saying, 'Why should Nixon be saddled with this thing (making money tighter) when he had nothing to do with it?' "

Whether or not the interpretation is true, it provides an answer acceptable to some observers, and an interesting comment for market followers.

●

Dow Jones' Monday view of the markets was borne out as the week went by.

The Dow suggested the then heavy pall hanging over trading could be broken up with favorable news out of Paris, where Vietnam peace talks were stymied. When agreement to open talks did come, the market rebounded.

Further encouragement would be given with an announcement by South Vietnam that troops will be reduced. Such word could come before Nixon's inauguration Monday, DJ reported.

●

Meanwhile, the New York exchanges remain in "real trouble," despite the reduction of trading hours. It seems that catching up with the paper tide is an impossible goal, as brokers replace one backlog with another.

One of the Victoria dealers said he was told by a chief trader in New York that most employees in the financial streets are hourly-paid and "don't give a damn" whether they ever ctach up.

There is talk, he said, of limiting daily trading to an arbitrary volume—say 10 million shares—"and ring the gong when the figure is reached."

That, he brooded, could lead to all sorts of additional problems for the market place.

"It is an awesome mess and nobody's got the answers in the immediate future," he said.

But continued American interest in the Canadian market is seen, mostly because of the way Toronto has performed.

This could be a sustaining influence on Canadian market action, especially with the possibility that Nixon will extend the equalization tax beyond its normal expiry in the summer.

As for stock markets generally, a single watchword appears to be applicable to all—selectivity.

●

Like many a new issue these days, the initial offering of 200,000 common shares of DataTech Ltd. has been fully subscribed at $5.50 a share and secondary over-the-counter market opening next week is expected to ask $10 up.

Director Walter Large, whose brother Earl is president, said he was told in Toronto by the distributing investment dealer Gairdner and Co. there had been a good response to the offering as the firm had experienced on a new issue.

Just moved into new premises in Saanich, the data processing company seeks to expand its services with proceeds of the issue, and just how successful it will be may be judged about the end of May when the first six-month financial statement is expected.

BIG U.S. FUND FOREIGN-OWNED

NEW YORK (AP) — Rapidly becoming one of the larger real estate owners in the United States is a two-year-old mutual fund whose shares are sold only to foreigners.

"Money from the enterprise, called the United States Investment Fund, already has been used to buy more than $100 million of income properties, including buildings here and in Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Los Angeles and St. Louis.

Week after week the real estate pages of newspapers list additional purchases.

Operators of the fund estimate its total of U.S. real estate holdings will approach $160 million for 1968 and predict that 1969 purchases will average $30 million a month.

European money, fearful of devaluation, inflation and political upheaval, is partly responsible for the influx.

The fund is managed by Great American Securities and Research Corp., from offices in the Bahamas, where investors are free of real estate and capital gains taxes, but it operates in 50 countries.

The origin of the fund is almost as interesting as its growth. Keith Barish, a 25-year-old Miami financial whiz, founded the fund with the aid of several former members of the Kennedy administration.

BARISH TOP DOG

Barish now is president of the management company, called Gramco for short, and Rafael Navarro, a pre-Castro Cuban ambassador to the United Nations, presides over the sales company now spreading throughout the world.

Pierre Salinger, former Kennedy press secretary and one of the original investors in the operations, has severed some other business ties to open new territories from an office in Paris, where he will live for at least a year.

The fund, which has 7,000 shareholders, attributes much of its appeal to what it considers an almost foolproof hedge against inflation. American real estate, Barish says, offers a higher return than banks and less risk than stocks.

U.S. Postal Service Shake-Up Proposed

WASHINGTON (WP) — Sweeping changes in the U.S. postal service, designed to "solve our postal problems within the next five years" were proposed this week by Postmaster General W. Marvin Watson.

He recommended:

● That the giant postal system be turned over to a government corporation, in order to minimize political and congressional control of its operations.

● That the cost of first-class mail be raised from six to seven cents an ounce, but that air mail rates be eliminated.

● Construction of a network of highly mechanized "mail factories," to cost about $1 billion, in order to speed mail processing and reduce costs.

Watson described his package of proposals as "the only solution possible, for the postal service has become lost in a paper jungle, gradually being overwhelmed by both the mail and the archaic methods of handling it."

Watson urged that "for the first time politics be taken completely out of the post office."

Watson said the rise in first-class mail rates is necessary to wipe out the postal deficit, estimated this year at $271.3 million.

A Retirement Savings plan that has grown 173% speaks for itself

An adequate retirement income requires sound planning. The unit value of Canada Permanent's common stock REGISTERED RETIREMENT SAVINGS PLAN has grown 173% since its inception in March 1958. Its steady growth has encouraged hundreds of Canadians to contribute to this plan.
Contributions to Canada Permanent's plan are deductible on your 1968 income tax return. If you earn say $15,000, you could save nearly a thousand dollars.

Our plan will be of definite interest to you...
• if you are not covered by an employer's pension plan
• if you are covered but want to supplement your pension
• if you are self-employed

The coupon below will bring you a brochure with full details, a copy of the latest annual report, examples of tax savings and an application form.

Fireplace Becomes Pivot of Home

Where does one put a fireplace when planning a new home? An outside wall used to be the most logical place, but with today's trend towards great use of glass for entire walls, the fireplace has moved to interior walls. In this way, the home owner can have his cake and eat it, too, in that he has the "indoor-outdoor" feeling created by the glass during balmy weather, and the warm, snug shelter provided by a fire, when the weather is cold.

Shown here is a great idea, both for placement and fireplace design, by architect Don Harms, in his own home. Instead of just being a hole in the wall, the fireplace juts into the space between living and dining rooms. Over half of the fireplace stands free, including the round flue, so that the fireplace functions as a partition, with open space above to the low ceiling of the dining room.

Use of materials has great interest, too, in that there is no attempt to conceal the basic construction of the fireplace, made of poured concrete. Lines of the wooden forms and the small air pockets clearly show, the texture a nice contrast to the smooth plaster walls and ceiling.

A redwood cap, almost pagoda-like in its outline, supplants the traditional mantel. The surface has been rubbed to erode the soft portions of the redwood, leaving the hard grain in a handsome pattern.

Debutante List Stands at Seven

The names of seven young women who will be introduced to society when the United Services Institution of Vancouver Island holds its annual Services Ball in the Empress Hotel on Friday, February 7 were released by Institution officials this week.

A first-year arts student at the University of Victoria is among those who will be presented to the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. John R. Nicholson at the gala affair. She is Miss Janice Louisa Melville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Melville, 500 Transit Road.

The 18-year-old student will be sponsored by her father. Her escort will be Mr. Dean Sawyer.

Three of this year's students are currently studying at the Institute of Adult Studies. They are the Misses Judy van Heard, Wendy Marie Ratcliffe and Susan Hope Sinclair.

Miss van Heard is 17 and the daughter of Mrs. D. Sinclair, 302 Vancouver Street. She will be sponsored by Mr. Robert Baker and escorted by Mr. Patrick Henry.

The 20-year-old Miss Ratcliffe is the daughter of Mrs. L. R. Ratcliffe of Duncan. She will be sponsored by Mr. W. W. Sinclair and escorted by Mr. Paul Thomas.

Lt.-Col W. J. Mosedale will sponsor Miss Sinclair, who will be escorted by Mr. Kenneth Lineham. She is the 19-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. N. Sinclair, 1526 Oakcrest Drive.

Two of this year's debutantes are Grade 12 students at Oak Bay Senior Secondary School. They are Miss Jill Elizabeth Chudleigh and Miss Judith Mary Hutchison.

Miss Chudleigh is 17 and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Chudleigh, 209 Stonehewer Place. Mrs. (Capt.) Chudleigh will sponsor her daughter.

Miss Hutchison will be sponsored by her father. She is the 17-year-old daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John A. Hutchison, 3293 Henderson Road.

The seventh name to be released is that of Miss Evelyn Elizabeth-Ann Hammond, a 17-year-old Grade 12 student at St. Margaret's School. She is the daughter of Mrs. Frank Hammond, 934 Foul Bay Road, and the late Mr. Hammond. She will be sponsored by Cmdr. A. C. Wurtele and escorted by Officer Cadet William Herrod.

Victoria Secretaries To Choose Best Boss

Greater Victoria members of the National Secretaries Association (International) decided to hold a "Boss of the Year" contest when 30 members and guests met for a recent meeting in the Executive House.

Vice-president and program chairman, Mrs. Gloria McCleave will be in charge of contest arrangements. A trophy will be presented at a luncheon in April.

O. Glyn Jones, island division public relations manager for the B.C. Telephone Company, was a guest speaker.

The chartering of the local chapter will take place on Saturday, Jan. 25, at a ceremony, to be held at the Imperial Inn at 2:30 p.m. The new group will be sponsored by the Vancouver chapter.

Mrs. Joyce Mair will be installed as president. Also to be installed are: vice-president, Mrs. Gloria McCleave; recording secretary, Mrs. Bunny Mallon; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Mary Jo Read, and treasurer, Miss Joan Island.

Give Youth to Your Complexion

Good results in complexion beauty are being achieved with a tropical oil that has unique properties to bring youth and peaches-and-cream loveliness to the skin. It ends wrinkle dryness and gives the complexion dewy loveliness. Many druggists here have been able to obtain this oil of Olay. Use it daily as you would a powder base and note how the complexion soon takes on a milky look.

'FASCINATED' WITH EXPLOITS OF THE FUR TRADERS

New Zealander Becomes Authority on B.C.

By PAT DUFOUR

Gloria Strathern is a New Zealander. She's also blessed with those "itchy feet" which prompted so many of her countrymen to leave settled lives in Europe and seek their fortunes "down under". It's those "itchy feet" which brought her to Victoria last April.

If there's a main difference between Mrs. Strathern and other globe-trotters it's this; she also likes to cover a lot of ground in time, as well as geographical miles.

Attached to the University of Victoria, she is now working with Dr. Reg Roy, chairman of the university's social service research centre. Her assignment is the creation of a bibliography of British Columbia, dating from the time of the province's discovery to 1849.

Although many miles from her homeland, Mrs. Strathern feels that her work is a close link between the two countries.

"I've always liked to be involved in research and New Zealand's history, like British Columbia's, is cradled in the Pacific. As an example, both have a share in the lives of Captains Cook and Vancouver."

Mrs. Strathern also feels that the struggles of Dunedin, the district in the south of New Zealand where she lived for years, are parallel to B.C.'s in the early days.

"On a miniature scale, Dunedin faced the same challenges as B.C., being forced to build roads around mountains, and create a civilized society in an awesome locale."

Although on university staff, Mrs. Strathern spends most of her time at the provincial museum or archives, indexing from the time "the Spaniards first stubbed their toes on the land in the 1670s."

Most of the period in which Mrs. Strathern is involved is concerned with maritime exploration. She finds it anything but dull with its "characters" ranging from Spaniards, Russians, Canadian explorers from the east, to the Americans who came here via Oregon. She refuses to choose any favorites, although she admits that the fur traders were a remarkable breed, providing fascinating reading.

This is Gloria Strathern's third stop in Canada. She first worked at the University of Saskatchewan, and was book selector for the University of Toronto before she headed for the west coast.

Living history in reverse, she spent a year in England after she left New Zealand, researching for such organizations as the British Museum and the Colonial Office. Her present project is expected to take three years.

Since her arrival in Victoria, Mrs. Strathern has had little time to indulge in her two hobbies, music and theatre. She hopes to correct this and join local groups this coming fall.

For, fascinating though her wanderings into the past may be, she intends to avoid the risk of bypassing the present.

"It's important to get involved with people. Otherwise, you run the risk of becoming fossilized."

Gloria Strathern's current task of creating a bibliography of British Columbia is a job to her taste. "I'm extremely interested in the Colonial period and the times of the early settlers."—(Bill Halkett photo)

WHAT IS IT?

The CISV was conceived in 1946 by Dr. Doris Twitchell Allen, associate professor of pyschology at the University of Cincinnati. Children will attend from Germany, Costa Rica, Italy, Japan, Mexico, Norway, The Philippines, Sweden and the U.S. Two boys and two girls from each country with an adult chaperon.

WHY IS IT HELD?

The purpose of CISV is to better world understanding through the association of 11-year-olds from many nations. Through this contact with children of other races it is hoped they will learn that those speaking foreign languages are not strange people but basically like themselves with the same interests. The program will consist of games and sports, tours of local historic and tourist attractions, trips up-Island and to Vancouver.

WHERE and WHEN?

At Westerham School, 1765 Rockland Avenue, Victoria, July 12 to August 12, 1969.
